Inaugrating Rapid Transit.

The following letter copied from the Huntingdon Monitor and signed J. D (John Daugherty) states some signifi. matured and brought into practical application will be fo great interest in country. It is a much needed improvement. That a new system of "folding paddles" and leverage could be applied to craft upon our canals, rivers and coast waters, has long impressed itself. upon our mind. When matured that it would be an immense public benefit in the way of speedy, economic transit there is no doubt. That it would bring ings, of the Eighteenth preciect, who cheaper bread to those who toil is found upon entering the room that he équeally evident.

Mr. Daugherty, when in his earlier manhood, invented and applied to practical use certain improvements in canal transit across the state : and his present effort "cradled in adversity and dedicated to misfortune" is the result of years of mental effort effort in adversity and dedicated to the good of his country and the cause of humanity:

Toe poor woman screamed in her agony, and the other tecants of the house run to her assistance, but the doors of the apartment were locked. A couple of men broke in the door and polled McCarron away. Others of them wished to go for the police, but the woman begged them not to do so, However, a policeman satered her rooms but she re'used to make a complaint, and the neighbors left her alone. When he returned at 12 o'clock his wife was lying on the sofa nursing in The Pittsburgh Weekly infant. The other child, a boy six years old was lying on the floor.

"Where's my dinner?" he said. "I am too weak to get it ready," she replied. "Then I'll fix you. You have been ciant and plausible fact which when flirting and going with other men. I'll see that you will not do it any more." He caught her by the hair, threw her the inland and cost navigation of the on the floor and choked her. She tried to serram, but was unab'e. Then picking up a shoemaker's awl, he lifted her eyelids and pierced the pupils to the hilt of the weapon, saying: "I'll blind you for life, anyhow.

The pain gave her voice, her screams again brought the neighbors to the room. They summoned Officer Jean-had fled. The officer traced him to the wharf at the foot of East Twentieth street, and found him hiding in a coal bin. McCarron raised a shovel when the policeman appeared, but the officer drew his revolver, and he surrendered. An ambulance took Mrs. Carron to Bellevue Hospital. The doctors at the Hospital say that the woman will be blind for life if she recovers, and the latter is only hoped for. McCarron will be reman ied probably to await the re. sult of his wife's injuries.
