The Mind Reader's Troubles.

Mrs. Bishop, wife of W. Irving Bishop, the Mind Reader, has published the following statement of her domestic troubles:

I married Mr. Bishop on Saturday, December 4, in all good faith, cherishing toward him a wifely feeling of affection and sympathy, for when our union was solemnized he was quite ill and I was sincerely sorry for his helpless condition and in giving him my hand I felt that it was affording me an opportunity to wait on him as my warm regard prompted me. Never did I dream then of his base return for such a sacrifice.

Since then I have been true to him and my vows and I have nothing to accuse myself with save to much consideration for a being incapable of gratitude. Had it not been for his cruel attempt to advertise himself at the expense of his wife's honor, I should not thus expose him. I first met him abroad several years ago, but then had but a slight acquaintanceship with him. When we parted I never saw him or personally heard from him until his late return to America, when our acquaintanceship was renewed.

He seemed ill and complained of suffering terribly from nervous prostration. I left sorry for him from the first, and this sympathy increasing when I saw that the man was really ill, resulted in our marriage. From that moment my troubles began for at I once learned that I did not enjoy my husband's confidence, but at that time never dreamt the real cause that led him to shun me. It was on the afternoon of our wedding day while we were in Boston that he surprised me by a most novel and startling request.

He stated that his physicians in treating him for nervous prostration had ordered him to abstain from anything that would in the slightest degree excite his nervous system and he requested me for a short time our relationship should continue merely as friends occupying separate rooms while traveling or residing together. This I wonderingly consented to, and some two months passed before my suspicion was aroused by his own actions. But it was not until our return home after his Washington engagement that I made the discovery that he was suffering from a contagious malady.

Being unable to continue living with him longer, I told him we must separate. This was in the last two or three days of January, and he left me at 3.30 o'clock on Feb. 1st, since which time I have never laid my eyes on him. My late visit to Detroit was for two reasons and was with his knowledge and free consent. I went to accompany my sister-in-law, Mrs. J. B. Mack, and her little daughter part of her long return journey to Dakota, her home, and by Mr. Bishop's request left her at Detroit and proceeded to Mount Clement Springs, a medical resort some distance from that city, to consult physicians in regard to his health.

When I reached Mount Clements I learned that after I gave the physicians a description of my husband's condition that his malady was incurable and was slowly sapping his vitality. I wrote Mr. Bishop the result of my mission and informed him of my intention of returning to my parents. I knew he understood the impossibility of my remaining any longer near him, and supposed that he would appreciate my delicacy in thus both shielding his reputation and my own, and let our separation pass unnoticed. It was only when, supposing that I would refrain from mentioning such delicate matters, that he attempted to advertise himself further before the public by basely charging me with unfaithfulness to him and other things that were bad. His charges in regard to familiarities with Mr. Loud, my husband, and others, are malicious and false. Since my separation from Mr. Loud, we have not addressed one word to each other. When we meet we do not speak. He, for one, has acted the part of a gentleman.

Another thing Mr. Bishop has deceived me in. On our wedding day he emphatically stated to me and my parents that he was never married before. I now learn through a New York paper which lately interviewed him that he was not only married before, but that his wife still lives and has a child 11 years old. This lady is now the wife of a Boston theatrical manager. If I understand aright, this is the one that Mr. Bishop claims as his and the manager believes is his. The first Mrs. Bishop was married only a few weeks after the latter separation from her. You can also state that I have instituted proceedings of divorce against my husband.—Mrs. ELEAN BISHOP.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

—Mr. Frank T. Wallace, of Milesburg, was a caller at our office on Saturday. Mr. Wallace gave us some information concerning his brick works, the substance of which we take pleasure in giving to our readers. The Milesburg Brick Works are located nearly midway between Milesburg and Snow Shoe Intersection, and occupy a space covering about eleven acres of ground, 75 x 100 feet of which is under roof. All the latest machinery for making the very best quality of brick may be seen at these works, and the clay used is of a superior quality. In fact no better can be found in the State. The capacity of the works is 11,000 per day—3,000 pressed and 8,000 common, and fifteen men are required to do the work. The common brick are made by hand, and for the pressed machines are used, and they do their work well. The object of the proprietor is to improve the quality each year, and he confidentially asserts that the brick being made now are superior to any yet made. No better recommendation can be had than the fact that his force is running almost day and night so great is the demand. Mr. Wallace furnished all the brick for the new school house, and under his supervision the building was erected. The brick for Bunnell & Aikens building, on the corner of Allegheny and Bishop streets, was also made at these works, and for the iron works now being completed on the site of the old Valentines works, Mr. Wallace furnished and laid over 600,000. The same gentleman has the contract for furnishing all the brick to be used in the new Reynolds building.

—The News says Martha Shortlidge, mother of our townsman, William Shortlidge, died at Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, on the 21st instant, aged 84 years, 10 months and 4 days. She was a member of the Society of Friends and in many respects a remarkable old lady. Even at her advanced age all her faculties were preserved perfectly unimpaired. For instance, her handwriting was remarkably legible and firm; much superior to the writing of an ordinary person in the prime of life. The funeral will take place at noon on Thursday, and Mr. Shortlidge will depart on Wednesday for Media.

—Peter Anderson, a brother of John Anderson, who keeps the restaurant across from the Bush House, met with a terrible accident on Thursday which cost him his life. He was assistant engineer at Moorehead's mill, Pittsburgh, where he had worked for 26 years. While oiling the flywheel he was in some manner caught in the machinery and instantly crushed to death. Mr. Anderson went to Pittsburgh to attend the funeral.

—The richest colored woman in America is Mrs. Amanda Ebanks, of Room, Ga., who pays taxes on $400,000 worth of property, said to have inherited by will from her white father. All over the country colored women are advancing themselves in all financial, intellectual and moral ways. In Philadelphia a colored woman writes for the newspapers and is considered clever and also conducts a special department in the leading organ of the colored race in this country. Miss Charlotte Forton, now Mrs. Frank Grienke, has written for the Atlantic Monthly. A colored woman is a lawyer in New York city, and in other cities of the North are to be found many colored women physicians. It is a little bit curious to know that the first Sunday-school in New York city was started by a colored woman.

School Children's Eyes.

Boston, March 20.—Dr. Whittier, of Brooklyn, has examined during the last few months into the condition of the eyes of the boys of the upper classes in the high school. The physician states that of those examined over 50 per cent. had some affliction of the eye as follows: Myopia, 34 per cent.; hyperopia, 12; other afflictions, 6. Of these 14 per cent. were astigmatic to some extent. Says the doctor: "I propose to examine the same pupils' eyes one year from now to see what changes have taken place, especially in the myopic eyes. So far I find that nearsightedness seems to increase in proportion as our school system becomes more complex and pupils are obliged to apply themselves more closely to their work."

A larger per cent. of myopic eyes are found in the city than in village or country schools. WASHINGTON, March 22.—Yesterday being the Persian New Year's Day, the President's attention was called to that fact and Secretary Bayard was summoned to the White House. The President then wrote a congratulatory dispatch to the Shah and tendered him compliments of the season, which was cabled by Secretary Bayard.

James Brody, aged 13 years, was run over by cars in Scranton on the 21st inst and had both hands cut off.
