The Hygienic Education Bill Not a Book Job

PHILADELPHIA, March 9, 1885.
Hon. A. D. Glenn, Chairman of the Committee on Education, House of Representatives, Harrisburg, Pa.

DEAR SIR:—Understanding that some of the opponents of your bill for "the study of physiology and hygiene in the public schools" have resorted to the somewhat stale argument that it has its origin in interested motives on the part of its supporters, we venture to call your attention to the following statement:

A similar bill is now pending before the Legislature of Massachusetts. A few weeks since a charge almost identical with the one above alluded to was made in that body. Rev. Albert H. Plumb, pastor of the Walnut Avenue Congregational Church, of Boston, appeared before a legislative committee of the Massachusetts General Court, and said in answer:

"Some of the organs of the liquor interest, evidently afraid to have our children taught the truth on this subject, are seeking to prejudice the measure by charging it to a book publishing ring.

"Is it likely that the two hundred thousand women in the Christiana Temperance Union, who are pushing this measure in nineteen States, are moved by hopes of commissions from the sale of books?

"Everybody knows they are simply defending their homes. With sore and sad hearts, they are crying by this plan to stay if possible, the fearful tide of intemperance which is desolating the land.

"Their chief agent in this endeavor is my honored friend and neighbor, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, long a worth member of a Congregational church near my own. Mrs. Hunt and her associates in this undertaking have no pecuniary interest whatever in the measure they advocate. She has indeed been active in securing suitable text-books, for temperance instruction. This was her duty, lest the instruction she asked for be denied from lack of the needed books. But she has utterly refused to receive a single cent, directly or indirectly, from their sale.

"And it is cruel injustice to a noble and self-sacrificing woman thus to allege that her object in all this is money.

"Besides, if there was ever a palpable absurdity even ludicrous in its stupidity, it is the spectacle of these giant organizations, leagued liquor dealers, wealthy brewer's associations, anxious to guard their taxpayers against the greed and avarice of these praying women of the Temperance Union.

"The taxpayers could afford to pile high with text-books every school-house in the land if they could thus escape a hundredth part of the expense with which they are burdened every year by the liquor traffic.

"This is no selfish project. It is simply an effort at self-protection. And these ladies say to the rich liquor dealers who oppose it: "Gentlemen, you are hard on us. By all possible allurements in your gilded saloons you plan to draw in our sons and fasten the habit of drink upon them, and when we seek to teach our boys their danger, you interfere and say, 'No facts which will lessen our gains shall be taught in the schools.'"

"You have no mercy, and as you hope for mercy, we beg you forbear your hands, and let this simple measure of prevention be tried."

Rev. Joseph Cook also appeared before the same committee, and concurred in Dr. Plumb's statements.

We inclose herein letters from both of these gentlemen to Mrs. Hunt, in verification of the above. We also hand you a letter from Messrs. A. S. Barnes

& Co., the publishers, to the same effect.

The simple truth is, that the present movement has its sole origin in the consciences of earnest Christian women who have united to promote the cause of temperance in what they conceive to be the most effective way, to wit: the education of the young.

We are very truly yours,
PHILIP C. GARRETT,
SAMUEL SHIPLEY,
GEORGE D. BOARDMAN,
HENRY C. MCCOOK.

Before a legislative committee of the Massachusetts General Court, Mr. Joseph Cook said:

"All the charges that the whiskey rings bring against Mrs. Hunt are false root and branch, and in every fiber. She has not the slightest financial interest in the school books to which she has given her sanction. I know on the highest authority that the publishers of that book offered her compensation for it and that she refused it. She has spent thousands of dollars to advance the good and great cause she advocates, and done this with no prospect of pecuniary compensation. Her work is as unselfish as that of Washington in the Revolution. Her remarkable career has been full of self-sacrifice."

New York, March 2, 1885.
Rev. Joseph Cook 23 Beacon street, Boston, Mass.

DEAR SIR:—Hearing this morning of a revival of the charge which impugns to Mrs. Hunt a pecuniary interest in the book we publish, we hasten to say that they have no foundation whatever. On the contrary she has steadfastly refused to accept any compensation whatever, although her labors are necessarily of great service to our publishing interest.

The exact story of our relation is that by her request and under her supervision, we have prepared works which she regards as exactly adapted to the promotion of her mission, but she has always given us distinct notice that if other equal or better should appear she will place her endorsement also upon them. She has no claim upon us, nor have we upon her, and not one cent of money or other consideration has ever passed between us.

Very respectfully,
A. S. BARNES & Co.

Courting A Widow.

There is any amount of fun in courting a young girl who has not become used to it. She swallows all the soft things a fellow says, but when it comes to popping the question or something of that kind, she gets frightened more or less and wants time to consider until there are enough loopholes for her lover to slip out through without the least bit of trouble, if he happens to see some one he thinks he could love a shade or two better. Young girls are timid and shy in earnest, and if a fellow is not pretty certain he has found precisely the angel he is looking for, he can manage so as to have the refusal of her for a year or more, at the same time managed to keep the neck out of the reach of a breach of promise suit when he happens to meet some other sweet-faced angel that seems to him to be better suited to his tastes.

It is different with a widow. She gets rid of all her shyness at the earliest convenient opportunity, and finds out the principal things she desires to know of him before she allows him to get acquainted. The school girl of sixteen trusts herself to a fine young fellow on sixty or seventy days' sight without security; but the widow, like a thrifty wholesale house, goes out and examines the mercantile reports concerning him, and then sells to him on her own terms for cash. She has him sized up before he comes to market, and when she looks as if she were a very artless creature, and fights shy of him whenever he happens to sit a little close to her on the sofa, there are ten chances to one that he will never look any further, but will buckle right up to her and put the question fairly and squarely, and when he has done so she is not going to tremble all over and blush and ask for a week or a month in which to make up her mind. She will just wind her arms around his neck and look into his face with one of Ella Wheeler's fiery yearns, and before he has had time to catch his breath he will find himself nailed to the cross with a 'yes' that pierces him to his very soul.

Test of the Fardon Fire Extinguisher.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. C. W. Frost, representing the New York office of the Harden Hand Grenade fire extinguisher company, gave a very interesting exhibition of the manner in which the genade is used in case of fire. The trial was made on the old skating ground near the Broad street culvert and was what is termed the "incendiary test," such as is often done by incendiaries, by placing a lot of dry wood and shavings against the side of a building and saturating it with oil or benzine. Mr. Frost took a large store box and had it partly filled with dry pine wood shavings, over which he emptied a bottle of coal oil previous to applying the match. After giving it time to get thoroughly ignited and the whole box seemed to be in a blaze, Mr. Frost threw one of the genades containing about a quart of the chemical preparation into the fire with sufficient force to break the bottle. In an instant the fierce flames ceased, and by the application of a second bottle were thoroughly extinguished. The exhibition was witnessed by quite a number of our citizens, and all of whom seemed much pleased. Mr. Frost has established an agency in this city with headquarters at the Fries hardware company store.—Aloona Sun
