of discriminations against local freights the revenue and tax laws are made to bear upon them with undue and excessive exactions.

There is, I believe, but one other distinct question of State policy involved in the election of this year. One of the political parties has avowed its purpose to pass through two successive Legislatures, and submit to the people a Constitutional amendment forbidding the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in this Commonwealth.

But this denial of the rights of prohibition implies the duty of regulation; and though the just power of the State does not extend to the prescription of the drink, diet or dress of the individual man, it does extend to the prevention of any abuse of his private right affecting his neighbor or society at large; and I favor the enactment of any laws, however stringent, which may be necessary to that purpose, and, in any event the rigid enforcement of those now in existence.

Such legislation springs from a misconception of the proper sphere of government. It is no part of the duty of the State to coerce the individual man to except so far as his conduct may affect others, not remotely and consequentially, but by violating rights which legislation can recognize and undertake to protect.

Today, while it is in favor of sobriety and good morals, it discards a system of coercive legislation which cannot produce them, but must create many serious evils, which violates constitutional guarantees and sound principles of legislation, invades the rightful domain of the individual judgment and conscience and takes a step backward toward that barbarian age when the wages of labor, the prices of commodities, a man's food and clothing, were dictated to him by a government calling itself paternal.

These appear to me to be the definite issues to be determined by the election. They are none of them partisan questions. They concern deeply and vitally the most important interests of society, and each of them involves the permanent welfare of entire classes of our people.

I favor a tariff upon imports, with the clear understanding that it shall be protective to labor and capital alike, securing the manufacturer against cheap foreign competition and the wage-earner against cheap foreign immigration; and to that end I will advocate such a wise and judicious revision and regulation of import duties as shall ensure to the wage-earner his equitable proportion of all tariff duties levied for revenue or protection.

The question of a tariff is so broad and deep and there are so many and varied interests to be considered, that its unskillful agitation should be avoided. It is a great business problem that ought to be solved by a body of experts drawn from every trade, industry and productive interest. Capital and labor should be properly represented and the fullest and best evidence upon every part of the case should be adduced. A wise revision of the existing tariff would thus be settled upon the basis of sound financial principles, and the question of revenue divorced from mere party politics.

people" against the choice of a chief magistrate owing allegiance to any power but that of the people, and especially against any one under the malign influences which in spite of his nobler instincts, had succeeded in obstructing and perverting his administration. It was a warning to be remembered. Very sincerely yours.

MR. RICKETT'S LETTER.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 14.—Gentlemen: I accept the nomination of the Democratic party of Pennsylvania for Lieutenant-Governor, tendered through you by the State Convention. If elected I will perform the duties of the office with fidelity, in the interest of the public service, and to the best of my ability.

Yours truly, R. BRUCE RICKETS.

MR. BRENNEN'S LETTER.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 15, 1886.—Gentlemen: I beg leave to formally accept the nomination tendered, and if elected I will discharge the duties of the office with fidelity and to the best of my ability.

In considering this nomination for Auditor-General, I have been impressed with the importance of the office and how carefully the framers of the Constitution and the Legislature have been to secure as far as possible a separation of interest and independence of policy between the Auditor-General and the State Treasurer, the latter being the receiving and disbursing officer, and the former the accounting officer of the Commonwealth. The intended divorce of these offices is plainly shown in the law fixing their concurrent election shall be only every sixth year.

The Auditor-General is, or should be, a sentinel at the door of the State Treasury. Upon his vigilance and fidelity in no small degree depend the honest accounting for the revenues of the State and the faithful enforcement of its fiscal laws. He and the State Treasurer, together with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, constitute the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, authorized to dispose of the balance remaining in the Sinking Fund in excess of the amount required to pay the interest on the public debt. They control the moneys of the State, which are too often placed at the disposal of favored depositaries to be used for private speculation and personal advantage.

The further consideration that it is the duty of the Auditor-General and State Treasurer to judge and pass upon claims and accounts for and against the State, makes it perfectly plain that wise policy and common sense demand that these officers should be filled by persons whose political and personal interests are diverse. Respectfully yours, W. J. BRENNEN.

MR. AFRICA'S LETTER.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 11, 1886.—Gentlemen: In reply to your official notification of my nomination for Secretary of Internal Affairs by the Democratic State Convention which met at Harrisburg, on the 18th ult., I beg leave to say that I accept.

The Department of Internal Affairs, created by the Constitution of 1873, succeeded to the custody of the records and intricate duties of the Surveyor-General's office which pertained to the public surveys and original titles to lands throughout the State, which are too often placed at the disposal of favored depositaries to be used for private speculation and personal advantage. Inquiring into the relations of capital and labor, in their bearings upon the social, educational, and industrial welfare of all classes of working people and to offer practical suggestions for the improvement of the same. Annual reports are compiled and published of the assessments of taxable property, the wages of labor, the prospective statistics of mining, manufacturing and other industries, and of the operations and affairs of the railroad, canal, navigation, telegraph and telephone corporations of the Commonwealth.

Service in the department at duties made familiar by many years of practical experience in kindred professional pursuits, warrants me in stating that if this nomination should be ratified by the voters at the next election, the duties incumbent upon the Secretary of Internal Affairs will be performed with fidelity. I am, gentlemen, very respectfully yours, J. SIMPSON AFRICA.

MR. STEVENSON'S LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 17, 1886.—Gentlemen: On the 24th inst. you courteously conveyed to me from the Democratic Convention its unanimous nomination for Congressman-at-Large. I thank the convention and the great party represented by it for this distinguished mark of confidence and favor. I accept the nomination because it comes from the Democratic party in response to an almost universal request of the workmen of Pennsylvania.

I favor a tariff upon imports, with the clear understanding that it shall be protective to labor and capital alike, securing the manufacturer against cheap foreign competition and the wage-earner against cheap foreign immigration; and to that end I will advocate such a wise and judicious revision and regulation of import duties as shall ensure to the wage-earner his equitable proportion of all tariff duties levied for revenue or protection. The question of a tariff is so broad and deep and there are so many and varied interests to be considered, that its unskillful agitation should be avoided. It is a great business problem that ought to be solved by a body of experts drawn from every trade, industry and productive interest. Capital and labor should be properly represented and the fullest and best evidence upon every part of the case should be adduced. A wise revision of the existing tariff would thus be settled upon the basis of sound financial principles, and the question of revenue divorced from mere party politics.

The operations of the 'Bureau of Labor,' established by Congress in 1884, ought to be enlarged and perfected; especially in view of subsequent events and recent experience. Should your nomination result in my election, I can only say that I will endeavor to represent the great interests of Pennsylvania with all the earnestness of my lifelong convictions as a Democrat, and with my best efforts to promote the welfare of those of my fellow citizens who belong to the labor and producing forces of the State. Very respectfully, MAXWELL T. STEVENSON.

Brady Will Squal.

WASHINGTON, September 16.—General Thomas J. Brady, ex-Assistant Postmaster General, is dividing his time between cultivating his farm and writing a book giving the inside history of the Star Route episode and of the "honest count" in the Florida election returns in 1876. General Brady was one of the visiting statesmen, representing the Republican party, assigned to the duty in Florida during the exciting period in 1876, when the country was waiting for the election returns from the State, upon which hinged the fate of the election of Hayes or Tilden as President. What the General does not know about the manipulation of those Florida election returns no one else does, and it is assumed that the statement of the true inwardness of that period of political strategy will create a startling sensation even at this late day. His full revelation of the secret history of the late Star Route episode is bound to produce a sensation which will startle the country and create consternation among certain persons who have heretofore escaped the public gaze in connection with the celebrated investigation and court proceedings.

General Brady was here to-day and was prevailed upon to talk a little. He said: "I propose to place several alleged statesmen and others in the public pillory, in order that their fellow citizens may see them in their true light. I shall embellish my book with fac simile autograph letters and memoranda which will speak for themselves; in short, it will give the true inside history of the Florida election returns of 1876, and of the Star route investigation and trials, with all the collateral incidents, Congressional and otherwise connected therewith. I have shielded a lot of hypocrites and immoral cowards long enough, and there is nothing left for me to do but to publish the true inside history of these events. They may say of me as was said of Rousseau's private memoirs. 'It is mighty interesting reading, but he was a d—d fool to publish them.' I can't help what anybody may say, it is my time now to speak out, and I shall do so fully and fearlessly."

The Mexican Side.

CITY OF MEXICO, September 16.—In his annual message to Congress, read on the assembling of that body to-day, President Diaz said that Mexico's relations with foreign Governments had continued generally on terms of friendship and good understanding. There had, however, recently occurred an incident which threatened to destroy the harmony and cordiality existing between this Republic and its northern neighbor. A case of small importance in itself, it excited in an unexpected manner, owing to a conjunction of circumstances, passions on either side of the Rio Grande.

"I refer," continues the message, "to the matter of the American journalist, which has already come to your knowledge by publications made in the Diario Oficial. We must congratulate ourselves that in such an emergency the dignity of the Government and the good name of the country could be saved without a serious conflict. Thanks to the prudent and strictly legal conduct of the courts and authorities of the State of Chihuahua, as well as the good sense of our people and of the United States, which when better informed, did not insist on its demand, which gave rise to this transient difficulty. Texas papers have on this account alluded to other cases of alleged outrage on citizens of that country by officials of our own. In their eagerness to accumulate charges against Mexico, they have referred mistakenly to the case of an individual named Francisco Erresuris the author of various crimes committed on our territory. It will suffice to observe that Erresuris was of Mexican nationality and was voluntarily delivered by the Texan authorities to a force of the State of Coahuila without any previous demand for his extradition, so that in this case it will be seen that as regards this supposed citizen of the United States, there is no occasion for controversy between the two Governments."

Murder by Imported Laborers.

LIGONIER, Pa., September 19.—Tony Quajlioto, an Italian employed on a pipe line, was brutally murdered Friday evening by two companions of the same nationality named Nicholas Angeli and Frederick Steffin. The three quarrelled over a small money transaction and Angeli and Steffin set upon Quajlioto. After Angeli had crushed in Quajlioto's skull with a pick handle, Steffin jumped on his prostrate form and stabbed him several times in the breast. Death was almost instantaneous. The murder was committed in full view of the other workmen, but in the excitement following the murderers escaped and are still at liberty.

Narcotics and Whisky.

READING, Pa., September 16.—Richard Young, of Lower Montgomery county twenty years ago was worth $40,000. He was a justice of the peace. He had two sisters, Sarah and Margaret. The brother became addicted to drink and now lives in utter poverty at Reiff's Corner, Hatfield township. Only a few days ago the two sisters died in wretchedness and neglect. Sarah was 67 years old. The doctor found her dirty and ragged, couched in a corner in the kitchen. Richard was intoxicated. The doctor left medicine, but on the next visit found that the woman had not taken it. She was on the third floor in a filthy room, quite ill, but able to chew tobacco in bed. Margaret, the other sister, was seventy years old, and suffering from rheumatism and entirely helpless. The neighbors and poor authorities were informed, but before they were informed, but before they arrived Sarah had died. There was no food in the house. Everything was filthy. The people who prepared the woman for burial found things in a horrible condition. While this was going on Margaret died. All their money had been exhausted. They were penniless and without sustenance. Two pine coffins were furnished by the county officials and the women were buried at Leidy's church without any funeral ceremony whatever. There were no mourners. Five families live within a stone's throw. Yet a short time ago the women were respectable, well to do people. Richard was not in a responsible condition when he ordered the coffins, and since then is reported to be also dying. The women spent all their money for laudanum. How they lived the past six months is a mystery. Everything had been spent. For months their house was closed and their misery locked in with themselves, unknown to their neighbors. Their story is the worst of its kind that ever came to light in Montgomery county.

The Heading Filled With Gas.

SCRANTON, Pa., September 19.—At 8.15 to-night the first pick broke through into the heading to Reddy's chamber in the Marvine slope where the entombed miners are supposed to be, and it was found to be filled with gas from roof to floor. It would be impossible for a human being to live in such atmosphere for three minutes. This settles beyond dispute that all the men are dead. Nothing further can be done toward securing the bodies until the gas is removed, which will take from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.
