LINGO IS CONVICTED. THE HISTORY OF A WEEK

Last Scenes in Camden's Great Murder Trial.

HIS NERVE NEVER FORSOOK HIM.

The Prisoner Bears Up Bravely Under the Ordeal-Motion Made for a New Trial-The Judge's Charge to the Jury-He Urges Them to Place Reason Above Passion.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 18.-Yesterday the defense called the last witnesses for the accused in the Lingo murder trial, and some important testimony was heard in relation to the blood stained bushes in the neighborhood of the murder and their mysterious disappearance. The state then entered upon its testimony in rebuttal.

The testimony was all in at 12 o'clock and the jury retired. The court refused permission for the prosecutor to bring in further evidence as to whether blood was found around the body and as to Mrs. Miller's clothes, and both sides

Arguments for and Against Lingo. CAMDEN, N. J., March 19. — The opening argument for the state in the trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Miller was finished yesterday morning, and Lawyer Taylor begun the first speech for the defense. Mr. Wescott followed him and the state will then have another chance. Judge Garrison will sum up, and it is likely that Lingo's fate will be decided today. Something of a mild sensation was aroused by the prosecutor's allegation that the torn sleeve which was produced in evidence had been torn again. Tuesday it was in the hands of the defendant's counsel. Mr. Jenkins asserted that the button had been cut off. This has an importance not seen perhaps at first glance. Lingo alleged that the sleeve bothered him and that he tore it off and threw it away. The state at-tempts to show that the sleeve, even if torn, could not have been an inconvenience if buttoned, and advances the theory that a poor man accustomed to patched clothing would not destroy the sleeve intentionally.

Mr. Wescott Cuts His Hand. CAMDEN, N. J., March 20. — Judge Wescott continued his argument in Lingo's behalf yesterday. In the course of his speech he handled the razor with which the crime is alleged to have been committed with such recklessness as to call forth a warning from Judge Garrison. After declaring that if the wounds had been made with the razor it would have been dulled, he thereupon, to prove that it was sharp, drew it across the back of his own hand, making a deep cut. After cutting himself he asked Lingo to bind the wound. Chalkley Leconey was again an interested listener.

The Last Day.

Campen, N. J., March 21.—At pre-cisely 8:33 o'clock last night the twelve men who held the life of Francis Lingo in their hands filed into the court room with solemn faces and took their seats in the jury box. Judge Garrison was in his seat as soon as notified that the jury were ready. The prisoner showed little of the supreme misery of uncertainty that he must have felt. "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?' asked the clerk. "We have," responded the foreman.

"What say you as to the guilt of this defendant?"

this extreme moment. Seemingly he was the coolest man in the court house when the verdict was announced. A motion for a new taial was at once

The Closing Argument.

The closing argument for the state was finished by ex-Prosecuter Richard S. Jenkins at 10:41 yesterday, much sooner than had been expected. The conclusion of his speech was somewhat abrupt, and it appeared as though he was physically unable to continue further. It was an evident relief, however, to the jurymen, especially as Judge Garrison postponed charging them until 1 o'clock, giving them an opportunity to have dinner first. The Judge's Charge.

When the court reassembled Judge Garrison read his charge in a clear, concise voice. He first recited the story of Mrs. Miller's disappearance, the finding of the body and the arrest of Lingo. He said: "This testimony which you have listened to for over a week you must consider and decide whether it catisfies you beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. When I say a reasonable doubt, I do not mean a mere probable doubt. The law means such a doubt as precludes in your mind a belief in on a meral cartainty of the a belief in or a moral certainty of the guilt of the prisoner.

After setting for the state's theory of the assault, outrage and murder in the woods and the evidence of Lingo's presence in the woods, the blood on his clothes and on the razor, Judge Garrison said that if the jury believed that from the evidence, the state's theory was established, it was their duty to convict, but if they had a reasonable doubt of the truth of this evidence it was their duty not to convict.

Place Reason Above Passion.

Place Reason Above Passion.

The judge then went into a lengthy review of the evidence, explaining the law in each case in a simple and positive manner. He concluded as fol-"In this case, gentlemen, be guided by your judgment, not your passions; by your reason, not your prejudice. Heed only the evidence in this case and the law as laid down to you, and your

Judge Garrison concluded his charge Court then adjourned until 8 o'clock p. m., but it was half an hour later when the jury returned with the ver-dict which consigns Francis Lingo to the gallows.

In your throat, which makes you cough once in a while and keeps you constantly clearing your throat, arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilia. Is any people who have taken this medicine for scrofula, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and other troubles, have been surprised that it should cure this troublesome cough. But to know the actual cause of the cough is to solve the mystery. Many cases of consumption can be traced back to the neglect of some such slight affection as this. Consumption can be controlled in its early stages, and the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, building up the general health, and expelling the scrofmons tamt which is the cause of catairh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom this dreaded disease seemed to have a firm hold.
