Cleveland Notified.

DISTINGUISHED DEMOCRATS IN THE CITY OF ALBANY.

ALBANY N. Y., July 19.—The committee appointed to formally notify Gov. Cleveland of his nomination for President met at 10 a. m., Colonel Vilas presiding, and arrangements for the notification were made, it being decided that the committee should visit the Governor at 3 p. m. The rain, which had ceased at noon time, set in again at about 2 o'clock. Despite the weather Pearl street and Broadway were lined with people standing under the shelter of umbrellas. About the headquarters of the Phalanx, at 56 State street the crowd was the greatest. At a little before 3 o'clock the Phalanx formed on State street, 120 strong. They were attired in dark suits, high white hats and carried canes. Preceded by the Albany City band they marched through State street into Broadway and to the Delaware House, where the throng was so great that the streets and sidewalks were almost impassable. There carriages to the number of forty, were provided for the distinguished gentlemen composing the committee. At about 3:45 o'clock the procession got under way, headed by the band. The Phalanx marched up Broadway, followed by the committee in carriages. The procession passed through several streets to the Governor's residence, which was reached about 4 o'clock. An immense concourse of people assembled about the executive mansion and police were stationed about to prevent injurious trespass upon the grounds surrounding the residence.

Among those who were present besides the members of the two committees, were Judge Abbott and E. P. Pillsbury, of Boston; Wilson S. Bissell, of Buffalo (Governor Cleveland's former law partner); Chas. W. McCune, of Buffalo; ex-Speaker Samuel J. Randall, of Philadelphia; Speaker Carlisle, Congressman Dorsheimer, Lester B. Faulkner, of Livingston; ex-Mayor Edward Murphy, of Troy; Adjutant General Farnsworth, Private Secretary Lamont and the following ladies: Mrs. W. E. Hoyt and Miss R. E. Cleveland, sisters of the Governor; the Misses Mary and Carrie Hastings, daughters of the Governor's sister, who is a missionary, now in Ceylon, the daughters having been born there, and being in America to be educated; Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont, wife of the Governor's private secretary and Mrs. Farnsworth, wife of the Adjutant General.

The guests were prompt on arriving and when the members of the two committees were provided for there was very little extra space. The ceremony took place in the large handsome main parlor of the mansion. The only attempt at adornment was seen in the huge bank of flowers which crested up on the mantles of the parlor and library. The ceremony was brief, but exceedingly impressive. The arrival of committees in a body was the signal for concentration in the main parlor. There the committee of notification took positions on the south end of the room and the members of the National committee on the north. A space was reserved in the centre and as soon as the preparations were completed the Governor entered through the hall way, standing with his back to the flower-banked mantle.

The ladies of the party stood near the Governor at his left. His appearance at the doorway was the signal for a hearty and spontaneous outburst of handclapping which continued for several minutes. As soon as this had subsided, Colonel W. F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, chairman of the late Democratic National convention and of the notification committee, stepped slightly forward and addressing the Governor in a clear resonant tone and with marked enthuasm, said:

"Gov. Cleveland, Governor of the State of New York. These gentlemen, my associates here present, whose voice I am honored with authority to utter, were a committee appointed by the National Democratic Convention recently assembled in Chicago, and charged with the grateful duty of acquainting you officially, and in that solemn and ceremonious manner which the dignity and importance of the communication demanded, with the interesting result of its deliberations, already known to you through the ordinary channels of news."

"Sir, that august body convened by direct delegation from the Democratic people of the several States and territories of the Republic, and deliberating under the witness of the greatest assembly of freemen ever gathered to such a conference in forethought of the election which the constitution imposes upon them to make during the current year have nominated you to the people of these United States to be their President for the ensuing term of that great office, and with grave considerations of its exalted responsibilities have invoked their suffrages to invest you with its functions. Through this committee the convention's high requirement is delivered that you may accept that candidacy. This choice carries with it profound personal respect and admiration but it has been in no manner the fruit of those sentiments. The National Democracy seeks a President not in compliment for who the man is, or reward for what he has done, but in a just expectation of what he will accomplish as the true servant of a free people, fit for their lofty trust. Always of momentous consequence, they conceive the public exigency to be now of transcendent importance, that a laborious reform in the administration as well as legislation is imperatively necessary to the prosperity and honor of the republic, and a competent chief magistrate must be of unusual temper and power. They have observed with attention your execution of the public trusts you have held, especially of that with which you are now so honorably invested. They place their reliance for the usefulness of the service they expect to exact for the benefit of the nation upon the evidence derived from the service you have performed for the State of New York. They invite the electors to such proof of character and competence to justify their confidence that in the Nation, as heretofore in the State, the public business will be administered with commensurate intelligence and ability, with single-hearted honesty and fidelity and with resolute and daring fearlessness which no faction, no combination, no power of wealth no mistaken clamor can dismay or qualify. In the spirit of the wisdom and invoking the benediction of the Divine Creator of Men, we challenge from the sovereignty of this nation. His words in commendation and ratification of our choice. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." In further fulfillment of our duty the secretary will present the written communication signed by the committee."

Colonel Vilas was several times interrupted by applause. At the close of his remarks Mr. Nicholas M. Prince, of Missouri, secretary of the committee, read the following formal address prepared by the committee:

NEW YORK CITY, July 28, 1884.—To the Hon. Grover Cleveland of New York—Sir: In accordance with a custom befitting the nature of the communication the undersigned, representing the several States and Territories of the Union, were appointed a committee by the national Democratic convention which assembled at Chicago on the 8th day of the current month to perform the pleasing office, which by this means we have the honor to execute, of informing you your nomination as the candidate of the Democratic party in the ensuing election for the office of President of the United States and the declaration of the principles upon which the Democracy go before the people with a hope of establishing and maintaining them in the government, and an engrossed copy thereof is submitted in connection with this communication for your consideration. We trust the approval of your judgment will follow an examination of this expression of opinion and policy, and upon the political controversy now made up, we invite your acceptance of the exalted leadership to which you have been chosen. The election of a President is an event of the utmost importance to the people of America; their prosperity, growth, happiness, peace, and liberty, even may depend upon its wise ordering. Your unanimous nomination is proof that the Democracy believe your election will most contribute to secure those great objects. We assure you that in the anxious responsibilities you must assume as a candidate you will have the steadfast and cordial support of the friends of the cause you will represent, and in the execution of the duties of the high office which we confidently expect the wisdom of the Nation will confer upon you you may securely rely for approval upon the patriotism, honor and intelligence of this free people; we have the honor to be with great respect."

The address is signed by W. F. Vilas of Wisconsin, president; Nicholas M. Prince, of Missouri, secretary, and by forty six members of the committee, representing thirty eight States and eight Territories.

Governor Cleveland, who had stood meanwhile an attentive listener, replied as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: Your formal announcement does not, of course, convey to me the first information of the convention lately held by the Democracy of the nation, and yet, when, as I listen to your message and see about me representatives from all parts of the land of the great party which, claiming to be the party of the people, asks them to entrust to it the administration of their government and when I consider under the influence of the stern realities which the present surroundings create, that I have been chosen to represent the plans, purposes and policy of of the Democratic party, I am profoundly impressed by the solemnity of the occasion and by the responsibility of my position. Though I gratefully appreciate it, I do not at this moment congratulate myself upon the distinguished honor which has been conferred upon me, because my mind is full of anxious desire to perform well the part which has been assigned to me. Nor do I at this moment forget that the rights and interests of more than 50,000,000 of my fellow-citizens are involved in an effort to gain Democratic supremacy. This reflection presents to my mind the consideration which more than all others give to the action of my party in convention assembled its most sober and serious aspect. The party and its representatives which ask to be entrusted at the hands of the people with the keeping of what concerns their welfare and their safety should only ask it with the full appreciation of the sacredness of the trust and with a firm resolve to administer it faithfully and well.

"I am a Democrat because I believe that this truth lies at the foundation of true Democracy. I have kept the faith because I believe it rightly and fairly administered and applied, Democratic doctrines and measures will insure the happiness, contentment and prosperity of the people. If in the contest upon which we now enter, we steadfastly hold to the underlying principles of our party creed and at all times keep in view the people's good, we shall be strong because we are true to ourselves and because the plain and independent voters of the land will seek by their suffrages to compass their release from party tyranny, where there should be devotion to the people's interest. These thoughts lend a consecration to our cause and we go forth not merely to gain a partisan advantage, but pledged to give to those who trust us the utmost benefit of an honest administration of National affairs. No higher purpose or motive can stimulate to supreme effort or urge us to continuous and earnest labor and effective party organization. Let us not fail in this, and we may confidently hope to reap the full reward of patriotic services well performed. I have thus called to mind some simple truths, and I trust that they are to me as they are to you, dear and precious. I shall soon, I hope signify in the usual formal manner my acceptance of the nomination which has been tendered me. In the meantime I gladly greet you all as co-workers in a noble cause."

The Governor spoke extemporaneously and not without evidence of deep earnestness and feeling. He seemed to realize the weight of responsibility which rested upon his shoulders as the standard bearer of the party. The address was not only a model one in thought, but was delivered with rare grace and effect.

The congratulations that were showered upon him by the many distinguished leaders of the party at the close were sincere and hearty. After some time spent in social interchanges, the doors of the dining-room were swung open and refreshments partaken of. An informal reception was held at the Fort Orange club on Washington street late in the afternoon.

MR. TILDEN'S LETTER.

The following telegram was read from ex-Governor Tilden:
GREYSTONE, YORKERS, N. Y., July 29.—To Martin Delahaly, Esq., President of the Democratic Phalanx: I received last evening your invitation to attend the meeting to be held this evening under the auspices of the Albany Democratic Phalanx, for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of Cleveland and Hendricks. Although I cannot be present in person with my old friends in Albany on that interesting occasion, I cordially co-operate with them in the support of the excellent ticket nominated by the Democratic National Convention, and feel assured that in its success at the election, of which there is every promise, the country will achieve a substantial victory for the cause of good government. S. J. TILDEN.

Greely Relief Fleet.

PORTLAND, N. H., August 1.—At just about sunrise this morning the United States steamer Alliance, which had been stationed outside the harbor in expectancy of the earlier arrival of the Arctic fleet that had been generally anticipated, discern a double line of smoke, and steaming out soon became aware of the arrival of the Greely Arctic Relief Expedition. The armament of the Alliance was brought into action, and gun after gun rang out thundering peals of welcome, to which the cannon of Greely responded with grateful roars of recognition. Shortly the Alliance came within hailing distance of the approaching steamers, and with bells ringing and whistles screeching the Alliance hailed the Bear and Thetis.

Shortly after sunrise the Bear, Thetis and Alliance steamed to a point off the Isle of Shoals, where the first stage of the homeward voyage of the Greely Relief Expedition was finished. Gracefully they came into the harbor, with yards squared and the stacks pouring forth clouds of smoke, fully twenty-four hours before the fleet had been expected to arrive. There was little about the three vessels to denote the severe experience which two of them had passed through. When it became known that the Arctic squadron had arrived outside of the harbor the excitement on board the men of war lying at anchor was intense.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the welcome news of the safe arrival of the Greely spread through the city, and when the Bear and Thetis had arrived off New Castle Secretary Chandler dispatched a steam launch to Commander Schley, with orders that the Bear and Thetis should remain in the offing until the preparations for their reception should be completed. The Secretary of the Navy then proceeded to the Tallapoosa, and orders were at once issued for the entire squadron of war vessels in the harbor to prepare for the reception of the Arctic heroes. All the naval vessels were decorated with American flags at their topmasts.

At noon the press boat, the Government tug Leyden, steamed down the river with numerous press representatives aboard, and came to anchor where a good view of the ceremonies might be obtained. As the Leyden steamed down the river the men on board the naval veteran Constitution, whose name is a synonym of former naval victories, ascended the shrouds, and, with lifted hats, uttered a cordial salute. The other vessels in the lower harbor were decked out in their gayest colors, the flagship Tennessee displaying the Acting Admiral's broad pennant at the mizzenmast, and the Tallapoosa flying the colors of the Secretary of the Navy, four stars and an anchor on a blue ground. They soon got under way and plowed down the river. At noon the preparations for the reception of the Arctic fleet were completed. Mrs. Lieutenant Greely arrived at noon with General Hazen and party. Lieutenant Greely's mother is also here.

Campaign Biographies.

For the information of the public and the party, as text books for campaign speakers and as works of reference for journalists, reliable and complete campaign biographies are indispensable. The market is flooded with trash, made to sell and the very promptness with which some of it is made ready for sale, is indisputable evidence of its worthlessness.

Very different from the ways of ordinary bookmaking are those of Hubbard Bros., the famous publishing house of Philadelphia, who announce the early publication of the lives of the Democratic candidates, together with sketches of all the former presidents and much tabular information of interest and value.

The statistical and historical part of the volume has been prepared with great care by editors chosen for their accuracy and fairness, and their compilation is invaluable to the students of American politics.

The sketch of Cleveland, which comprises about 200 pages of the book, will be written by Hon. William Dorsheimer late Lieut-Governor of New York, and now a member of Congress from that State. He was long a fellow citizen and professional associate of Mr. Cleveland in Buffalo; his personal relations with the Governor and his extended acquaintance with the scenes and associations of his earlier political experience give Mr. Dorsheimer special advantages for the work. His scholarship and experience as a biographer, his literary acquirements and general culture, are the best guarantee of the merits of the work.

The life of Hendricks, for the Hubbard book has been written by W. U. Hensel, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Pennsylvania, one of the editors of the Lancaster Daily Intelligencer and of The Post. Mr. Hensel is a politician of experience and a journalist of ten years active service, in which vocations he has had opportunities to fit him for the task of political biography. Immediately after the Chicago convention he applied himself to the preparation of material for his book visiting Indianapolis, the home of Gov. Hendricks, and by industrious and energetic efforts, collecting the fullest history of his life and public services.

All of these features, combined in one volume, will comprise a work that is invaluable for the campaign to those who want to be posted upon its issues, and yet will be well worthy a permanent place in the library.

The Cattle Plague.

HARRISBURG, Pa., August 1.—Secretary Edge of the State Board of Agriculture, and special agent of the Governor for the suppression of contagious cattle diseases in the State, was interviewed by the Patriot upon the disease now prevalent. He says: "The excitement occasioned is foolish from the fact that the Texan or Southern animal may communicate the diseases to any and every Northern and Western animal which in any manner comes in contact with any excrement from his body, but the Northern or Western animal, though nearly dead himself, cannot communicate the disease to other animals, and that there is no danger to any animal which does not come in actual contact with the poison left by the Texan." He says there is now an outbreak in this State, but not sufficient to cause alarm. The disease in this State is at present principally confined to Lancaster and York counties. Aside from the limited use of a wild tonic, he says no treatment would be of benefit.

CHICAGO, Ill., August 1.—Health Commissioner DeWolf declares that so far as the present state of things is concerned the danger from Texas fever is over. "Of
