

RESCUED IN MID-OCEAN.

The Sinking Danish Passengers Saved by the Missouri.

Picked Up at Sea and Taken to the Azores.

The 672 people who sailed from Copenhagen on the ill-fated Danish March 30, and who were feared to be lost, are all safe. The glad tidings were flashed across the Atlantic cable to Punch, Edye & Co., the New York agents of the Thingyalla Line. The cablegram they received read as follows:

Message received from Lisbon: Passengers and crew all saved. Brought to the Azores by steamer Missouri. The crew and forty passengers follow Missouri to Philadelphia. Remainder still at the Azores.

This message came from Lisbon, Portugal, via Copenhagen, the information having been brought there from the little steamer which plies between that port and Fayal, in the Azores Islands.

The Danish, when she left Copenhagen on March 30, had 628 passengers on board and fifty-four officers and crew. The first news of the disaster was when the City of Chester, which arrived at Queenstown early in April, reported having passed the Danish on April 8 in latitude 43 north, longitude 37 west, in a water-logged condition, and without a soul on board. All the boats were capsized, and a chain dangled from the bow. It was thought at first that some steamer had endeavored to tow her, and finding that the Danish was soon to sink had taken her passengers on board and abandoned her; but as day after day went by, and arriving steamers brought no news of the missing people, the belief became general that all had been lost after taking to the boats.

A cablegram from Lisbon, Portugal, gives the following particulars: Officer Lahan and forty-two of the crew of the steamer Danish are coming here from the Azores. The Danish broke her shaft on April 10 when 800 miles off Newfoundland. Immediately after the accident Engineer Kass was found dead in the engine room, evidently struck by a wheel that had been freed by the breakage of the shaft.

The officers acted coolly, and the crew behaved well. The vessel, powerless, drifted in the trough of the sea, and a leak started made things look serious.

Distress signals were raised, and the day after the accident the steamer Missouri came up with her officers volunteering to do all in their power toward relief. She made room for twenty cabin passengers, and fastening hawsers, began towing the disabled steamer.

After the first day's tow, the Danish began settling noticeably. The second day it grew worse, and she dragged heavily. In the interim the 700 stowage passengers were growing restive and hard to control, and the officers inaugurated military discipline, the crew obeying admirably, greatly assisting in preserving order in the stowage.

At the end of the third day after the accident the officers of the Danish saw that the water was continually gaining on the pumps, and the after portion of the vessel became untenable.

The Missouri had no more room for passengers, but by moving her cargo managed to make room.

The situation on the Danish grew desperate on the third day, and the passengers were transferred, the boats of both vessels being used for the purpose, those of the Danish being afterward abandoned.

When the officers of the Danish left her deck her bow was clear of the water and her stern almost submerged. The Danish was towed to Philadelphia, but with the emergency of her burdensome complement of passengers, headed for the Azores as the nearest point. She arrived there safely and left 320 passengers, together with the officers and crew.

The first officers immediately started back to Copenhagen. The Missouri continued her voyage to Philadelphia with 340 of the Danish's passengers aboard, which port she reached without incident.

The Azores Islands are about 700 miles west of the coast of Portugal. The spot where the waterlogged Danish was sighted by the City of Chester was about 325 miles north-west of Fayal, almost in mid-ocean. The Danish was in the trough of the sea, and had apparently been abandoned some time.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

A Family of Six Murdered and Their House Burned.

A horrible crime was reported from Macon County, N. C. W. P. Wood, an industrious farmer, lived in the country at least five miles from any neighbors. His family consisted of his wife, three sons and two daughters. Three of the children were grown, and the other two were aged twelve and fourteen years. Wood had saved some $700, and had always kept his money in an old trunk. Wood was called away from home on business. When he returned he was horrified to find his house in ashes. A short distance from the ruins he found three axes and two knives, all stained with blood, and the old trunk in which he had kept his money. The trunk was broken open, and its contents were gone. Among the ashes charred bones were found, showing that the entire family had been murdered before the house was fired. There were no clues to the murderers.

VAULTS FULL OF MONEY.

Counting the Millions in the United States Sub-Treasury.

Assistant Treasurer Ellis H. Roberts has begun his official duties at the United States Sub-Treasury in New York, and as required by law there is to be an official count of all the money turned over to the sub-treasury. The count of the cash in the Treasury vaults was begun by fifteen experts from Washington, under the direction of Assistant Cashier J. F. Meline, of the United States Treasury. The work started with the counting of the paper money, gold and silver certificates and United States Treasury notes which aggregate about $25,000,000. Beside the paper money there are $108,000,000 of gold and $23,000,000 of silver to be counted, in addition to United States bonds and other securities. The work of counting this immense sum of money will occupy from three weeks to a month, when the Assistant Treasurer will give his receipt for the amount in the vaults.

QUEER RAILROAD WRECK.

A Freight Train Sinks Into a Fallen-in Coal Mine.

A remarkable freight wreck occurred on the Cairo Short Line, two miles from Belleville, Ill., the other morning. A freight train was running toward Belleville. The track was clear ahead, when suddenly, without any warning, the road-bed began to sink, and the engine and freeman fell themselves rapidly dropping below the surface of the surrounding country. They jumped for their lives, and both escaped with a few bruises. The engine and train went down a distance of ten feet and a terrible wreck followed. The cars, engine and freight were smashed and destroyed in the earth. As soon as the frightened trainmen could recover their wits, they learned that the train was over a coal mine, and that the mine had caved in. Along the track for a distance of 100 feet the road sank from eight to ten feet. Two brakemen, who went down with the wreck, were seriously hurt.

A FATHER'S FRENZY.

Frank Hancock, of Addison, N. Y., Kills His Four Children and Himself.

Mrs. Frank Hancock, of Addison, N. Y., on opening the bedroom door of her house discovered her husband's dead body suspended from a rafter, and four of their children lying dead in pools of blood.

One of the boys, only a year old, who was sleeping in the cradle, was unharmed. The father laid a note, found on the cradle, with a silver watch, in which he said: "I leave my watch to baby. Care for him, and when he grows up give him the watch and say it is from papa. Bury me and the children in the cemetery at Sabinsville."

The frenzied father cut the throats of all the four children, and not content with that, disemboweled them. The oldest was ten and the youngest four. The father's body showed that he had stabbed himself twice in the abdomen and gashed his throat. These wounds did not prove fatal, he slipped a rope around his neck and after an hour stood upon a sawy box, and then kicked it from under him and strangled to death.

An examination of the father's body showed that he stabbed himself twice with a butcher knife and gashed his throat before hanging himself.

At the Coroner's inquest Mrs. Hancock said that she and her husband had not been living happily together. She admitted that she and her husband had agreed to separate on May 1, dividing the children between them.

A HERO OF 1812.

Death of John Fielding at the Ripe Old Age of 110 Years.

John Fielding, a soldier of the war of 1812 and a native of Virginia, died in Laurens County, S. C., a few days ago at the age of 110 years. In 1787, when Fielding was eight years of age, his parents moved to South Carolina and settled on the Tiger River. At the breaking out of the war of 1812 he volunteered, and served until the war ended. He married three times, the last time at the age of eighty-five, and his wife is still living. He had three living children by his first wife, and they are aged men. He was a successful farmer, and although impoverished by the late war, he leaves his widow well provided for. Until within the past three years he has been remarkably active, and in 1884, when at the age of 103, he walked four miles to vote the national Democratic ticket. One or two of his sons, the middle-aged men, were in the Mexican war.

A SON'S QUADRUPLE CRIME.

Patricide, Arson, Assault and Suicide by the Same Hand.

At West Farms, a hamlet about five miles from Westfield, Mass., Joseph King, aged seventy-eight, a whip manufacturer for half a century, well-to-do and highly respected, was shot while sleeping in his bed by his dispirited son of forty-four years.

After shooting his father he attempted to kill his aged maiden aunt, Miss Cynthia Tuttle. He then burned down the house, and three hours later, within a dozen rods of the burned buildings and within hearing of the neighbors who were about to institute a search for the murderer, put a bullet through his own brain.

Where he stood a peaceful dwelling, nothing but a few charred embers remained, and a few rods distant, in a small deserted house, lay the dead bodies of father and son. The father had pistol-wounds in chest, neck and eye, either of which would have been fatal. The son had a ball through his temple.

OKLAHOMA BOOMERS.

The Mad Rush of Settlers Across the Cherokee Strip.

Scenes and Incidents of the First Day's Exodus.

A dispatch from Arkansas City, Kan., describing the exodus of the boomers into Oklahoma, says: Acting under orders from the War Department, the United States troops allowed the boomers to cross the Cherokee outlet on their way to Oklahoma, so as to enable them to
