

Rail Roads.

BALD EAGLE VALLEY R. R.
Time Table in effect Nov. 19, '83.
WESTWARD.

Station	Exp. AM.	PM.
Leave Lock Haven	4 45	4 00
Flemington	4 48	4 04
Mill Hill	4 52	4 07
Beech Creek	5 01	4 21
Eagleville	5 04	4 26
Howard	5 18	4 36
Mount Eagle	5 18	4 45
Curtin	5 22	4 48
Milesburg	5 30	4 55
Bellefonte	5 40	5 05
Milesburg	5 50	5 15
Snow Shoe Int.	5 53	5 19
Unionville	6 02	5 28
Julian	6 12	5 38
Martha	6 22	5 48
Port Matilda	6 29	5 56
Hannab	6 37	6 18
Fowler	6 39	6 16
Hald Eagle	6 49	6 19
Vail	6 53	6 24
Arrive at Tyrone	7 05	6 35

EASTWARD.

Station	PM.	AM.
Leave Tyrone	7 30	8 20
East Tyrone	7 37	8 27
Vail	7 40	8 40
Hald Eagle	8 45	8 45
Fowler	7 54	8 56
Hannab	7 57	8 59
Port Matilda	8 05	9 09
Martha	8 13	9 17
Julian	8 23	9 26
Unionville	8 33	9 37
Snow Shoe Int.	8 42	9 47
Milesburg	8 45	9 50
Bellefonte	8 55	10 00
Milesburg	9 05	10 10
Curtin	9 15	10 19
Mount Eagle	9 19	10 23
Howard	9 26	10 32
Eagleville	9 36	10 42
Beech Creek	9 40	10 46
Mill Hill	9 52	10 58
Flemington	9 55	11 01
Arrive at Lock Haven	10 00	11 05

BELLEFONTE & SNOW SHOE R. R.
Time Table in effect Nov. 19, 1883.
Leaves Snow Shoe 4:13 a. m., arrives at Bellefonte 6:20 a. m.
Leaves Bellefonte 9:30 a. m., arrives at Snow Shoe at 11:04 a. m.
Leaves Snow Shoe 3:50 p. m., arrives at Bellefonte 5:35 p. m.
Leaves Bellefonte 8:10 p. m., arrives at Snow Shoe 10:40 p. m.
S. S. BLAIR, Gen. Sup't.

LEWISBURG & TYRONE R. R.
Time Table in effect Nov. 19, '83.
WESTWARD.

Station	Mixed.	AM.
Leave Scotia	12 15	5 00
Fairbrook	1 00	6 20
Penn'a Furnace	1 15	5 40
Hostler	1 28	6 50
Marengo	1 35	5 55
Loveville	1 38	6 00
Furnace Road	1 45	6 10
Warriors Mark	2 00	6 25
Pennington	2 12	6 40
Weston Mill L.	2 25	6 50
L. & T. Junction	2 31	6 55
Tyrone	2 35	6 58

EASTWARD.

Station	Mixed.	AM.
Leave Tyrone	4 00	9 20
L. & T. Junction	4 04	9 25
Weston Mill	4 14	9 35
Pennington	4 32	9 48
Warriors Mark	4 42	9 58
Furnace Road	4 57	10 12
Loveville	5 02	10 16
Marengo	5 07	10 22
Hostler	5 17	10 35
Penn'a Furnace	5 27	10 45
Fairbrook	5 47	11 03
Scotia	6 20	11 30

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
(Phila. & Erie Division.)—On and after Nov. 19, 1883.

WESTWARD.

ERIE MAIL

Leaves Philadelphia	11 20 p m
Harrisburg	4 20 a m
Williamsport	8 40 a m
Jersey Shore	9 09 a m
Lock Haven	9 40 a m
Renovo	10 55 a m
Arrives at Erie	7 35 p m

NIAGARA EXPRESS

Leaves Philadelphia	7 40 a m
Harrisburg	11 15 a m
Arr. at Williamsport	2 55 p m
Lock Haven	3 55 p m
Renovo	5 10 p m
Kane	9 03 p m

Passengers by this train arrive in Bellefonte at 5 05 p m.

FAST LINE

Leaves Philadelphia	11 10 a m
Harrisburg	3 25 p m
Williamsport	7 15 p m
Arr at Lock Haven	8 05 p m

EASTWARD.

LOCK HAVEN EXPRESS

Leaves Lock Haven	6 50 a m
Williamsport	7 55 a m
arr at Harrisburg	11 30 a m
Philadelphia	3 15 p m

DAY EXPRESS

Leaves Kane	6 00 a m
Renovo	10 05 a m
Lock Haven	11 15 a m
Williamsport	12 25 a m
arr at Harrisburg	3 43 p m
Philadelphia	7 25 p m

ERIE MAIL

Leaves Erie	1 55 p m
Renovo	10 27 p m
Lock Haven	11 20 p m
Williamsport	12 35 a m
arr at Harrisburg	4 08 a m
Philadelphia	7 50 a m

Erie Mail East and West connect at Erie with trains on L. S. & M. S. RR.; at Corry with B. P. & W. RR.; at Emporium with B. N. Y. & P. RR.; and at Driewood with A. V. RR. T. GUCKER, Gen'l Sup't.

C. U. HOFFER & CO.
1860. Established 1860.

ANNOUNCEMENT.
THE OLDEST AND MOST RELIABLE BUSINESS HOUSE IN BELLEFONTE.

In order to make room for our Spring Stock we are offering

IMMENSE BARGAINS IN DRY GOODS Boots and Shoes And Notions,

We have no shoddy or auction goods, but straight and honest goods.

We have constantly on hand a full supply of

PURE GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, QUEENSWARE, ETC.

Country Produce Constantly on hand and Solicited.

C. U. HOFFER & CO.
Allegheny Street, Bellefonte, Pa.

CANCER CURED.
No disease has so thoroughly baffled the skill of the medical profession as cancerous affections and as they have always been considered incurable, it has been thought disreputable to adopt their treatment as a specialty; and hence physicians have neglected their proper study. But of late years new and important discoveries have brought forth a course that now proves successful in any of its forms, with certainty, without the use of the knife or caustic plasters. We have a treatment that is comparatively mild. It is not poisonous, does not interfere with the healthy flesh, can be applied to any part of the body, even the tongue. We take nothing for our services until the cancer is cured. Address D. J. HULBERT, Eagleville, Centre Co., Pa.

C. U. HOFFER & CO.

The Recent Mine Horror.
Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 28.—Coroner Batten this morning commenced his investigation into the cause of the explosion on Wednesday morning at the West Leisenring mine, in which nine teen men were killed. Superintendent Tanern was present with counsel to represent the company, while R. H. Lindsey, Esq., examined the witnesses in the interest of prospective litigants. Morgan Richards, the fire boss, said he had not examined the mine for fire-damp since Monday morning but had been through it with a naked lamp on Tuesday. The air shaft had been covered up but was not so on Monday. Thomas Jenkins, the mining boss, said he has gone all through the mine on Tuesday with a naked lamp, but had not looked for fire-damp since the previous Thursday. He had not measured the air current for three weeks. He considered the shaft one of the most perfect he had ever seen. The air shaft he had been informed by the carpenters was completed but he had never notified the miners of the fact. Several miners testified that the fire boss had warned them on the 14th instant not to go through the trapdoor between Nos. 3 and 4, saying he would not do it for all the money in the world. Charles Conner, the mining boss at the Leith shaft, testified that the ventilation at Leisenring was ample, and that with some modifications he would consider it a model mine. Contributions for the benefit of the families of the sufferers are coming in. Hans Clendenning and several others testified that the top air-shaft was closed at night and that the air of the mine was bad, and that proper precautions had not been taken. They were flatly contradicted by George Hansel and other employes. Mine Inspectors Steiner and Thomas Parker and Wilson Rosser, mining experts, testified that gas had undoubtedly accumulated in the vacant rooms, and that if the mine had been inspected on Wednesday morning before the men went to work there would have been no explosion. All agreed, however, that there was a possibility that there had been a fall of the roof and that gas had accumulated suddenly. Gen'l Superintendent Taggart testified that to the best of his knowledge every precaution to insure the safety of the miners had been adopted. He thought the fact that during Tuesday night the men had gone into the vacant rooms with bare lamps sufficient proof that there had been a fall of the roof and a sudden generation of gas that could only have been guarded against by inspecting the mine every morning before work commenced. As the presence of gas was not suspected in the mine this had not been done, and it was not done in any other mine similarly circumstanced. William Conneby testified that he had noticed the presence of gas several times, and had lighted it. He notified the mine boss about it. The jury retired at 8 o'clock, and at 11:45 brought in a verdict censuring the company for not having the mine examined daily for fire-damp, and the Mine Inspector for not having inspected the mine. Suits will be immediately instituted against the company by the relatives of those killed.

Another Strike Probably.
PITTSBURGH, February 28.—In accordance with a rule established some time since all lodges of the Amalgamated association have reported to headquarters, in this city, what rate of wages they favor being demanded during the year beginning June 1 next. It was to-day learned from a reliable source that the reports are uniformly in favor of no change in the present rate of $4.50 to $5 for puddling when bar iron sells for two and one-half cents per pound. The reports recommend that the conference committee be empowered to accept a reduction of ten per cent. in behalf of the workmen rather than to order a strike. The manufacturers have not met as yet, but individuals declare that the manufacturers will be content with nothing less than twenty per cent. reduction. The workmen say that if this determination is adhered to there will be a strike.

A Substitute for the Morrison Bill
WASHINGTON, February 28.—At a meeting of eight democratic members of the ways and means committee, it was unanimously agreed to report a substitute for the Morrison tariff bill. The substitute is identical with the bill introduced by Mr. Morrison, except that the free list is confined to salt, coal and lumber. Other articles on the free list as prepared by Mr. Morrison will come under a provision providing for a twenty per cent horizontal reduction. The democratic members of the substitute will be presented at an early date.

The Recent Mine Horror.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Lawlessness in Arkansas.
HOT SPRINGS, Ark., February 27.—The condition of affairs here is most deplorable. Doran, Pruitt, Landing and Allison, who were committed without bail, for murder on the street on the 9th instant, were taken to the penitentiary at Little Rock to-day, and were tendered an ovation by a number of citizens before their departure. The feeling of bitterness and its intensity cannot be described. The Committee of Fourteen, some of whom are citizens and some not, virtually control the town. The laws are practically suspended, and the committee have things in their own hands. They are controlled in a great measure by a man known here as Charles Watson, but whose real name is Charles Fouk, who is under indictment at Carlisle, Pa., for murder, arson and burglary. Fouk furnishes to the committee the name of objectionable persons, who invariably are men who are witnesses against Doran and his accomplices. It was rumored this afternoon that M. C. Harris, editor of the Horseshoe, who has denounced the murderers and the action of the committee, would be notified to leave the city in the morning. Mr. Harris expresses contempt for the whole party, and continues to publish the facts in regard to the assassination. About twenty additional men were compelled to leave the city to-day by order of the committee at the point of the bayonet. Everyone forced to leave was a material witness against Doran and his accomplices in the bloody work of the 9th.

A Great Editor Gone.
Thomas Kinsella, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, who died yesterday, accomplished what no man in Brooklyn ever did before. He made a strong, vigorous and influential newspaper in spite of its proximity to New York. He was able to do this because of his boldness and independence. He understood the value of local news in a crowded community and he reversed the rule by dictating to politicians

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Lawlessness in Arkansas.
HOT SPRINGS, Ark., February 27.—The condition of affairs here is most deplorable. Doran, Pruitt, Landing and Allison, who were committed without bail, for murder on the street on the 9th instant, were taken to the penitentiary at Little Rock to-day, and were tendered an ovation by a number of citizens before their departure. The feeling of bitterness and its intensity cannot be described. The Committee of Fourteen, some of whom are citizens and some not, virtually control the town. The laws are practically suspended, and the committee have things in their own hands. They are controlled in a great measure by a man known here as Charles Watson, but whose real name is Charles Fouk, who is under indictment at Carlisle, Pa., for murder, arson and burglary. Fouk furnishes to the committee the name of objectionable persons, who invariably are men who are witnesses against Doran and his accomplices. It was rumored this afternoon that M. C. Harris, editor of the Horseshoe, who has denounced the murderers and the action of the committee, would be notified to leave the city in the morning. Mr. Harris expresses contempt for the whole party, and continues to publish the facts in regard to the assassination. About twenty additional men were compelled to leave the city to-day by order of the committee at the point of the bayonet. Everyone forced to leave was a material witness against Doran and his accomplices in the bloody work of the 9th.

A Great Editor Gone.
Thomas Kinsella, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, who died yesterday, accomplished what no man in Brooklyn ever did before. He made a strong, vigorous and influential newspaper in spite of its proximity to New York. He was able to do this because of his boldness and independence. He understood the value of local news in a crowded community and he reversed the rule by dictating to politicians

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second time one of the party in the boat shipped his oars in a noisy manner, when something arose from the water only a yard from their boat. It looked like a long, black and thick neck, with a head just about as large as a powder keg. Whether it had eyes as big as a saucer, or a mouth as broad as a handbox, or teeth like butchers' skewers, or tufts of hair on the back of his neck, the three scared boatmen could not declare to a reporter who found them at their homes on Friday. Mr. Poillon, however, exhibited an oar, the blade of which was crushed in half lengthwise. This, it was declared, was done by the marine monster whipping its head around suddenly and biting the oar, when one of the party attempted to hit it on the head with that implement. All of them agreed that the crunching of the oar between the teeth of the serpent was positively heard by them, and more positively realized in the effect on their nerves. The monster then dropped its head into the water, and, with an undulating motion, it speedily vanished. They believed it to be about twenty-five feet long, and regret very much that the approach of darkness prevented them from capturing it. Messrs. Fisher and Poillon, when accused by their neighbors of inventing the above story, went before a local Justice of the Peace, it is said, and made affidavit to the facts substantially as given above.—Philadelphia Record.

Another Sea Serpent.
There was excitement in Eltingville, Staten Island, on Friday, says the New York Sun of yesterday, caused by the report that Constable Elbert L. Poillon, of that village, had actually seen and been attacked by a sea serpent. John Fisher, a resident of the same village, who is an oyster planter and a grower, partially corroborated Poillon's story. Poillon, his son, and Fisher were standing on the beach of the lower bay on Thursday afternoon, when they discovered what to them appeared to be a large log or spar, which was apparently floating with the tide and coming from the direction of the Quarantine Islands. Fisher first took a boat and started out to see what the thing was. After he had got near it Poillon and the boy noticed that he hastily pulled back to the beach, using quick strokes. When he reached the shore, however, he asked the other two to accompany him back to take a look at the thing in the water. He then thought it must be a monster fish-black shark. The sun had gone down, and it was growing dark when the three again overtook the strange object, which by that time, had gone further away, moving faster than the tide would carry it. On coming up with the object a second