Our busines jaunt to this wide awake little "city" proved profitable, pleasant venturesom. It was profitable because we found most of our subscribers ready with the amount of their subscription and did not "kick" because they were / "dunned" (one exception however) for the same. Our loafing head-quarters were among the scribes of the Ledger and Journal offices. At the former we found Mr. J. D. Douglas, one of the editors, helping the boys out as he termed it, but we rather think he was taking a few lessons from the boys in the art o setting type, when not too busily engaged at editorial work. Mr. Harry /Williams, the senior member of the firm was helping bis folks, who had just moved from Bellefonte to Puilips burg, to fix up things about the house and was absent from the office a greater part of his time. Harry, like his partner, is a wholesouled jovial fellow, and you readily feel at home among the boys. At the Journal office we were entertained by Messrs. Bair and brothers. W. C. Bur, the editor and proprietor of this paper was not an entire stranger to us as we knew him when he was foreman in the office of which he now is proprietor. One of the finest cabin et collections of precious stones minerals, fossils, curosities, etc. we have seen. for some time we saw at Mr. Bur's house. His livrary is quite extensive, and we came away loaded with magazines, periodicals, etc., of all kinds, and are now binding them at our book bindery. Meal time found us at the St. James Hotel, (of which James Pass more is proprietor,) partaking of a good meal, with everything the markets afford, liberally bestowed on the tab'e, or at the popular Potter House under the management of Mr. McOmber, with Mr. Al Baney, of Bellefonte, as bar ten. der. The Passmore House has been 1 repainted, newly papered, and is one of the most attractive places at which to stop in the "burg." It is commodious. and under the new landlord, Mr. John West, it should not be without licence. Philipsburg has quite a number of Hot Is, but the three already mentioned are to that town what the Bush, B-ockerhoff, and Garman are to Bellefoate They are all first class, an I when you hear the porters call out the Potter House, St. James or the Passmore, you can rely upon it that both the inner and the outer man will be burner, and stone quarrier, innocentwell carel for. But there is another house bere that is sometimes represented at the trains by a porter. But woe be to the way-faring travel-r who stops there, the landlord is any thing but entertaining, unless you are fond of a racket and allow him to make the noise juring Mrs. Dhein, and seriously Contrary to previous warning of our mutilating other members of the famifriends, we ventured in. Although our ly mission was honest we were uncerm niously ousted. It is characteristic of this landlord we are told; but be tha as it may the man evidenty has mis-t taken his calling when he under took to run a hotel, while posessed with a

We had the pleasure of being through the studio and art galery conducted by Miss Crissman. The lady besides being an artist of merit, is pleasant affable and entertaining. We had a social of the explosion was so great as to chat with Mr. L. G. Lingle, who, by the way was preparing to est a little venison recently killed by his hunting crew. Mr. Felix Miller entertained us very pleasantly at his place of business, while Mr. John Ramsdale was none the less ready to square up with the Democrat. A Young Man Claims His Bride, After Being Buried a Year.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 11.-About a year and half ago Joseph Dyer, Jr. son of a farmer living on Cape Elizabeth, a few miles from this city, was thrown from a wagon. He received severe internal injuri s, and after several days of intense suffering, apparently died. He was buried in the village cemetery after the usual lapse of time. He was engaged to Christine Robertson at the time of the accideat, and his funeral took place on the day set for the wedding. About two weeks ago Miss Robertson receiva note from Dyer saying that he was alive and would return within a few days. There seemed to be no mistaking the handwriting, but as Dyer's affianced and his tamily still doubted the truth of the letter and its authorship, the coffi a was dug up and taken to their honesread. The family laid aside their mourning and the screws were just being taken from the coffin lid whn young Dyer strode into the room, saying, "Don't open it, for I am here." His mother and Miss Robertson threw their arms about his neck and fainted away.

Dyer says the first he knew after he lost consciousness in his own house was when he awoke lying on a marble slab in a disecting-room and found a number of men vigorously rubbing him. He had been dug up for a "subject" within ten hours of burial by some enterprising young doctors. They found that this was simply a case of suspended animation. They made up a large purse for Dyer on his promise not to reveal himself within a year, and he went west. Out of gratitude to his rescuers he refuses to give any more details,
