

goods. I have some who do n thing but make plain skirts. Others do the embroidery. I have two who cut out patterns, and so the work is divided up.

In other factories a similar method of conducting the work was found. In some, however, the girls are paid by the piece, instead of by the week. In all, the girls are contented and seem to enjoy their work. All kinds of shrouds are made in these shops, excepting the robes worn by the pauper dead. Some of these unfortunates in life are kindly allowed by the city authorities to make their own burial garments. In several of the institutions the inmates are kept at work fashioning the plain cotton gowns which adorn most of the unknown graves in the Potter's Field. A leading manufacturer states that fully two thirds of the dead are buried in shrouds. Nearly all Catholics insist on the use of burial robes.

It is a queer trade, but to those who are engaged in it, it is not an unpleasant one, and the shroud makers of Gotham are the best paid as a rule of any needle-workers in the city.

CHOOSING A HUSBAND.

Husbands are not made to order; they just grow. To get a good one you have to know him when you see him. He may not look like the man your fancy painted, yet you will recognize in him the qualities that go to make up the reliable, enterprising, amiable man. As a rule women are not possessed of acute, business minds and are not as observant as they might be. One after another they will fall into the same open trap, just as though they were blindfolded or were impelled by some uncontrollable force. The majority of them seem to think they must marry and all that is necessary is to find a man that is good-looking or rich. The average girl first takes a fancy to a pretty man, and thinks and dreams of his lovely hair, charming eyes elegant dress divine mustache and dove-like voice. She declares that he is too sweet for anything. This fever passes off in time, but too often it leaves a perverted taste. A dandy figure, swell manners, and clattering tongue are apt to even outweigh a good heart industrious habits and moral worth. Even after marriage visions of the early ideal rise up to disturb the serenity and tranquility of the domestic scene. Better such an ideal had never been formed.

SNATCHED AWAY ALMOST AT THE ALTER.

George Smith, a fine looking young sailor, who lives in Brooklyn while not on the high seas, is in a curious predicament. After a brief courtship he married nineteen-year-old Annie Lawrence of 348 Hicks street, on Wednesday, by the Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, of Grace church. He had not first declared his intentions to Mrs. Lawrence, the mother of the bride, and she was so indignant when she learned of the marriage that she compelled her daughter to return home with her before she had an opportunity to examine the quarters which her sailor husband had prepared for her, and put an emphatic veto on the honeymoon proceedings. The disconsolate husband told his sad story to Justice Massey yesterday, and begged him to take measures to bring his stubborn mother-in-law to terms. A note was sent to Mrs. Lawrence by the Justice, telling her that she must not restrain her daughter of her liberty. Smith is especially anxious to recover his bride as he has to go on a long voyage in a few days. Mrs. Lawrence says that her daughter can go with her sailor husband if she wants to. Annie she declares, was not only foolish enough to marry Smith, but even to pay the $3 which she earned last week to the minister who performed the ceremony.

NAPOLEON AND SHERIDAN.

It was in October 1864, after the battle of Cedar Creek, in Virginia, in which General Sheridan defeated the last attempt of General Early to invade the North by way of the Shenandoah Valley that I heard President Lincoln, at the War Department in Mr. Stanton's room, speaking to him of General Sheridan and of his victories over General Early, state that of all our fighting generals Sheridan was more like Napoleon than of any of them; more like him particularly in the forehead and in the mould of the bust. The President said he thought the Shenandoah Valley would never be the highway for another rebel advance into Maryland. The likening of the General to Napoleon in his personal appearance about the head was followed by expressions from the President that Sheridan had actually done on that point what N. had

It was that famous Sheridan's ride that saved Washington from a panic like that produced in July 1864. Mr. Stanton had in his room on his mantel a little book of about 500 pages, which contained as a frontispiece a likeness of Napoleon and he took it, and turning to the frontispiece, handed it to the President, saying that there was a resemblance about the forehead and bust. Sometime prior to this, when our armies were being slaughtered by piecemeal in Virginia Mr. Stanton had received a letter from a prominent person calling his attention to a saying of Napoleon's that one commander for an army was better than two armies with independent commanders, when he told me to get him the book on Napoleon from the library. They talked for some time about General Sheridan who had several days before this Cedar Creek battle defeated Early and I heard Mr. Stanton then say to the President that Grant and Sheridan would end the war very soon with such fighting. It was afterward in connection with their saying of Napoleon that the President is reported as having said that one had general was better than two good ones.

DUNNIG LETTERS ARE ILLEGAL.

Chief Postal Inspector O'Leary yesterday received a copy of the congressional act approved June 18, making it an offense punishable by a fine of from $100 to $5,000 and imprisonment from one to ten years, to send through the mails an envelope or postal card, containing obscene, scurrilous or threatening printing or a dup. All such matter is declared non-mailable.

This does away with the "Bad Debt" envelope issued by some of the collection agencies.

They Caught the Limited Offer.

Some time ago says the Suntury Daily the Pennsylvania railroad officials offered to each passenger on the limited express holding a ticket purchased west of Philadelphia a rebate of $5 if the train did not arrive in Jersey City on time. Saturday night for the first time limited was two and half minutes late, and a general rush for the ticket office ensued. About $600 in rebates was paid out as per agreement, but it is not expected that this will occur again.
