TRAMP'S THREATS.

The Utterances of an Anarchist Greatly Excite Buffalo.

He Told a Farmer That That City Would Soon See the Greatest Configuration in Its History and Exhibited an Alleged Bomb.

BUFFALO, Feb. 6 .- The News publish account of strange threats uttered at a farmhouse on the country road between this city and il amburg by a tramp, which acquire ominous ignificance in the light of the great fire of Saturday morning. C. W. Lampman, a far ser aving two and a half miles from Ho none; relates that a short time ago a vinduous tramp applied at his house for food It was given to him, and while eating it he was particularly violent in his denunciation of property owners. Said he:

"We'! make these rich folks hump some of them day, curse them,"

Mr. Lampman engaged the tramp versation and learned that he was a of a hand of Anarchists. The tran has levet every few months in the ... cities. Then he made this start

FORCED TO SUICIDE.

A Baroness Compelled to Kill Herself and Rudolph Murdered.

A MOST REMARKABLE STORY

The Husband and Brother of the Unfortunate Woman Commanded Her to Take Poison and Then Shot the Crown Prince Dead.

LONDON, Feb. 5-Advices from private sources of information in Vienna give some startling facts in regard to the beautiful baroness who committed suicide at the same time as the crown prince. The husband of the lady and her brother are said to have confronted her with indisputable proof of the knowledge of a liaison existing between herself and Archduke Rudolph.

She was then urged by her husband, who is as proud a noble as the empire boasts, and also by her brother, to redeem her fault in their eyes by taking her life.

The husband is said to have told her that if she refused to follow this advice he would shoot the archduke dead as readily as he would his own gamekeeper under similar circumstances and that he would publish her shame at court by proclaiming it to Francis Joseph and the court dignitaries.

The poor woman cowed at the thought of disgrace, which would blight her proud name, and believing that by acceding to the demands of her infuriated husband she would retain her honor before the world and save the life of the crown prince, for whom she seems to have had a passionate regard, acceded to her husband's desire and took a dose of poison before his eyes, her brother looking coldly on.

The family to which the baroness belonged, it is said, was of a rank and pride little below that of her husband's, which accounts for this somewhat brutal conduct on her brother's part.

As soon as they were assured of the death of the baroness they mounted their horses and rode in hot haste to the hunting lodge of

There they fully canceled the blight cast upon their family honor by blowing out the archduke's brains, as he lay propped up with pillows in bed waiting for his valet to bring him his coffee. Then they rode furiously off, returning at once to Vienna. Since then neither Baron — nor his brother-in-law have sought concealment at all, or altered their usual habits of daily life. The emperor is believed to be aware of the facts in the case, and his order to publicly declare that the crown prince's death was suicide, an order issued by the emperor without any consultation with Tisza, the Austrian premier, is regarded as an attempt to screen the greater scandal.

The talk about Rudolph's brain giving evidence of insanity, and the reports of his presentiment of an early death all emanated from the imperial circle or from persons falling under the personal influence by the emperor, "bonnes fortunes" of the Archduke

Rudolph were matter for frequent talk in the regimental armories and at the clubs in Vienna, and hardly any of his liaisons escaped the attention of the army officers and fast club set. It is a notable fact, however, in view of the course pursued by the husband and brother of the unfortunate baroness, that her name had never been mentioned in connection with the crown prince.

D. T., in a report to the Canadian minister of went to the place while she was there was not agriculture regarding the condition of affain calculated of itself to arouse talk. GREAT STRIKES

Serious Trouble Expected in the City of Churches.

AN EARLY MORNING FIGHT

A Street Blockaded and a New Man Beaten Into Insensibility -- It Looks Blue for the Men in New York City.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 5.-The aspect of affairs in Brooklyn has materially changed, and it is extremely probable that serious trouble will occur before many hours have passed

Saturday morning and until 2 o'clock in the afternoon it looked as if the strike was broken, and as if all trouble was at an end, but with the outbreak of that afternoon matters assumed a different phase. The riot that occurred at 4 o'clock Saturday will in all probability be repeated with additions.

The executive committee of the strikers was in session twice during the morning, and new pickets were sent to the various parts of the city where the larger number of men were congregated, and these pickets conveyed information of some secret nature to the men.

Police Inspector McLoughlin, who is in charge of the central division of the police forces at the Atlantic avenue stables, is on the lookout for trouble, and says he will not be surprised to hear of a serious outbreak at any moment. The police force is diminished to less than 300 men, reaching along the line of road from Greenwood cemetery to the bridge, and there are no mounted police on duty this morning. Cars are being run on about ten minutes headway, with a guard of three officers to each car, but only a few passengers are being carried.

The strikers congregated in large force in Fifth avenue, and the tracks were barricaded. There were several encounters between the strikers and scabs, and the police made matters merry.

A new driver, named McCarthy, was beaten into insensibility, and it is said has been taken to an hospital. NEW YORK, Feb. 4.-At no time since the great horse car strike was inaugurated has the outlook appeared so blue for the men as it has all day. Their various assemblies held poorly attended meetings, but it was officially stated that the strikers were still firm.

COL. BOWMAN DENIES IT.

He Brands the Death Hed Confession of a

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—The death bed confession Ella Schwartz, wife of Harry Schwartz, the brakeman now serving a sentence in Joliet prison for complicity in the great Rock Island train robbery and the murder of Express Messenger Nichols, is made public here. According to her statement her husband gave her $13,500 of the stolen money concealed in cartridge shells. This money was, after Swartz's arrest, delivered to lawyer W. P. Bowman, of Philadelphia, who came here to defend Schwartz. No trace of this money has ever been secured.

It is also stated that Pinkerton's detectives some time ago accused Mr. Bowman of having received this money, and that Mr. Bowman denied all knowledge of it.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4.—Col. Wendell P. Bowman denies that he has ever received any of the money stolen by Schwartz, the Rock Island express robber.
