Before and Behind the Scenes. [New London Telegram.]

To show more clearly the comicalities and absurdities of stage life, we cite a few incidents which are the results of personal or servation, and which, to the unthinking, show the vast difference between the relations of | rof ssional people before and behind the scenes.

An Italian Wet-Nurse.

cott's Magazine.] The new outfit-everything complete, from weaning apparel down to mass book and rosary-the comfortable lodging, the abundant food, the kindly and cheery treatment-all these are among the pleas ures of a balia's life. On the other hand she is separated from her own people and her home. It is true that she may send and receive letters as often as she pleases. But these letters will only convey good news. Should any evil befall her chil-dren or husband she will never know it until the day (always one and sometimes two years distant) when she returns to her village. She is allowed to receive occasional visits from her friends, husband and children, but they are never allowed to remain an instant alone with her, lest some piece of news should be communicated which may upset her tranquillity.

Should any member of the family die, the fact will not only not be mentioned, but the messages the deceased person was in the habit of sending will be repeated in every letter. I well remember, many years ago, the melancholy impression made upon my mind by the sight of a pretty young balia who was seated by her mistress' side and knitting socks for her own baby—the baby who had been in its small grave for nearly a year, but for whom she had been carefully accumulating piles of clothing, and to whom she was hoping to to return within a week. During all the months of absence she had | This is an additional safety been dwelling on the thought of this baby, her first; but she never learned her loss until she returned home.

Politicians Not Religious.

[Washington Letter.] Politicians as a class are very frreligious, in the sense that they pay no attention to the forms of religion. They are very timid, however, upon the subject, and cannot be classed as liberals. They are indifferent to the subject. They would be the very last, however, to pub-licly show this indifference or to do any thing which would give the religious people a chance to say they were infidels.
You can count on the fingers of your two hands the prominent men of either branch of congress who might be classed as remotely religious. The great mass of them never attend church, and would as soon think of going to an astrologer or a fortune-teller as to a clergyman for advice in a difficult or delicate matter. But if a proposition were to come up to-morrow in the house to abolish the post of chapfain there would be a perfect howl of pious indignation from the majority of the members. They class the churches as so many corporations whose influence is not to be lightly lost for any mere question of

I have heard members speak often of working what is called the "religious racket" in their districts. I heard a veteran politician say the other day: "I have at various times worked the religious racket in my district, but I never permit the clergymen to deliver any public address to me until I have seen it in writing and had an opportunity of revising it. Unless you do this and load the clerical gun yourself it is just as apt to shoot be-hind as in front."

Stealing Children's Nose Rings.

Jewels on children have at all times been a source of crime. Within the last fortnight at Amritsar two robberies, with violence, have been perpetrated. Both were on school girls. One little girl was going d. wn the street when her nose ring going d wn the street when her nose ring was snatched out of her nose by a thief, who ran off, leaving the child frightened and crying bitterly, for her nose was torn. The other robbery was similar. A little girl left her school to go out to dry what she used instead of a slate. A scoundrel seeing her snatched out her nose ornament of the processed. and disappeared.

Daniel Webster's Boots

[Boston Globe.] When Daniel Webster entered Dart-mouth, in 1797, says Stephen M. Allen in The Century, he was desperately poor. A friend sent him a recipe while at college for greasing his boots. He wrote back for greasing his boots. He wrote back and tnanked him very politely. "But," s id he, "my boots need other doctoring. for they not only admit water, but even peas and gravel stones."

FROST PRESERVES THEM.

Facts About Frozen Apples That Are Contrary to the General Belief.

[New York Sun.] "If your garret or loft is only cold enough there isn't any reason in the world why you shouldn't treat your friends with plump, full-flavored Rhode Island Greenings, Baldwins, or any other choice apples, just as well next June as you did last Christmas, "said a Washing-ton street commission merchant. "I'll have last year's Baldwins and I don't know but last year's Greenings, as sound as a knot, in my house next summer, in the same dish with this year's harvest apples; yet nine out of ten people would have thought these same apples were ruined two months ago and would have treated them accordingly. Why? Simply because they were frozen."

"Doesn't the freezing of apples spoll them, then?" asked the reporter. "The general opinion is," replied the merchant, "that after an apple freezes its value is gone; but the fact is that just the contrary is the truth. Let a barrel of apples freeze in the fall, and keep them frozen, or, rather, do not disturb them, and in the spring they will be in the very condition they were when taken from the Baldwins, and in fact all favorite eating apples, do not have their full flavor nor mellowness when first packed in the fall. They ripen in the barrel, and are at their best in January. After that they be-gin to decay, and when March comes they are few and far between, those that are left being the result of especial good care

"If they are frozen in the fall, however, the ripening process is checked. The vitality of the apple is simply suspended. and it only needs proper treatment to re-store it to its natural action. The trouble has always been that when a barrel of apples was found to be frozen it was rolled off at once to a warm place and subjected to a rapid thawing. Some people take the apples out of the barrel and plunge them into cold water to draw the frost out. The result is a flabby, flavorless fruit, really not worth the room it occupies, and subject to speedy decay—all because of popular ignorance. A frozen apple is one the most sensitive things in the world. Touch your finger upon it, and when the frost is thawed from the apple the spot touched will be a mark of decay which spreads rapidly over the fruit.

"Therefore, if you ever find that your barrel of Balwins is frozen, heat it gently. If the apples are thoroughly frozen the barrel will not be full by nearly a peck, so much has the fruit contracted with the frost. It would be impossible, now, to move the barrel without ruining every apple in it. So, if it stands where it will not be subjected to sudden warmth, and thus thawed out rapidly, let it stand. Cover the apples up so they will be kept dark. Then go away and let them alone until spring comes and draws the frost out of everything. Then uncover your It may startle you, but you find the barrel full to the head with the plump fellows that were rolled into your house in the fall, and which were a sorrylooking lot of wrinkled, shrunk-up fruit the last time you saw them. If they were assorted apples when packed you need not pick them over, for they will be just as sound and hard as they were in No-

What to Do in an Emergency.

[Domestic Journal. Here is the best method of action when the clothing of any friend is on fire. Seize a shawl, or blanket, or any woolen fabric, hold the corners as far apart as you can, stretch them out higher than your head, and running boldly to the person, make a motion of clasping in your arms, mostly above the shoulders. This instantly smothers the fire and saves the face. The next instant throw the person on the floor. and breath, and any remnant of flame can be put out more leisurely. The next instant immerse the burnt part in cold water, and all pain will Next, get some common flour, remove from the water and cover the burnt parts with an inch of flour; if possible, put the patient to bed and do all that is possible to soothe until the physician arrives. Let the flour remain until it falls off itself, when beautiful new skin can be found. Unless the burns are deep no other application is needed. Dry flour for burns is the most admirable remetly ever proposed. The principle of this action is, that like the water, it causes instant and perfect relief from pain by totally excluding all the air from the injured parts. A good authority prescribes the following remedies: For severe burns cloths wet in a solution of soda should be quickly applied. For slight burns a mixture of lime water and sweet oil brings speedy relief.

The Goose Livers of France. [Paris Cor. I hiladelphia Caterer.]

The fole gras, which makes the celebrated pale, is nothing more than a disease, that of a large liver. The birds are imprisoned in small compartments, where they can not turn, only room being left for their heads and tails to protrude. Be fore them is a trough filled with water, in which powdered charcoal is mixed the birds are literally stuffed with food of which make, moistened with poppy oil, is the base. Pending the last day of fattening, all liquid is suppressed.

The presence of a ball of fat under each wing indicates that the psychological moment has arrived-to extract the liver. The bird is then so obese that it respires with the greatest difficulty. It is then killed. A goose weighing twenty pounds will yield six pounds of fat and a liver from two to two and a half pounds. The price of a liver—that luxury es teemed in o'd Rome by Casar and Crispius—varies from 2 to 3 francs. The special liver fattening increases the size of that organ fivefold.

Bogus Butter in England. [American Agricul

Under the names of "Oleomargarine," and "Butterine," vast quantities of bogus butter are consumed in England. One firm, the Messrs. Jurgens, send from their factories at Oss. in Holland, 150 tons each week, of this compound fat made over to imitate butter. This amount, large as it is, is but part of the whole quantity consumed, as others on the continent are engaged in making imitation butter, and find their principal market in England. There is no doubt a considerable quantity of fa'se butter made in Great Britain Every now and then, in England, as here, there is an excitement over bogus butter, and the matter is discussed in the papers and in meetings.

Our Standard Congressional Greatness. ["Carp" in Cleveland Leader.]

Congressional greatness! Faugh! Is our standard of greatness declining? I don't know. Old stagers, whose prime was in the days before the war, tell us we have no such men in the house and senate as we had then. They point to Clay, Cal-houn, and Webster, to Giddings and Wade, to Tom Benton and to Corwin, and they say the giants of the forum have passed away, and none but pigmies have succeeded them. Eut we must take into account the tendency of the old to detract the new, and also the fact that the average great man who lives as a patriot or a statesman in history grows in greatness and goodness as time goes on.

I imagine we have just as great men now as we had then. We have certainly as good ones. If you will read the papers of Jackson's day you will find as many corruptions charged as now. If you go on to Van Buren you will find political parties wanting to take an inventory of the president's furniture, and I can show you speeches of John Randolph in the house of representatives, making charges of corruption against the presidents of the time of the war of 1812. Take any specimen of political crime as charged to-day, and I can show you its counterpart in the days of the one passed.

The lobbying frauds were once far more numerous. Government officers almost without number defaulted in the last days of Buchanan, and I have heard men who ought to know say that Daniel Webster used to come out into the lobbies of the senate and collect fees for speeches he was about to make in favor of certain bills then being discussed within. long as buman nature remains unchanged we will have corruption in public life The safeguards against it have, however, so increased that it is far more difficult to achieve without detection now than it was in times past, and the corruption is consequently less.

George Ellot and Carlyle.

[Brooklyn Exchange.] George Eliot's biography by her husband, Mr. Cross, just published, is in marked contrast with that of her great contemporary Carlyle. It is as full of sweetness and light as his was full of littleness and darkness; disclosing the gentleness and benignity of her spirit, as the harshness and rancor of his own were disclosed in his posthumous records. Her works had made all mankind her lovers and none of them are alienated now that they are taken into the arcanum of her spiritual life. But of Carlyle's adspiritual life. But of Carlyle's ad-mirers a multitude turned their faces away in silence and sorrow from the portraiture of himself which his own hand drew, lamenting that the cloud from which he had launched his arrows of fire ever was lifted, and such forbidding lineaments of the thunder-bearer revealed.

Both are at rest now, the stormy sophist and the golden mouthed sybil, the works they wrought broadening in the remem-brance of man, the informing spirit of each, which cast such enchantment on the generation in which they lived now fully disclose I, carrying the lesson, if it were needed, that love crowns with garlands only the memory of those that loved, and has but a withered chaplet for the brow clothed in wrath and wrinkled with menaces and scorn of all men and things

Bored by Autograph Flends. [New York Cor. Chicago Herald.]

The last time that I met Conant was at the Authors' club. He had an ardent dislike of sham and when there entered an author of world wide reputation, who wearily remarked on opening a letter asking for his autograph, that he was bored to death by such requests, the provocation to expose the humbug was not resisted. "How many letters begging your autograph do you get every week, on the average?" Conant inquired.

"Not less than fifty," was the unosten tatious reply, "and they make my life

"How long does it take you to write your name on a sheet of paper, fold it, seal an envelope, and address it?" "Well, I really don't know." "Let us see," and Conant laid his watch on the table while slowly going through with the process. "That took just fifteen seconds. Answering the entire fifty polite, complimentary requests for you autograph—if you are so fortunate as to receive that number of tokens of popu larity weekly-would occupy no more than a quarter of an hour." The lesson was a sound one. There is no sillier affectation than that of being bored by the autograph fiends.

Treatment of Hydrophobia.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.] According to Dr. Dolan's work on hydrophobia, physicians may convey to their patients a reasonable hope of almost perfect immunity from the disease after three months have clapse! from the time the bite was inflicted. The danger is thought to be lessened with every month that passes, "so that after a year the phy sician may afford a scientific certainty of the patient's recovery." Absolute qui-etude, or "sedation," and the use of the Turkish bath are the measures chiefly recommended as preventive treatment.

No diseases have so thoroughly baffled the skill of the medical profession as cancerous affections and as they have always been considered incurable, it has been thought disreputable to adopt their treatment as a specialty; and hence physicians have neglected their proper study. But of late years new and important discoveries have brought forth a course that reform of our national habits in the matter of literary biography. Is it not odious that as soon as a man is dead his desk is raked, and every insignificant memorandum, which he never meant for the public, is printed for the gossiping amusement of people too idle to re-read his books? part of the body, even the tongue.
