established for the purpose of communica-ting from one end of the line to the other. The monster civic and industrial pageant started from Broad and Dauphin streets shortly after 10 o'clock and marched to Broad and Moore streets a distance of nearly five miles, and then countermarched to the starting point, passing through one continuous line of observation stands gaily decorated with flags of all nations. The head of the procession, led by a cordon of mouted police, reached City Hall, Broad and Market streets at 11,40. The crowd was so immense at this point that the police had great difficulty in driving them back. The street was, however, cleared in time to prevent a stoppage of the moving pagent, which proceeded around the west side of City Hall and on past the grand reviewing stand at Walnut street.

There were in line 300 floats, each bearing a representation of some particular branch of industry, 12,000 men, 2,000 horses and 150 bands of music. At the head of the column rode Colonel A. Louden Snowden, chief marshal, and his staff of fifty aides, a standard-bearer and two trumpeters. Directly behind them and leading the column was the United States Marine band, followed by a grand banner representing Columbia pointing to the past Baltimore a large crowd collected around with one hand and with the other to the the station and cheered for the president, present, the former being represented by old implements and conditions, the latter | the train stopped only a few minutes. The display from this point was divided into twenty-three divisions, each being under the charge and supervision of an assistant marshal and several aides.

The honor for heading the first division was given to the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America, who presented a beautiful display. It was headed by a gaily decorated wagon bearing banners with mottoes emblematic of the order. Following cort they were driven to the Lafayette this float came & band and several tableaux on floats typical of events during the rev- [gathered anticipating the arrival, and in olution, and representing the different answer to their repeated calls and cheers nations which make up American population in costumes; a beautiful temple, handsomely decorated, with twenty-eight ladies at the portal, representing the states of the union, "Uncle Sam," the Goddess of Liberty and the thirteen original states represented by Daughters of America, in costume, and a float on which stood representations of the school houses of a century ago, and those of to-day, surrounded by school children. The remainder was made up of the national and state officers and the visiting camps of the Sons of America in full regalia.

The carpenters' company of Philadelphia the oldest industrial association in the country, comprised the Second division. This association was incorporated 150 years ago. The feature of the display by this division was a miniature Grecian temple containing thirteen Corinthian columns, representing the orignal thirteen states. This is a duplicate of the original exhibit of the Carpenters' company in parade of 1788, which commemorated the adoption of the federal constitution. Following this was another temple of Grecian Doric order upon a float, intended to be emblematic of the present grand union o states. On each column was a shield beering the name of each state. The mem bers of the Carpenters' company followed in carriages. The third division was devoted to display of agricultural implements of ancier t and present times. Next came a representation of the flouring mills of 1760 and 1814 and an illustration of the presert mode of manufacturing flour. The typographical fraternity made up the fourth divison. Illustrations of the different modes of printing were given. This division displayed a tableaux of the well known engraving, "The First Proof," and illustrated the old-time way of making type, together with the mode of the present time. Then came a num. ber of floats containing ancient and modern presses, followed by a display of the paper trade.

The presidential party, consisting of the president, Mrs. Cleveland, Secretary Bayard and Colonel and Mrs. Lamont, left Washington at 4 o'clock this afternoon in charge of Major Carson. A he journal before reaching Baltimore detained the train twenty minutes, which was not made up during the journey. At but the latter did not show himself, and arriving at Wilmington, there was a big ing and calling for the president. He finally appeared, in company with Mrs. Cleveland, on the platform and bowed acknowledgment.

At Wilmington the presidential party was met by the Philadelphia reception committee and escorted to Philadelphia. The party were landed at Thirty-second and Market streets. Where the City Troop was in waiting and under their eshotel. Here an immense assemblage had President and Mrs. Cleveland appeared on the balcony and bowed their acknowment amidst tremendous cheering. The president in conversation subsequently expressed bimself highly gratified by the cordiality of his reception.

Governor Beaver gave a public reception to-night at the Academy of Fine Arts and shook hands with about fifteen thousand people. Nearly all the visiting governors were present and President Cleveland arrived during the ceremonies and was most cordially greeted by Governor Beaver and the others assembled in the hall. Ex-President Hayes was also pres ent.

President Cleveland remained a short time and then proceeded to the Catholic club.on. South Broad street, where a reception to Cardinal Gibbons was in progress. The chief magistrate received a corial greeting from the cardinal and was exactly 2.45 p. m. J. Drexell and Geo. W. childs were also cheered. Chairman F. M. Brooke announced that as soon as the President had spoken a few words the members would be given a chance to meet him. President Canby, of the Commercial Exchange, then said, "I have the high honor to present to my fellow members and our guests His Excellency, the President of the United States." The cheering broke out again, and it was some moments before Mr. Cleveland could be keard above the din. After his speech Mr. Cleveland announced himself as being ready to meet the gentlemen the steps of the platform and grasped his band and then shook hands with Secretaries Bayard and Fairchilds, ex. President Hayes, Goy, Beaver, Mayor F fler, A. J Drexel and George W. Childs, who recei ved with him. After the reception the Presidential party drove to the reviewing stand at Broad and Walnut streets to witness the militarys parade. Even during the rebellion there were not as many sold-iers in Philadelphia on any day- as there were to-day. Nearly thirty thousand uniformed soldiers passed in review before the Chief Magistrate and the high officers of this and other Governments, and at their head rode the gallant cavalry hero General Philip H. Sheridan. The enor mous size of some of the displays in yester. of a number of other vessels. Division day's pageant prevented these from

The first mounted officer carried his sword "carry arms." His horse pranced forward, and raising the hilt of the sword slowly to the height of his shoulder, drew it quickly in front of his face, and when a few moments had elapsed he let it drop courteously. President Cleveland removed his hat and inclined his head gravely. There was a burst of applause. Cheer⁸ went up from the platform in front of the Union_League and the reviewing stand fairly shook with applause. The line had hardly progressed any distance before the color-bearers dipped the National and Post flags low and gracefully, and off came the President's hat, and there was another burst of applause all along the street. Men waved their hats in recognition of the cordial feeling that was manifested by the Grand Army organization. It was not long before some of the old nowder-stained and battle-rent flags came along and they, too, were dipped. President Cleveland eventually removed his hat and remained with his head uncovered throughout the whole length of the Grand Army line.

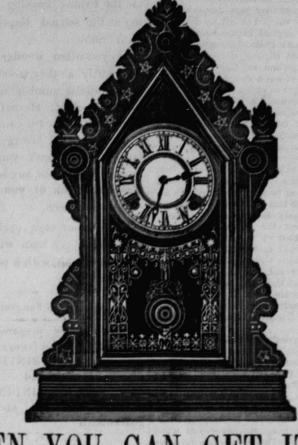

> There were numerous interchanges of military courtesies between the president and the men in line, and many evidences that the Grand Army men had none but the most cordial feeling towards the executive.

> The band at the head of Post No. 7 played "Hail to Tthe Chief," and the throng cheered. And the battle flags were dipped while more applause followed. Post No. 182, of New York, and Post No. 10, the "Old Guard," dipped their battle flags and saluted. In fact the courtesies were uniform without making any exception in any case. A citizens' corps in Garfield Post 4, cheered with hats off as they passed the president.

The Grand Army line was a long one. It took forty minutes for it to pass the reviewing stand, but throughout its entire length the President stood with uncover 1 head, and nearly every time "the flags were dipped there was applause. ...

THE GREAT DEMONSTATION

OVER THE ADOPTION OF THIS COUNTRY'S CONSTITUTION.

PHILADELPHIA, September 15 .- The last centennial of the event of revolutionary times began this morning. It is safe to say that there were at least 200,000 vis itors from a distance, in addition to the thousands from adjacent counties of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, and hard'y a state or territory remains unrepresented in the three days' festival.

The sreets to-day presented an ap pearance that is lovely in the extreme. In all directions as far as the eye can reach it was one mass of bunting and decoration. Many of the newspaper offices and public buildings made a lavish display, the decorators having worked early and late to complete their work in time. At daylight this morning they were still at work putting on the finishing touches, which have been more or less delayed by inclement weather. Every arrangement has been made by those in charge and the day was one of the most eventful ones in the history of the civilized world.

Amid the gay holliday attire of the streets there is nothing more conspicuous and artistic than three triumphal arches that span Broad and Chesnut streets. The Broad street arch is the principal one. It was crected by the centennial commission and is sixty feet high, springing from each curb : is in plain semi-circle form and segment on the south side with illuminated shields of the thirty-eight illuminated shields of the thirly-eight states forming the union, and on the north side the names of each being back to back. The thirtsen original states oc-cupy the middle position of the group, and the others placed alongside in the order in which they came into the union. Surmounting the arch is a mammoth device consisting of an American eagle and a of the old man-of-war Hartford were disstand of national colors.

There were sixteen telegraph stations states maintail not y cornty

Division five consisted of delegations from the various educational institutions of the United States. This division was headed by the University of Pennsylvania. The Indian training school was represented in this division, several mounted Indians riding at the head.

Division six was composed of the build. ing trades, every branch of that industry being represented. Division seven was a representation of saw, engine and tooy works. Division eight was composed of the old Volunteer Firemen's association Twenty-three companies were in the division. The brewers made up the Ninth division, and the tenth was devoted to an exhibition of the coining money in the United States mint, and the workings of present, and one by one they walked up the postoffice.

The Knights of the Golden Eagle 5,000 strong, made up the eleventh. The twelfth was a display of the products of the textile industry. The thirteenth division was taken up by a display of the silk industry. The clothing trade comprised the foureenth division. The fiftcenth division was a display by
