A man with a small mole on his chin climbed up the stoop of a doctor's office not long ago. I want to get rid of the mole," he said, when a young doctor came out and asked him what the matter was.

"Step right in, and I'll do it," the doctor responded, as he reached for a large tor responded, as he reached for a large ranogany tox containing a polished electron many from the battery to a neat carved handle. The doctor sat the patient down in an easy chair, threw his head back, and dressed the mole deftly with a local antisthetic that gradually benumbed the flesh until it was robbed of all sensitiveness. Then the doctor fitted a tiny strip of platium into the handle and turned on the man force of the battery. The platinum un force of the battery. The platinum was aglow with a pure white heat in a twinking. The doctor drew it slowly and carefully through the mole as if he were using a azor-blade. Routed by Fireworks.

[Labouchere in London Truth.] I think Mr. J. Thompson, of Kilima-Njaro fame, deserves credit for the skill and humanity he displayed in his hostile operations against savages. When he and his little band were threatened by the Wa Kiboso, he brought science and gunpowder to bear upon the latter in a somewhat novel way. Just at dusk, the savage Wa-h iboso were drawn up in battle array along the crest of a hill; so, taking up a position on a hillock opposite, the leader of the Kilima-Njaro expedition promptly arranged the artillery he had provided himself with in anticipation of such an emergen y. "No sooner had darkness set in (says he) than I blazed forth upon astonished natives with Bengal lights, red fire. Roman candles, ser-pent squibs, and, lastly, a magnificent flight of rockets." Without waiting to see the last of this pyrotechnic display, the hostile Wa-Kiboso beat an ignomin-ious retreat, declaring afterward that they could not contend against the white man who was able to pull the stars from the firmament and cause them to fall upon his enemies' heads.

> Detected Forgery. ["Famous Trials."]

A sea captain hired a chronometer for se on his voyage, and signed a printed receipt for it, but as his ship was wrecked, was unable to restore the instrument. The chronometer man brought a lawsuit, for he claimed that the captain had promised to pay for it if it snould be lost. The re-ceipt was produced and lo! it contained two lines written in a blank space above the captain's signature making just such a promise. The sea captain swore, however, that these lines were not written when he signed the receipt, and declared that they must have been forged after-wards. But the writing being placed under a microscope, disclosed the fact that the top of a letter in the sea captain's name ran up into the bottom of a letter in the written promise, and the inks of the two letters had mingled while they were both fresh, forming a sort of puddle. In other words, the sea captain had signed his name while the ink of the promise to pay for the chronometer was still wet.

Novel "Psychical" Idea.

[Cor. Chicago Weekly Magazine.] The evolutionists tell us that new organs and powers were developed in the lower stages of animal life because of strong and long continued efforts to acquire this power or these organs. In the same way man is developing the power of spiritual perception through a mighty desire to know something of spirit, of life beyond this life; and I believe he is gaining the power to perceive and know facts and truths heretofore unrecognizable by any of the senses or organs possessed by him.

Blue Blood and Medicine.

The medical profession in England is recruited almost exclusively from the middle classes of society. The aristocracy regard only three professions as fit for the scions of nobility—the army, the church and the law—and a recent writer says that he has yet to learn that any one born with blue blood in his veins has hitherto walked the hospitals and become a physician.

> The Sea of the Sahara. [Scientific Journal.]

The commission charged to further examine on the spot the project of the late Col. Boudsire for the conversion of a portion of the desert of Sahara into an inland sea, sailed from Marseilles recently. They will land at Gabes (Tunis), and will begin the construction of a fort on the spot where the canal will begin that will lead the waters of the ocean to the great sandy waste beyond.

Rewards of Merit.

Gold and silver medals, bronze crosses, and markmen's pins are issued by the war department as rewards for successful marksmanship in the United States army, and Brig. Gen. S. V. Benet, chief of ordnance, says in his annual report for 1883-84 that this has been a powerful and healthy stimulus to the steady improvement of the army in skillful marksman

Tippecause Net a Glutton.

[Iowa State Register.] Gen. Harrison was meither a gourmand nor a glutton, but was delicate in his astes, and abstemious in his indeligence at the table. The writer has frequently eaten at the general's table, and he at the writer's table, so that our knowledge of the demands of his appetite are not merely hearsay. Nor was ten. Harrison's sick-ness, which terminated in his death, brought on by over-eating large quantities of indigestible food. He was always an active, energetic man, and from boyhood to the last week of his life rose early, and, when it was to be done, engaged at the early dawn in necessary out-door work. And when there was no such work, he usually took a long walk before breakfast, This had become part of his life, and when he came to Washington he continued the practice.

The week before his death, in pursu ance of the practice of his active life, and his habit of early rising and exercise, the general took a walk, as he frequently did, across the long bridge to Georgetown. About the time he started to return he discovered a shower approaching, and hastened his steps to reach the White House before the rain. He worked himself into a perspiration, and a heavy dash of rain wet him thoroughly before he reached protection. The next day he was quite indisposed, which was quickly followed by pneumonia, or bilious pleurisy, which based all medical skill, and terminated his useful life after an illness of eight days. These are facts, and he was not killed by a "Hoosier cook" giving him his favorite "cabbage, cucumbers and pickle pork."

London's First Pictorial Paper.

[Joseph Hatton in Chicago News.] The pictorial press of London originated with The lilustrated London News in 1842. The projector and founder of this popular paper was Mr. Herbert In-He was a news agent at Nottingham. Occasionally, to accentuate notable events, murders particularly, the local press published a picture. The engraving was as crude as the printing of it was unsatisfactory, but success always attended the special edition of the journal that con-tained an illustration. The Nottingham news agent was of an inquiring and ob-serving turn of mind. Taking note of the great extra sale attending even the poorest kind of newspaper engraving, it occurred to him to speculate upon the prospects of a journal that should be full of pictures.

The idea of an illustrated newspaper thus sprang up in his mind, and he never rested until he started for London and put it into shape. Of course he was told that his scheme was foolish—that it would never succeed. The paper was not an immediate success. Mr. Ingram's capital was limited. If he had entered upon the hysiness backed as more was livery to the state of the st business backed as men usually are who start newspapers in these days, he would never once have had cause to be anxious. But he was spending his own money, and for a time it disappeared like the material in Chatmoss during the railway making, and with as little apparent result. The time came, however, when "foothold" was secured, and eventually Ingram stood upon the new-made ground, master of the

A Wicked Boy at the Capital.

[Washington Letter.] The wickedest boy lives in Washington. He visited the observatory a few days ago with a large fire-fly he had caught, and with the aid of some mucil-age stuck it in the center of the largest lens of the telescope. That night, when the astronomer went to work, he perceived a blaze of light apparently in the Heavens, and what amazed him the more was that it would give a couple of spurts and then die out, only to burst forth again in a second or two. He examined it carefully for a few minutes and then began to do sums to find out where in the heavens that extraordinary star was placed. He thought he found the locality, and next morning he telegraphed all over the universe that he had discovered a new and re-markable star of the third magnitude in

In a day or two all the astronomers of Europe and America were studying Orion; they gazed at it for hours until they were mad, and then they began to telegraph to the man in Washington to know what he meant. The discoverer took another look and found that the new star had moved 18,000,000,000 miles in twenty-four hours, and upon examining it closely he was alarmed to perceive that it had legs. When he went on the dome next morning to polish up the glass he found the light-ning-bug. The bill for telegraphing dis-patches amounted to $2,600, and now the astronomer wants to find that boy.

> River Pirates on the Delaware. [Philadelphia Times.]

"River pirates are just as thick as ever on the Delaware," said Customs Inspector Frank Bingham. "The only difference is they have learned to be more cunning and they don't confine their operations to scrap-iron and junk, but do a little smuggling now and then. There are plenty of their boats in the river, built and planned exactly alike, so as to defy detection.

Their plan is to run alongside vessels that lie in the stream and load up their boats from the cargo, which is generally sugar or spirits. They operate generally at night, but have been caught after dayligh. If deceded they generally manager light. If detected they generally manage to escape, and then the officers of the ves sels swear that they were stealing or broaching the cargo without their knowl-edge. The officers of every foreign vessel that comes to this port-know that prac-tically the customs officials are off duty at night, and confine their operations, of course, to the period from sunset to sun-

A Banker's View.

[Chicago Tribune "A ound Town."] "The world moves in spasms," said my friend, the banker, "first with a great rush, then with a great rest. During the rest thousands have to go hungry. When hard times come the pressure settles down on the roofs of these big buildings"—pointing out over the city—"like the disc of an hydraulic engine, and it squeezes the people out like water out of a sponge, or rats out of a cellar, and the poverty-stricken ones have to go out and starve. Why? Because in flush times they did not save. Short-sightedness, improvidence, evil passions—that is what ails the poor ones in the world. When I was a friend, the banker, "first with a great poor ones in the world. When I was a young man I had to learn to live on nothing, and then I learned how to keep a family of five on $50 a month, and we lived comfortably and contentedly, too."

The English Family, [Robert Laird Collier.] English parents and children, brothers and sisters, are deeply and unforgettingly loyal to the family. There is great civility and affectionateness expressed in all the relations and intercourse of the family, and quite as much effusiveness of expression and manner as among ourselves.

Neuralgia of the Face.

Capt. John Orr, Pearlington, Miss., has been a most intense sufferer from facial neuralgia for over twenty years. He has had seventeen operations performed on the nerves—that is, had them divided, cut off close to the bone from which they emerge. But this never did him any good; the most excruciating pain continued without the least interruption. He often wished for death to relieve him of the intolerable pain. The best physicians failed to relieve him. They finally advised him to consult Drs. Hartman & Miller, at the St. Charles Hotel, New Orleans, which he did. They prescribed Peruna, and in less than a month was entirely relieved of the pain. Before consulting these doctors the least touch to any part of his face or nose would cause the most fearful pain, while now he can blow his nose and wipe his face without the least fear of pain. The captain is grateful beyond measure for this unexpected and unhoped for result.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kenner,98 Laurel street, New Orleans, has been one of the great est sufferers from Neuralgia of the face during the past year that we have ever heard of. From morning to night, and from night to morning, there was one constant, racking, tearing, burning pain, extending clear around her head and deep down through every muscle, tooth and bone in her face. No rest and no sleep. All physicians failed to relieve her, as well as all remedies. She was constantly in the most agonizing despair. She called on Dr. Hartman, who said the cause was chronic catarrh. He prescribed PERUNA for her and now every pain has left her. She feels like another person and can eat heartily and sleep soundly.

Mrs. C. J. Miles, Gallipolis, O., writes:

"Dr. S. B. Hartman & Co., Columbus, O. My affliction has been rheumatism, located in the right arm and shoulder, of more than two years' standing, and after trying a great many remedies without any relief, I commenced the use of PERUNA, which, after using three bottles, found a decided change for the better. I continued to use it and now feel entirely well."

Huldah Ward, Weilston, O., writes: "I have been afflicted for years with that dreaded disease, catarria. I tried a great many different kinds of medicine, but to no effect. I commenced taking your PE RUNA about nine months ago; have tak en about ten bottles. It is doing me mich good. By its continued use I hope to be entirely cured."

Dr. A. B. Lovejoy, Dadeville, Ala., writes: "I have a fine run on your Pg-RUNA and MANALIN. Please send me a lot of books, "The Ills of Life,"
