William A. Wheeler was born at

Malone, N. Y., June 30, 1819, and entered political life by being elected district attorney of the county on the Democratic ticket. Then he became a whig, and after serving one term in the legislature forsook the law to become cashier of the Malone bank, and for eleven years president of the Northern New York railroad. When the Republicans elected him to the New York senate, in 1858 he was made president pro tem. of that body, and in 1860 he was elected to the United States congress, serving but one terca. He presided over the New York constitutional convention of 1867, and in 1868 was again elected to the house of representatives, where he remained until 1876. His most distinguished service as a congressman was rendered in 1874, when he was chairman of the committee sent to Lousiana to endeavor to restore order in that distracted state. It was a task of the greatest difficulty and delicacy. When President Hayes took his seat it was given out on semi official authority that he would make a new departure by in Pennsylvania where the system will giving the vice president a voice in shaping the policy of the administration -in fact, that he be a sort of consulting member of the cabinet-but the scheme was never carried out and Mr. Wheeler fell into the semi:oblivion usually the lot of the occupants of that chair. He seemed to seek no influence whatever in politics, and when there were the votes in the senate affecting the representation of South Carolina and Louisana he did not exercise his constitutional right of casting the deciding vote. He retired to private life after his term expired, but was an unsuccessful candidate for the senatorial seat vacated in 1881 by the resignation of Roscoe Conkend, Charles, and the reward will be lin.
