-The Watchman, as it recalls the many pleasant and profitable socials of last winter, throws itself back in its easy chair, thinks awhile, then gets up, clears its throat, and this follows:

Isn't it about time for our Methodist, Reformed, Presbyterian and Lutheran friends to inaugurate the season of church socials? They certainly were very much enjoyed by our people last season, and we have reason to believe were successful in a money point of view. We doubt not that as soon as again held the attendance will be large. The evenings are growing quite be large. The evenings are growing quite long, and in the way of innocent amusements Bellefonte has little to offer her people. An evening cannot be more pleasantly or profitably spent than in social gatherings, enlivened by tableaux and dislogues, music and recitations. We fear the charge often made is too true, that in our social intercourse there is too much formality and stiffness, or, to use a more common expression, our society is composformality and stiffness, or, to use a more common expression, our society is composed of too many "setts." Nothing would so effectually remedy this as meetings of the above kind. At least we hope they will be again tried. Undoubtedly they will be largely attended and, if nothing else should be gained, they will afford our young people, as well as others of a more advanced age, the opportunity of passing a pleasant time together between the hours of darkness and bed time.

Mr. Atwood is a good talker, and he exerted himself to abuse Democrats and Republi- Rev. cans alike. In our opinion the gentleman s pursuing a strange course, if he really desires to add to the present number who vote for the candidates of the party he represents. Perhaps he believes in "whom the Gods would destroy, they first make mad." He was so thoroughly in earnest that it was necessary to remove his coat and in the language of Gov. -This letter from Mr. James Wolfenden, of Lock Haven, appeared in the Amercan Railroad Journal, New York, on the 9th instant, and fully corroborates what we have always claimed for the ore found in the district named :

Editor American Railroad Journal; DEAR SIR: In your valuable contribu-tion of railway, mine and mill views of the 26th ult., I notice a statement that iron nanufacturers complain of a scarcity of manufacturers complain of a scarcity of good hematic ore in Pennsylvania, naming Centre county as having some fine specimens, but stating that they are not rich enough to warrant manufacturers in paying freight on them, and that the best magnetic ores used in Pennsylvania are now brought from Spain and Africa. As the assertion does not name the work or give figures, your readers are unable to form even an approximate estimate of the cost of handling the New Jersey magnetic and the Pennsylvania hematite ores, or of bringing them to this section. Judging by my observations I should say that the works were located by the "tow-path" rule, depending on wagon feeders from the mines to the railroads, which would cost not less than ten cents per ton for each mile; and the difference in wages in this country from those in the countries named must also be taken into account. The Central Pennsylvania hematite ores of Clinton, Centre, Clearfield and other counties have a hundred fold greater acreage of stratified mines than are now worked, but their developement is retarded by the good hematite ore in Pennsylvania, nan limestone, and in paying quantities, certainly fifty per cent. of iron in the blast fornace, and that too, of A 1 quality, for tin plate stamp iron or the finest wire, etc. And in Clearfield and adjoining counties ly feed several Cambria or Johnstown iron and steel works. What is needed are rail-road facilities—the ore is there.

What a blessing uch a spring would be to Lewistown.
