DA FONSECA RESIGNS

The Dictator Overthrown by a Revolt in Rio Janeiro.

GENERAL PEIXOTO NOW PRESIDENT

The Brazilian Capital in a State of Excitement and Business Generally Suspended-The News Received with Cheers and Exclamations of Satisfaction.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 24 .- A revolution broke out here yesterday and Da Fonseca at once resigned in favor of Flori-ano Peixoto. The opposition to Dictator Fonseca has gathered sufficient force to break through the barriers erected by the government to hold it in check and to make itself master of the situation. No deta's have ye' been received as to the precise methods adopted. All that is known is that the uprising was so formidable that Fonseca considered it impossible longer to maintain his ascendancy and has surrendered his authority. In retiring, or "resigning," as he calls it, he declared that he did so in favor of Floriano Peixoto, the vice president or vice chief of the provisional government of which Fonseca was the head. Whether the opposition will be content to allow Peixoto, about whom little is known here, to assume the leadership of the state is not known.

Rio de Janeiro is in a state of great excitement, but no reports have come as yet indicating mob law or serious disorder. The uprising, however, has had the effect of putting a stop for the time being to all kinds of business. The ex-changes are closed and everybody is so changes are closed and everybody is so interested in watching political developments that no thought is given to commercial pursuits or business engagements. The news that Fonseca had resigned spread through the city like wildfire. Everywhere it was received with enthusiastic cheers and exclamations of satisfaction. clamations of satisfaction.

The Fallen President. Manoel Deodora da Fonseca was born in 1834, and on his father's side at least comes of Portuguese stock. The family in Portugal was wealthy and the father, early in this century, receiving some con-cessions of land in the province of Rio Grande do Sul, emigrated to Brazil, where he married a Brazilian lady, and became the father of three sons, of whom the future president of the republic was the eldest.

In the war with Paraguay, which ended in 1870, Deodoro won distinction in the battle of Mossoro, being promoted from lieutenant to major on the field. On his return to Rio, the Emperor Dom Pedro bestowed upon him the Order of the Rose, they made him the Rose; then made him commandant of the army in Matto-Grosso province, and finally placed him in charge of the cartridge factory and magazine at Rio, and raised him to the rank of general.

Fonseca is a man of portly and impressive physique, of medium height, with nose slightly inclined to be aquiline, and wears a full beard, now somewhat streaked with grey. His sons were educated in an American school, and one of his daughters is married to an American, the husband of the other being an Englishman.

The New President. General Floriano Peixoto, the new president of Brazil, is one of the most eminent men of the Republic. He rose to the rank of adjutant general of the army under the empire. In April, 1890, he was made minister of war, in suc-cession to Senor Benjamin Constant, who was transferred to another department because the soldiers were clamoring for a chief who had been more closely identified with military affairs. In August, 1890, Ruy Barbosa was ousted from the ministry of finance, because of dissatisfaction with a decree that ordered 20 per cent. of all customs duties to be paid in gold, and General Peixoto was made his successor, retaining that position until there was a complete change in the ministry in January last, resulting from a vote of censure on the cabinet passed by the congress. General Peixoto had meanwhile been serving as provisional vice president of the republic under Fonseca, and in February, as already stated, was formally elected to and inaugurated in that position under the provisions of the new

Washington, Nov. 24.—Minneapolis gets the Republican National convention. It will be held June 7. General James S. Clarkson will manage the Republican presidential campaign next year. This is the story of the action of the Republican National committee in a nutshell. There was, perhaps, never such a bitter struggle for the location of a convention.

All the cities which put in bids worked hard and spent a great deal of money.

The resignations of Messrs. Quay and Dudley, of the committee, were accepted by the Republican National committee, by the Republican National committee, and the action of the executive committee naming J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, as Quay's, and William Barbour, of New York, as Dudley's successor, was approved. The contest between Mr. McBride and Mr. Bartch as the representative of Utah on the committee was described by the c tive of Utah on the committee was decided in favor of the former, George A.
