Just before Eckson and his wife started on their wedding tour Eckson

We want to show people that all newly married people are not silly.

Yes, we do, Henry. Now, when we get on the train, let us not pay any attention to each oth-

All right.

We'll lean apart from each other and act as if we have been married for years, won't we?

Yes. Oh, I tell you what would be the funniest idea in the world, Henry We'll take different seats, and after a while we'll get acquainted. Won't that be nice?

First class; splendid.

When they boarded the train they took opposite seats. Henry took up a newspaper, and Mellie looked at the wavering landscape. After a while Henry looked up and saw the conductor sitting with Mollie. Henry chuckled. Thinks she's in love with him, I reckon, the bridegroom mused. Believe I'll go forward and take a smoke. His cigar must have been unsatisfactory; for he soon threw it away and resumed his seat opposite his wife. The conductor was telling as amusing story, and Mollie was laughing gleefully. Shedid not eyen look at her husband.

This is playing it a little too fine, Henry mused. I like to see good acting, but she acts a little too well.

The train stopped at a station, and the conductor got up and went out, but returned immediately and again sat down by Mollie. Just then a young woman came along and asked Henry if she could share his seat. He gladly consented, musing that he could play even with his wife. A few moments later, while he was busily city at that time and the reporter who talking, he saw, with a sweetened thrill of revenge, that his wife was looking at him. At the next station the young woman got off the train, and when the conductor went out Henry sat down by Mollie.

I don't know what you want to sit down here for, she snapped. Why didn't you get off the train with-

Now, darling-Darling nothing. I'm going to get of the train and go home, that's what I'm going to do. I'm not going to Hwe with you, that's what I ain't, and when pa asks me why, I'm going to tall him that you didn't treat me with respect. You don't love me, and never did. The mischief I haven't. He's my uncle. I was going to introduce you so him, but I didn't want him to know that we were married until just before we got off the train.

Mollie. What?

Won't you forgive me?

I ought not to, you are so mean. I was jealous and-

Jealous? Yes.

I didn't know you loved me enough to be jealous.

But I do. Don't you love me just a little?

Yes, more than you do me. No.

Yes.

No you don't, precious.

Yes I do, darling.

If these people were not looking I'd kiss you.

Henry, after a short silence remark.

It's none of their busines.

And we don't care how many people are looking at us, do we?

And if they don't like it they can get off the train, can't they?

Yes, and you will live with me, won't you?

I couldn't live without you. I couldn't live without you, either. Because you love me, don't you? Yes, and because you love me, don't

Just then a man got up, opened his valise, took out a piece of cake, handed it to Henry, and said :

It's yours. Take it.

I don't want it. But you have earned it.

I won't have it. The man threw the cake on the seat and as he made a break for the forward car, said:

A tough looking man entered the sanctum of a San Francisco paper recently and said to the inmate :

Are you the editor?

Yes sir, was the reply. Well, I have come to see you about a piece in your paper one day last week which says that my wife who keeps a candy store on-street, is rather fond of the society of young men.

I assure you, said the editor, as he cast his eyes around the room in search of some weapon of defense, and seeing none looked out the window to calculate the distance to the ground, I had nothing to do with the publish. ing of that article. I was out of the wrote that article was discharged last Saturday. But I will have the false

My wife sold more candy this week than she did the whole six months before, and as I am not the man to forget a favor I just come around to pay you for the advertisement. Here is $25, and if sir-by gum, sir! Precious nothing! "Alas, Estelle," sighed Hubert, "I fear we can never marry. I love you devotedly, but I could never think of asking you to share my poverty."

"But, Hubert, "poverty would be happiness if we only were together. What do I care for wealth as long as I have you? I can do without luxuries if only I have your love. Bread and cheese and kisses are enough for me. I ask for nothing more."

"Really ?" he answered, firmly,look, ing fondly down into her eyes.

"BY GUM."

The boat was just casting off from the pier when a man in citizen's clothes who appeared to be greatly excited rushed up the gang-plank and shouted to she Captain to wait. Three minutes later it was understood that a desperate robber was on board, and that the excited man was his victim. None of us remembered of seeing "a ragged desperate-looking chap" come aboard, but the man was sure of it, and we began a search. Nobody wanted a robber and desperado aboard and the search went on with a will. After about ten minutes, the man who had rushed aboard uttered shouts of exultation. He had discovered the arch villian hidden under some furniture on the lower deck, and the mate produced a revolver and ordered the fellow to come out or take the consequences.

Be prepared-look out for him! cautioned the excited individual, and three or four more pistols came into view, and others secured bolts and

The desperado came forth. He was a boy of 15, ragged, dirty and frightened. He had something wrapped up in a newspaper, but he had no

He's the one who robbed me-there's his plunder! shouted the victim, and three or four men closed in on the lad.

The package was taken from him and opened. We expected to see bonds or money or jewelry, but instead of that our eyes rested on a half eaten loaf of bread. I hadn't anything to eat for two days! said the boy as he looked from face to face, and his big blue eyes fill: ed with tears and his chin quivered. He's a robber, and I'll send him to State prison! exclaimed the man, as he seized the boy by the collar. By gum! growled a voice from the gangway, and a fat, red-faced man, who had armed bimself with a heavy stick, threw it down with a crash and pushed into the crowd and asked:

Boy, who are you? Tim Williams. Where's your home? N-nowhere!

Did you rob this man of that loaf of bread? Y-yes' sir, but I was starving. Oh! you young villain, I'll stop your thieving and robbing! shouted the loser of the bread. Someone help me get him ashore! By gum, said the fat man, as he felt in his pockets.

He fished up a nickle, handed it to the baker, and continued ; By gum! I guess not! There's your money, and I stand by the boy! Yes, He's a thief!

Can't help that, sir! He's a boy. and he was hungry and had no other charitable man who had done his duty sir-by gum, sir! Anybody who lays a hand on that boy has got to climb over me-by gum Fifty men cheered the fat man and groaned at the baker, and the latter gripped his nickel and walked ashore. Captain, said the fat man, give this boy a chance to wash up, and I'll hunt him up some clothes. I'm going to give him a show, sir-by gum, sir! I was kicked and cuffed and stepped on myself when I was a boy, and I can feel for this chap, sir-by gum, sir, yes, sir; and I'll probably take him home with me. Come, Tim-by gum-but there's nothing desperate about you, and we'll have a talk and see how we can better your fortunes.

Yes, sir-by gum, sir!

And as the boat moved away every body gave three cheers for By Gum! and Tim .- Detroit Free Press.
