A MOTHER'S STORY.

The Tragic Death of Crown Prince Budolf Recalled.

THE TREACHERY OF A COUNTESS.

The Young Baroness Confided in London, Aug. 31.—A double suicide, or a murder and suicide, occurred at Mayerling, Austria, on Jan. 30, 1889, that shocked the world and caused a great sensation. At that time the young Baroness Mario de Vetzera was found dead, along with her lover, the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria.

So many rumors were circulated at the time concerning the young girl that her mother. Baroness de Vitzera, resolved that the whole truth should be known, and to this end edited a story, which was put into the form of a volume, to vendicate her daughter, and fifty copies were printed. The emperor learned of the intended publication, and orders were issued which caused the seizure of the volumes. The manuscript was saved, and from it the story is told.

A Mother's Narrative. It gives a consecutive narrative of the affair in so detailed a way that its accuracy apparently cannot be called into question. An important feature, according to the mother's story, is the infamons part played in the tragedy by no less a personage that the niece of the empress of Austria. The distinguished lady's actions are given with the fullest of detail, and the pamphlet accuses her of being not only the intermediary but a blackmailer as well. Baroness Marie's blackmailer as well. Baroness Marie's vote within one year from naturalization, arraigns the Republican and Demmade public, and the story is told how a fortune teller was made to play a mysterious part in the tragedy.

Briefly summarized, and as told in the young girl's letters, the story is that Baroness Marie Vetzera, then 17 years old, fell in love at first sight with the crown prince, and that she frequently mat him in the crown prince, and that she frequently met him in the ordinary social way. Finally she entrusted her secret to Countess Larisch, the empress of Austria's niece, and this lady at once undertook to act as a go between, while taking advantage of her knowledge of the state of affairs to levy blackmail from the press of Austria herself.

A Countess' Treachery.

At one time the mother of the girl suspected that something was amiss, but Countess Larisch was ready with some plausible tale. The facts of all this are given in great detail in the mother's pamphlet. At last the girl fled to Mayorhing, by prearrangement with the prince, and a few hours later her death was known by the emperor, but not by the mother, who in vain implored the chief of police and Count Tante, the Austrian premier, to cause a search to be insti-tuted for her daughter. The truth of the double suicide or murder and sui-cide is at last definitely established by this publication. The news of the death was broken to the mother by the em-press of Austria hereals.

The pamphlet shows that the prince's mind had long before been given to thoughts of suicide, but that Marie did her best to dissuade him from this fatal step. It was not until hope for both of them had fled that she resolved to share

For the first time is revealed the in-dignities offered to her dead body. How she was carted away in a sitting pos-ture between her two uncles, even a coffin being denied her relatives when moving her; how her mother was persecuted and vilified, how everything was done to lay the blame on the girl, forms a harrowing story as told by the mother. The slieged talschoods circulated about her are exposed and the daughter's dying messages given.

TWO MORE BODIES FOUND.

Mayor Grant Makes a Discovery in the Park Place Ruins.

New York, Sept. 1.—Mayor Grant made a personal visit to the scene of the Park place disaster yesterday. He poked about in the ruins in the vault under the sidewalk, and was horrified to discover the charred and mutilated body of a man. What looked like another human being was lying near by.
Word was immediately sent to the board of health and the coroner's office, and the mayor has issued directions that all of the wreckage be cleared away at

The first body discovered is supposed to be that of Abraham Derkaveritch, of 141 Delancey street. He was employed in the bronze leaf factory of Rosenfeld & Co. The body was not much burned, although at first it looked to be. The second body is thought to be that of a man named Blitz, who was also in the employ of Rosenfeld & Co.

Commissioner Robbins and Ohief Bonny of the fire department called at the mayor's office late in the afternoon and threw the whole blame of the matter on Contractor Crimmins, who certified to them that every inch of ground had been gone over and that no more debris or bodies remained on the scene. They promised to carry out the mayor's instructions immediately. About the ruins the air is heavy with the odor of decomposed human flesh, and it is probable that more bodies will be found.

Nine English Miners Killed. London, Sept. 1.—An explosion took place in the Malago colliery, near Bed-minster, Somersetshire. A large number of miners were at work in the mine at the time of the disaster. A dull, rumbling sound underground, followed by a cloud of coal dust issuing from the shaft first announced that some terrible party was at once organized, and had not been long at work when they signailed that a fire damp explosion of a most serious nature had occurrud, and that they had already found five dead miners. The bodies of these unfortu-nate men were then hauled to the surnate men were then hauted to the surface. A moment or so later four other minars, all seriously injured, were brought out of the mine, and it was announced that many others were known to be either dead or seriously injured.

The committee on rules reported that the state convention shall be composed as follows: The members of the executive and state central committees shall be ex-officio members; there shall be one delegate for each member of the house of representatives, and in addition one delegate for each one hundred votes or fraction thereof. The county conventions are given power to appoint delegates and proxies. During the session Professor Samuel Dickie, of New York, national chair-man, made his appearance on the stage, and was greeted with loud applause.

The platform, besides the usual plants against the manufacture and traffic in intoxicating liquors, denounces the Baker ballot law, declares in favor of amended naturalization laws so that a naturalized citizen shall be allowed to on all classes of property, declares that revenues from imports of foreign pro-ducts should be so levied as to protect home labor against foreign labor, declares against monopolies and demands that the money circulation of the country should be ample for its trading interests and should be increased adequately to the growth of the business and population. The platform was supplemented by a resolution opposing the opening of the World's fair on Sunday.

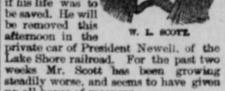

The nomination of candidates was next in order. W. W. Hagne, of War-ren, was nominated for anditor general by acclamation, and George Drayton. of Media, was nominated for state treasurer.

Appropriate resolutions regarding the death of the late Charles S. Wolf were unanimously adopted.

West Chester's Cigarette Victims. West Chester, Pa., Aug. 31.—Two young men of this place became vio-lently insane through excessive cigarette smoking, and one of them has died. The latter, Walter McBride, 33 years of age, became crazed and had to be strapped to his bed, and continued so until his death, the result, as his physician cian declares, of the constant use of cigarettes. The other young man, Le-wellyn Quillen, was seized with acute hysteria. He is now lying tied down in his bed to prevent him from doing himself bodily injury, and constantly begs for cigarettes. His condition is critical.

Although partly paralyzed since Thursday he retained consciousness to the last. The funeral will take place on Tuesday.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 29.—An accident occurred at the Mill Creek colliery last evening. Hamilton Seymour, an English miner, has been employed in the mine for many years. He was subject to fits. Last evening while in the act of firing a blast, he was seized with a fit and fell to the ground. The charge exploded and blew the unfortunate man to pieces.

CARLISLE, Pa., Aug. 29.—One of the most successful exhibitions ever held by the grangers was brought to a close last evening. During the day speeches were made by Hon. A. T. Taggart and Hon. E. M. Lewsbury. Many other mem-bers of the order made short addresses on the question of holding a constitu-tional convention. The exhibition will be held at the same place next year.

READING, Pa., Aug. 29.—The con-tinuous rains of the past several weeks have been unfavorable for the late crop of potatoes. Reports have been received from a number of districts to the effect that, owing to the wet weather, potatoes are rotting in the ground. Upon the strength of these reports potatoes, which were selling in the country districts at 20 cents per bushel, have advanced.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 1. — James E. Reilly, one of the best known journalists in the Lehigh valley, died yesterday of hasty consumption, aged 38 years. He had been connected with the Easton Daily Argus for ten years, and before that reported on the Easton Daily Free Press. Mr. Reilly was the correspond-ent from this section of The Evening Telegraph, of Philadelphia, for the past ten years, and for papers in other cities. A wife and six children survive him.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31.—Side by side in one casket covered with flowers lay wished dead bodies of the suicide, Lizzie Wilson, and her babe, at the residence of the dead girl's mother. The body of the mother lay partly on the left side, and on her left arm was her infant, For an hour or more a constant stream of people passed through the house and viewed the remains. HAMBURG, Pa., Aug. 29.—Hundreds of people daily visit the scene of the extensive washout on the Lebanon Valley railroad, between Sinking Spring and Wernersville. No other repairs have been made than to lay a temporary track around the washout, and the scene is still as it was on Monday morning after the flood had done its work. Most of the hands were transferred to the Reading and Columbia branch where two hundred men have been at work all the week. It is expected that, according to the progress already made, a temporary track will be completed by to-

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—In the United States circuit court Judge Acheson handed down an opinion in the case of the Pennsylvania Railroad company versus Townsend Whelen et al. and the Allegheny Valley Railroad company, decreeing that the sale of the latter road must be made upon the original bill filed by the Pennsylvania railroad in 1884, which provides that the sale be made subject to a lien on mortgages.

The income bookholders intervened, sking that the sale be made upon the discharge of the liens on mortgages.

The effect will be that the purchasers of the road will be required only to pay the interest on the mortgages instead of satisfying them. The formal decree of sale has not yet been made.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Charles Lawrence, the assistant cashier of the Keystone National bank, who is undergoing a sentence of seven years imposed by Judge Butler more than a week ago in the United States district court, has made a full confession.

made a full confession.

The confession, which is addressed to ex-Bank Examiner Drew, fully unfolds the method pursued by the bank officials to deceive the examiner and all others having anything to do with the government and the institution.

It sets forth that from 1890 down to about the time of the closing of the bank in March, 1891, methods were adopted deceive the keenest official. The means employed for deception could only be suggested and the fraudulent transactions carried on by cheeved non.

Highest of all in Leavening Power .- U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1839.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Progress Notwithstanding Protection. That our country is making enormous progress in nearly all lines of industry no one doubts. As to the causes of this progress there is a radical difference of opinion. The protectionists hasten to claim it as the natural and inevitable result of their policy of protection to American industry—not seeing that such a claim does little honor to American enterprise and American inventiveness. and overlooks entirely our vast resources, which are not equaled by those of any other country on earth.

We make progress, but it is as Edward

Atkinson expresses it, A strong man can run, although he has a pebble in his shoe. Suppose some Rip Van Winkle of the Middle Agos-a time when steam was unknown-should now wake up on board of one of our magnificent ocean steamers. He sees the shores rapidly receding behind him, although the vessel is steaming directly in the teeth of the wind. The fact puzzles our Rip Van Winkle. He has never seen a ship moving directly against the wind, and yet he has never seen a vessel propelled by any other than wind power. Hence he is sure that wind power is still the only power that can propel a ship, although he must admit that the ship is steering straight against the wind. In his inexperience of the great strides which modern enterprise and invention have made he overlooks the throbbing engine which is forcing the vast bulk forward and persists in his antiquated notion that in the same way the wind is getting in its work.

Thus with the Rip Van Winkles of protection. They are sure that only the out wind of protection can propel the ship of state. They forget the mighty motive power-our broad acres of wheat and corn, our rich mines and forests, our inventiveness and enterprise which are driving the ship of state to its port.

The protectionists are a curious folk. Protectionists give themselves needless alarm when we buy more abroad than we sell there, and hence they advance a high tariff to keep our people from being ruined by what they call an "unfavorable balance of trade." But people do not need that the government tell them when they are doing a losing business. Every separate article sold by us in Europe is bargained for by two intelligent merchants. Neither of these can ship a penny's worth without the consent of the other. The old saying holds true that it takes two to make a bargain; and
