Sulky Stalwarts.

THE REAL OBJECT OF BLAINE'S VISIT TO NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, September 18.—The principal object of James G. Blaine visiting this city is for the purpose of making arrangements which will bring the Republican machine bosses in this city in line. The Republican organization in this city is in control of men who have always been classed as out-and-out Stalwarts. John J. O'Brien is chairman of the County Committee, and in nineteen out of the twenty-four districts his friends have absolute control of all the machinery. In the Republican National Convention O'Brien and his friends voted to the last for Arthur, while Anson G. McCook, Secretary of the United States Senate, was the only delegate in the city delegation who voted for Blaine. Between McCook and the O'Brienites there has been war for years, the former making repeated efforts to turn what was known as the machine out of power. The last effort of this kind was made last winter, but only resulted in the O'Brienites again coming out on top as formerly. The product of this fight is an intensely bitter feeling on the part of O'Brien and his friends against McCook and all that he represents. Before and at the Republican National Convention repeated efforts were made to induce the O'Brien delegates to leave Arthur and vote for Blaine. All requests of this nature were met with prompt and emphatic noes. The O'Brienites in substance told Blaine's friends they would vote for him under no circumstances. They said that they proposed to vote for the nomination of some man who, if elected, would recognize them in

THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE FEDERAL PATRONAGE.

In 1880 they had been induced against their better judgment to turn in and work for Garfield on the promise that if he was elected Conkling and the Stalwarts in New York would be properly recognized, that that promise had been deliberately broken and, as they believed, through the trickery of Blaine, and as a consequence they had nothing for the last four years. They therefore under no circumstances would vote for Blaine, and he was the very last man in the party whom they would like to see nominated. Since the Republican National Convention the position of the O'Brienites and all the machine men in the city has not changed. They came back from the convention firm in the belief that Blaine's election meant their overthrow. This attitude of the machine men in this city was well known to the Blaine bosses. It was the first thing that commanded their attention after the organization of the Republican National Committee. Overtures were immediately made to the O'Brienites and the Blaine men thought that they could settle the difficulty without much trouble. It is said they made promises of all kinds agreeing to give the Stalwart machine men anything they wanted, but their promises were met by the question: "How do we know that you can deliver the goods? Similar promises were made to us in 1880, and it was James G. Blaine who had most to do with breaking them. We would like to believe you but we can't. Undoubtedly you would keep your promises if you could, but you won't be permitted to. We have been burnt once, and a burnt child dreads the fire." Here the NEGOTIATION ARE SAID TO HAVE HUNG for some days. Finally the Blaine managers suggested that one of their men should be sent to Maine to state their demands, and intimate that an arangement satisfactory to all could be made. The O'Brienites agreed to this plan. Early in July one of the members went to see Blaine. He demanded that Collector Robertson should be made to take a back seat in the campaign, and that when his term of office expired next spring a man in their interest should be appointed Collector, and all the Federal patronage in this city, with the exception of the District Attorneyship, be turned over to them. They said if this was agreed to they would in and work for the ticket as they did in 1880, but if they would simply allow the election to go by default. It is said that this interview with Blaine was not entirely satisfactory. A week afterward, however, the Blaine managers here induced the O'Brienites to send another representative to Maine, which was done. He made the same demand. This time all that was asked for was conceded and it is said that Mr. Blaine promised faithfully to carry out the arrangement in case of his election. But here there was another hitch. The ambassador asked that the promise should be put in such a shape that it could not be broken. This was refused. The messenger came back and made his report and since then nothing has been done and the negotiations are said to hang, pending Blaine's arrival in this city, when his managers here expect that such assurances can be given as will bring the machine men into line. But in the meantime the machine men intend to do nothing, by way of the emphasizing their demands. They have so far made no efforts toward organizing the city for the election, and the only districts which have been put in any shape are the ninth and thirteenth, which controlled by McCook and his friends. The O'Brienites say that they are glad Blaine is coming here as they would like to see him, but at the same time it is said that nothing will induce them to change their attitude unless the promises already made are put in such shape that they can not be broken by Blaine, should he be elected.

Not The Same Party.

The Republican party of to-day, says the Wilkesbarre Union Leader, is no more the Republican party of its palmy days, of the days when it had principles and fought for them, than the hot-headed southern who provoked their people to rebellion in 1861 were the southern—the Washingtons, Jeffersons, Madisons, Monroes, and Jacksons—of the earlier and most glorious history of this country.

The men who made the Republican party a great party are, almost without exception, either dead, Democrats, or sleeping.

There are no Lincolns, Sewells, Stevens, Sammers, Greeleys, Chase and their kind in the Republican party of to-day. All these have completed their life-work and been gathered to their fathers.

There are no Curtins, Palmers, Trumbulls, Hoopes, Doolittles. These have become Democrats and are among the most honored leaders of the Democratic party.

There are no Shurtzes, Curtises, Ponds, Codmans, Bristows, Speds. These are Independents, and while they would prefer the Republican to the Democratic party, when its romances are equally worthy of trust and honor, they cannot support Blaine.

If report be true there are no Conklings or Edmunds even—for these, we are told, are consumed with disgust by littleness of the present leadership of the organization of which they were once so proud, and will yet yield it but a quasi support, if any.

The Republican party of to-day is the party of Star Route thieves like Dorsey, Clayton and Elkins; of the monopolists like Gould, Sage and Field; of cheap labor importers like Frank Jones; of rat printing shop keepers like White-law Reid and Charles Emory Smith; of brazen corruptionists like Keifer, Robeson, Dick Harrington and Chandler. These are the men upon whom the mantle of leadership has fallen from the shoulders of their in many instances, really brilliant predecessors. These are the men who will be called to the cabinet, to foreign portfolios, to consulships, should James G. Blaine be chosen to the Presidency.

Republicans who appreciate Blaine's moral smallness and the lack of real capacity that is behind his gaudy exterior, and who say they will nevertheless vote for him because of the party, cannot have stopped to consider that the party has so deteriorated and dwindled away as to all those elements and attributes that invite confidence and respect.

Nor can it have entered into their calculation that in the election of Grover Cleveland the men who will be brought to the fore, whose genius will be employed to care for the public interest at the great governmental departments and in foreign courts, are the Bayards, Thurmans, Raddalls, Hancock, Hewitts, McClellans and Pendletons, strong men and pure men, who rise above the present pigmy leaders of their opponents as mountains above mole hills.

Hendricks Record.

HOW THE CIVIL SERVICE RULES ARE BEING BROKEN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 19.—The Washington Post this morning charged that Secretary McPherson, of the Republican Congressional Committee, had procured the services of a Government clerk to hunt up the record of Thomas A. Hendricks in the Land Office for use in the campaign. McPherson says that if a clerk in the Land Office is engaged in such a task he knows nothing of it, but Commissioner McFarland is more frank and admits that several clerks are engaged in overhauling the books of the office covering the period during which Hendricks was Land Commissioner.

"McPherson and McFarland are welcome to all they can find," said a Democrat, "because Hendricks has been straight as a string in every position he has ever held, but the setting of the Government clerks to hunt up campaign material to the neglect of their legitimate duties is not only a gross infraction of the civil service regulations but a shameful prostitution of the public service. McFarland, like Cook, seems to be going out of his way to get up lying statements for campaign use purporting to be from the official record. This sort of dirty work will react."

The ex-Appointment Clerk of the Treasury, Buttler, who was placed at the head of the appointment division by Mr. Folger, and who has resigned a short time since to enter into private business, has come out for Cleveland. He is a Stalwart of the New York Stalwarts. He attended Secretary Folger's funeral, and on his return a couple of days ago he said to his friends:

"I have always been a stalwart Republican, but I shall support Cleveland. Many of my friends and other stalwarts in New York feel as I do about the matter. In fact I don't see how any friend of Folger can vote for Blaine."

NOT RELYING ON OHIO.

At Democratic headquarters in this city the talk about Ohio is not in a spirit of confidence but of hope. Secretary Post says that to carry Ohio would be a gain which the Democrats did not contemplate in the origin of the canvass. He maintains that Ohio is not at all essential to Democratic success, but that its loss to the Republicans would be fatal to them. The Democrats hold that Ohio would be a clear gain to them and that the loss of the State would not give them a black eye.

In a letter to a friend in this city, received to-day, Colonel Don Platt, writing from Ohio, says he regards the prospects as favorable to the Democrats. He says that while the State has hitherto been Republican in Presidential contests, he observes marked changes in favor of the Democrats, and though the contest is close, he thinks the indications point to Democratic success.

Mr. Lawrence M. Ennis, a young lawyer of Chicago, is in the city. He is a leading Democrat of that city, and speaks hopefully of the prospects of Democratic success in Illinois. He says that young Democrats of Chicago have on all their business cards the motto, "Cleveland and Reform: Hendricks and Revenue." He says professional men, clerks and others who use business cards, and who follow the Democratic banner, have this sentiment on their cards. He thinks that Congressman Finerty will be beaten because he has declared for Blaine.

A man called in at the Democratic headquarters to-day with a list of nineteen names of citizens of West Virginia who have not voted since the war. He had been on a trip in West Virginia, and he had met the men whose names he brought in. He says they all expressed a determination to vote the Democratic ticket.

Representative Stevens, of New York, arrived in the city this morning and will probably take charge of things at the Democratic headquarters while Secretary Post goes home for a short time. He thinks that Cleveland's strength in New York is increasing all the time, and he will certainly carry the State. He says Western New York is fairly ablaze with enthusiasm for Cleveland and Hendricks.

Congressman Ermentrout is spending a few days in town in the interests of his constituents. He reports everything right in "Ault Berks" and predicts an old time majority.

Asked to Answer.

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN THE BLAINE LIBEL SUIT.

INDIANAPOLIS, September 18.—In the United States District Court this afternoon, the attorney for Mr. Shoemaker filed a bill of discovery in the Blaine-Sentinel libel suit. The bill begins by citing the fact of Blaine bringing suit against the Sentinel, and repeating the original complaint in the suit, the Sentinel's answer accompanying the interrogatories and the reply of Blaine's attorneys. The bill then states that after filing interrogatories, Shoemaker's attorneys, on the 6th of September, moved the court for a rule against Blaine to answer the same within a specified time, to be fixed by the court, which motion was argued on September 13 and overruled. The bill then goes on to say that in order to sustain the defense of justification pleaded by Shoemaker, it will be necessary and material for the orators to show and prove that Blaine had illicit relations with and seduced the person whom he afterward married, the result of said intercourse being the birth of a child in about three months after said marriage. The bill goes on to say that the orators are informed and believe that the marriage of James G. Blaine and Harriet Stanwood occurred about the 29th of March, 1851, in Pittsburgh, Pa.; that the marriage was clandestinely arranged, secretly performed and hastily accomplished; that no license was issued by any authority for such marriage, none being required by the laws of Pennsylvania at that time, that no public official record was kept or made for the same reason; that one Bryan, the minister who officiated at said marriage, has been dead several years, and that if any private memoranda or record of the marriage was made the same is now lost or destroyed, the particulars of which marriage are fully known to Blaine.

The bill then states that some time before the date of said marriage Blaine was a professor at an institution of learning at Drillorsburg, Ky.; that Miss Stanwood was an instructress in a female school in the same place, and that they there became acquainted. Both were unmarried, and Blaine addressed Miss Stanwood as suitor; that he gained her confidence and illicit relations ensued; that a short time before said marriage Jacob Stanwood, a brother or uncle of Harriet, or some other person or persons unknown to the orators, waited on Blaine, charged with being the cause of Miss Stanwood's condition and threatened him with personal violence unless he married her; that one or more persons were present at the interview between Blaine and her relatives, but those persons were unknown to the orators.

THE BIRTH OF BLAINE'S CHILD.

Mrs. Blaine went to Augusta, Me where a child was born about the 18th of June 1851, and that said child was always recognized and acknowledged by Blaine as his son. The orators further say that they have a good and valid defense as stated in the answer are true, and that the same can fully be established by the answers of Blaine to the interrogatories heretofore propounded, all the circumstances being fully known to him, and a full and complete discovery of said facts from and by Blaine, is necessary to the orators in their defense in aid of such other testimony as may be procurable. Unless this is done the orators cannot so fully set out and completely show and prove the facts necessary to their defense. The orators, therefore, pray that full and complete discovery be made by Blaine in relation to the facts heretofore stated, and to that end that he be summoned to answer the same under oath.

The bill closes by asking that a writ of subpoena be issued out of chancery for Blaine, and that he be ordered to answer particular interrogatories, further proceedings be perpetually stayed and restrained. The bill was not filed until 5 o'clock, and the court adjourned without taking action.

An Inheritance of Millions.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., September 14.—Carlos Ramon, a Spaniard nearly 40 years of age, employed in the Evans House, in this city, is in New York, consulting with the Spanish consul regarding the inheritance of several millions by the expected death of an uncle in Spain. Three titles go with the fortune. Senor Ramon is well educated, speaks six languages and has been an instructor in a Pennsylvania college. Ill health forced him to come to his friends here and he was given light work in the Evans House about a month ago. He came to this country nearly twenty years ago with a handsome fortune, which he invested in a real estate in Chicago. The great fire swept away his possessions, and he has since been a teacher.

WORKINGMEN especially should read and ponder on the BLAINE letters. Let them, after reading, bear in mind that this same man to-day is reputed worth at least a million dollars. Let them bear in mind that he accumulated that wealth during the time he was Speaker of the House of Representatives at Washington, and sworn to protect the interests of his country, and accumulated it by just such methods as these letters reveal. Let them, then, give answer as to the honesty of this man who now asks their votes as the protector of home industry. His protection is very close home, and, apparently, never got far beyond his own pocket.
