The Jewish Colony at Vineland. There are in the United States some ten olonies of Russian, Polish and Hungarian Israelites, most of whom have come here within the last five years. One of these, in the suburbs of Vineland, N. J., has an interesting history. At first it was feared that the tract of land chosen was a mere waste, but in the course of a few years, by constant and incessant labor and perseverence, it has been made productive, so that more than sixty families are maintained on the yieldings of the ground, such as potatoes, corn, berries, etc., which bring a very fair price in the market. Mr. Michael Hellprin, the distinguished cyclopædist and linguist of New York, has superintended the colonization work for several years, and is untiring in his efforts for the well-being of the different settlements. That gentleman, in company with the Rev. S. Morais, of this city, has just returned from a visit to Alliance, which is the name given to the Vineland colony. They are greatly satisfied with the state of affairs there, and fully believe that the inhabitants intend remaining permanently as tillers of the soil.

Among the people there were found many cultured persons and a number of those who had fled from Russia by reason of their com plicity in Nihilistic plots. Some of these told their story and pictured graphically the designs of their fellow conspirators and the thrilling escapes they themselves made when the plots were made known to the authorities. One man, who was compelled to leave his whole family in Russia in order to cross the frontier before fresh discoveries had been made, gave an interesting narrative of his career and showed likenesses of several noted Nihilists, with whom he claimed to have been in league. All the colonists are now well settled, and they, as a rule, are fully satisfied with their present lot. They live in neat houses, built of wood, which are sold to them at a small cost. The entire colony occupies from 1,200 to 1,500 acres of ground, and the climate, is salubrious and healthy .- Philadelphia Press.

Wanted Generous Measure.

* A parsimonious individual went into a drug store the other day to have a prescription put up. "Be sure that you give me generous neasure," said he to the druggist, fearful lest he might not get his money's worth. Said the druggist: "If I should give you one sixteenth of a grain more than this prescription calls for you would be dead in five minutes after taking the dose."-Boston Globe.

boat the mortar cart is ordered out. Each man is well trained to his duties, and simultaneously the different members of the crew load the gun, place the shot line in position, dispose the lines and hawser for instant use, attach the breeches buoy and dig a trench for the sand anchor, while the light of the beach lantern lights up the scene. It is a strange picture, the raging ocean, the wrecked ship in the offing and the excited men on the beach hurrying to and fro in their work of rescue. The gun booms out above the roar of the sea and the ball and attached line goes flying against the gale on over the wreck and falls into the sea beyond. The line, falling over some friendly spar or rope, is seized by the sailors and they draw the endless line and tally aboard the ship. They make fast the block which is attached and wave a signal to the surfmen, who fasten the shore end to a temporary pier, thus raising the line above the waves. The breeches buoy is then fastened to this endless line, which is worked by a system of ropes by the men on shore, and one after another the shipwrecked are brought safely to shore. This work is done with much labor, and sometimes it is hours before uccess crowns the efforts of the rescuers. The breeches buoy, though working quite well in small wrecks, does not come into requisition when a large number are to be taken from a stranded ship, and especially if there are invalids, women or children. To meet the requirements of this class a life car is used, and with the great improvements which have been made since its introduction it is now the means of saving large numbers of people. It is about 200 pounds heavier than the breeches buoy, but, to make up this difference in handling, it has a capacity for five or six adults, and has carried as many as nine half-grown children at a single trip. It is made of galvanized iron, and has much the appearance of a covered boat, and is connected with the hawser by a simple device, in such a manner as to permit it to float upon the water, while preventing it from drifting in strong currents too far from the direct course of the hauling lines. The apparatus is practically watertight, but, provided with means for supplying air, its passengers are landed in the same condition in which they em barked .-- Washington Cor. Globe-Democrat.

A Bartender's Trick.

A barkeeper can make or kill a drink if he A great many times customers wants to, come in and don't know what they do want. Can't think of anything that will just hit them. They ask the barkeeper to suggest comething. Nine times out of ten they will adopt his suggestion, especially if it is some thing they never tried. Then, if the drink suits them-and it is very apt to, simply be-cause it is a novely-they will stick to it steadily until the novelty wears off, recommend it to all their friends, think well of the place and regard the bartender who intro duced them to the boom as a perfect jewel in his way. The bartender knows how all this counts, and works it for all it is worth. It is one of the tricks of his trade .- New York Herald.

As Fast as She Could. A little girl who had been told that when it was thundering it was God talking, was out on the lawn one day not long ago playing with her dolls. Her mother, seeing a storm coming up, called to little Alice to hurry and come in.
