

OutOn A Lark.

The last strains of the "Nanon" waltz had died away in Ball's gilded dice, at 720 Lombard street, last night, when the inmates were started by a loud "Ha! ha" which ended in "Bravo, my boy! Walk right in!"

"Here, waiter," said the big man, snapping his fingers, "wksley and lemon."

"Sherry for me," piped a queer little voice. The conscientious colored proprietor; Gilbert Ball, turned quickly from his desk and inquired; "Is your friend of age, sir?"

"Well you just bet on it. Ha! ha! ha!" slapping the mite on the shoulder, "aren't you of age?"

"Well I should smile," came the answer, with a laugh, and the little one drew deeply on a lighted cigarette and sent out rings of smoke.

"Well I don't believe it, said Ball, "and I won't sell him any liquor."

"Oh, well what's the odds?" said the big man. "What's the odds?" squeaked his protegee, and out they went together.

"Something is crooked there," said Ball, as he put on his hat and followed them. Up Lombard street to Eighth they went, and there they confronted by a Nineteenth district policeman, who, at the request of Ball, stopped them and marched them into the station house.

"Well, now, I'd like to know what this is for," said the big man.

"Search them," was the lieutenant's reply. Then the middle-aged man changed color and he was perspiring freely as he leaned over to the house sergeant and whispered, hoarsely: "My God, man, she is a woman!"

The house sergeant started back dumfounded; the little woman in male attire buried her face in her hands and sobbed. "Now, for God's sake, don't lock us up," said the big man, desperately. "This little girl just got herself up in these togs because she wanted to see the city by gaslight. Just telephone the Mayor, won't you? I am an intimate friend of his. Tell him—" and then the stranger hesitated. "Oh, well, tell him it's Anthony J. Lechler, of 1618 North Eighteenth street."

The house sergeant, however, said she would have to go in the cells. Then the would-be boy shrieked in womanly tones, while her companion implored her to keep quiet, and said her name was Mary Smith and that she lived at 1920 North Nineteenth. She was half carried back to the cells, and hardly had the iron door clanked behind her when a drunken woman from South street yelled: "Holy mother! to be kept in the same cell with a man!"

The agitate sergeant explained the matter to her and peace again reigned. Late last night bail was entered before a Magistrate and Mr. Lechler and his companion were released to appear to-day.

Printer's Ink.

A late book is called "Half Hour with Insects." If the insects happen to be hornets looking for business the author will find his half hour about thirty minutes too long. Somebody asks: "Why it is that the editors never commit suicide?" "Probably it is because the druggists won't sell strychnine on long time," answers the Hot Springs News; but we fancy it is owing to the lack of credit at the bar.

The Calise Sentinel burst a fleecy and gets off this bit of blue: "The Call and Sunday TELEGRAM of Harrisburg undertook to meddle in Cumberland county affairs by advising what the voters should and should not do at the recent election. It seems to us that they might each profit by looking up the result and hereafter allow the people on this side of the river to manage their own affairs."

Mr. B. F. Taylor, of the New York World favored us with a pleasant call on Wednesday. He is connected with the circulation department of that immense paper, nor would it be possible to imagine how a more competent gentleman could be secured for his responsible position. Young, genial, energetic, full of push and pluck, his presence is a fitting reflex of the excellence of the great journal he represents.

The Oil City Blizzard, which blows as breezily as a western zephyr at sixty miles an hour, has this pleasant notice, for which we return thanks:

"One of the most interesting feature of the Harrisburg Sunday Telegram at the present time is the column of 'Sketches in Oil,' from the pen of J. J. McLaurin. Mr. McLaurin's ready pen and excellent memory revive old incidents and picture them in a charming and vigorous style."

Mr. Taber Granted a Divorce.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—Late this afternoon Judge Allen, of the Superior Court, filed with the Clerk of said Court his decision in the Taber divorce suit. Judge Allen grants the petition of Fred. H. Faber for a divorce from his wife, Annie J. Taber, on the ground of adultery, and dismisses the latter's cross-bill. The decision causes considerable surprise. This is the case in which Rev. Mr. Downs figured.

Coal Shippers Complaining.

Individual shippers of anthracite coal over the Northern Central Railroad to Baltimore and Washington are complaining of the recent advance of 10 cents a ton in tolls to the points made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. They declare that is a prohibitory rate, and was made in order that the shipments of anthracite coal South may be controlled by the agents of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.—Record.

The Milliken Operatic Company made its first appearance in this city at the Sans Souci Garden last evening in the musical comedy "Niniche" with Madeleine Lucette in the title role. The piece is bright interesting and amusing, with many laughable situations, sparkling dialogue and pleasing music. It has all the sprightliness of French vaudeville, and is proved to be one of the most pleasing pieces seen here this season. The company is a thoroughly competent and one Miss Lucette especially made a most decided hit; her singing and dancing were excellent, and her vivacity and abandon at once created a most favorable impression. The other members of the cast were more than satisfactory.—Providence Journal, Aug. 25.

The Milliken Company is a good one, and a full house should greet them next Wednesday evening, 18th, at Humes' Hall.

SPRING MILLS.

Messrs. Bradford and Fortney are nearly through plastering the large house of W. A. Krise.

Mrs. W. A. Krise and son George have returned from their trip to Johnstown and Pittsburg.

The revival meeting in the M. E. church has closed. A large number of persons connected themselves with the church during the progress of the meeting.

I was glad to read that you called Gregg Post to an account for their neglect to half mast their flag in honor of their old commander, but you must not hold the organization responsible for their neglect. General McClellan was himself a member of the G. A. R., and other posts did their duty in the matter. Emory Fisher Post, one of the largest posts west of the Alleghenies hung the flag at half mast during the time of the funeral and passed very eulogistic resolutions of respect.

General McClellan was a brave and skillful general, the equal of Grant in every respect. Democrats vied with Republicans in honoring the great soldier, let the latter be honorable enough to do the same for brave "Little Mac."

On Saturday Oct. 24th, at the residence of her son, Mr. L. C. Rearick, near Zion. Mrs. Rearick died after a long illness in the 79th year of her age. The deceased lady was the widow of Daniel Rearick, who died very sudden, about ten years ago, she leaves one son and two daughters to mourn her death. The deceased united with the Lutheran church at the age of 16 years, and has ever been a faithful member of that denomination. Her death was a quiet and peaceful one, and in her last days she expressed herself as only waiting for the Savior's call. The funeral occurred on the 25th of Oct. leaving her late residence at 2 o'clock, religious services were held at the Lutheran church at Zion, and were conducted by Rev. J. Brubaker. She was buried at Zion.

—The Authors' Review for September reflects credit upon the enterprising publisher, Percy F. Smith. The author of "Home, Sweet Home" is the leading theme, with a likeness of Payne, followed by an illustrated paper on Washington. "Happy Childhood," a picture of General Grant's birth place, and the appropriate engravings in the children's department (very attractive) lift this Pittsburg publication on a plane with many more pretentious publications. In short the manner in which the Review is conducted reflects credit upon the publisher and editor. It is a very attractive and useful publication. —[Chronicle Telegraph, Aug. 24, 1885.]

Five Children at a Birth.

TOLEDO, O., November 8.—The Evening Post, of this city, publishes a special dispatch dated Napoleon, O., to the effect that Mrs. William Friend, wife of a prosperous farmer near that town, gave birth Monday to five boys. This remarkable statement is corroborated by reliable persons. At last accounts mother and children were alive. Mrs. Friend is only 34 years old, but is the mother of twenty-one children, having given birth to triplets on former occasions.

Ague-Shaken Sufferers. Who resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters experience speedier and more complete relief than they can hope to do by the use of quinine. This well authenticated fact is of itself sufficient to have established a high reputation for the Bitters. But the article is not a specific merely for the various forms of malarial disease. It endows the system with a degree of vigor, and reforms its irregularities with a certainty that constitutes its best defence against disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, specially rife where the atmosphere and water are miasmatainted. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, are remedied and prevented by it, and it also removes dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism. Take this medicine on the first indication that the system is out of order, and rest assured that you will be grateful for the hint.
