Striking at Luncheon-

LONG BRANCH. July 27 .- As has been their custom for several years, all the French waiters employed at the Hotel Elberon and the connecting cottages sruck Monday for higher wages just at the luncheon hour. The dishes were all in readiness as were the guests when the waiters refused to serve the meal unless their pay was increased from forty to fifty dollars a month. Proprietor Jones was summoned and was inclined to discharge all of them, but realizing his perdicament, he at once acceded to the demand of the strikers. Even then the latter was not satisfied and insisted that the Headwsiter Fischer, who is obnoxious to his subordinates should be discharged. The now angered hotel-keeper at once refused their demand and as a result the corps of waiters quit work.

Mr. Jones at once impressed all the available servants as waiters and without much inconveince the meal was served. Some of the fair guests, who clean hickory ashes, put in it three or commended the proprietor's stand in four gallons of water in a deep vessel, the matter assisted in the service.
