

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE BROOKLYN DIVINE'S SUNDAY SERMON.

Subject: "The New Year."

TEXT: "This year thou shalt die."—Jeremiah xlviii, 10.

Jeremiah, accustomed to saying bold things, addressed Hananiah in these words. They proved true. In sixty days Hananiah had departed this life.

This is the first Sabbath of the year. It is a time for review and for anticipation. A man must be a genius at stupidity who does not think now. The old year died in giving birth to the new, as the life of Jane Seymour, the English queen, departed when that of her son, Edward VI., dawned.

The old year was a queen. The new is a king. The grave of the one and the cradle of the other are side by side. We can hardly guess what the child will be. It is only two days old, but I prophesy for it an eventful future. Year of manly and womanly. Year of patient and suffering. It will laugh; it will sing; it will groan; it will die.

Is it not a time for earnest thought? The congratulations have been given. The Christmas trees have been taken down or have well nigh cast their fruit. The friends who came for the holidays are gone in the rail train. While we are looking forward to another twelve months of intense activities the text breaks upon us like a bursting thunderhead.

"This year thou shalt die." The text will provoke in some of us some of the old questions. It will ask of the fact that all of us who are over thirty-five years of age have gone beyond the average of human life. The note is more than due. It is only by the sin that we are not collected. We are like a debtor who is taking the "three days' grace" of the banks.

Our race started with nine hundred years for a lifetime. We read of two antediluvian youth whose early death disappointed the hopes of their parents by dying at seven hundred and seventy-seven years of age. The world then may have been ahead of what it is now, for men had so long a time in which to study and invent and plan.

If an artist or a philosopher had forty years for work he would make great achievements; but what must the artists and philosophers have done who had nine hundred years before them? In the nearly two thousand years before the flood, considering the longevity of the ancients, there must have been nearly as many people as there are now. The flood was not a freshet, that washed a few people off a plank, but a disaster that may have swept away a thousand million. If the Atlantic Ocean by a lurch of its waves had poured its waters into this hemisphere and the Pacific Ocean by a sudden lurch of the earth should drown the other hemisphere, leaving about as many beings as could be got in one or two ocean steamers, it would give you an idea of what the ancient flood was.

At that time God started the race with a shorter allowance of life. The nine hundred years were hewn down until, in the time of Vespaian, a census was taken and only one hundred years were permitted. There were found one hundred years old and three or four persons one hundred and forty years old. Now a man who has come to one hundred years of age is a curiosity, and we go miles to see him. The vast majority of the race passes off in twenty years. To every apple there are five blossoms that never get to be apples. In the country church the sexton rings the bell rapidly until almost through and then tolls it. For while the bell of our life rings right merrily, but with some of you the bell has begun to toll, and the adeptness of the text to you is more and more probable. "This year thou shalt die."

The character of our occupations adds to the probability. Those who are in the professions are endeavoring to strengthen the brain and nerve foundations. Literary men in this country are driven with whip and spur to their topmost speed. Not one brain worker out of a hundred observes any moderation. There is something so stimulating in our climate that if John Brown, the essayist of Edinburgh, had lived here, he would have broken down at thirty-five instead of fifty-five, and Charles Dickens would have dropped at forty. There is something in our life that makes us prone to predilection to disease. If we be stout, to disorders ranging from fevers to apoplexy. If we be frail, to diseases ranging from consumption to paralysis. Printers rarely reach fifty years. Watchmakers, many of you there, show their age in their own. Chemists breathe death in their laboratories, and potters absorb paralysis. Painters fall under their own brush. Foun-drymen take death in with the filings. Shoemakers pound away their lives on the last. Dryden, in his old age, was worn out by his own lives on the last. Millers grind their own lives with the grist. Masons dig their own graves with the trowel. And in all our occupations and professions there are the elements of death.

Rapid climatic changes threaten our lives. By reason of the violent fits of the thermometer, within two days we live both in the arctic and the tropic. The warm south wind finds us with our furs on. The wintry blast cuts through our coats and under the hoof, the wheel, the drum, the assassin, wait their chance to put upon us their quietus. I announce it as an impossibility that three hundred and sixty-five days should pass and leave us all as we now are. In what direction to shoot the arrow I know not, but so I shoot it at a venture. "This year thou shalt die."

In view of this I advise that you have your temporal matters adjusted. Do not leave your worldly affairs at the mercy of administrators. Have your receipts properly passed, and your letters filed, and your books balanced. If you have "trust funds," see that they are rightly deposited and accounted for. Let no widow or orphan scratch on your tombstone. This man wronged me in my inheritance. Many a man has died leaving a competency, whose property has, through his own carelessness, afterward been divided between the administrators, the surrogate, the lawyers and the sheriff. I charge you, before many days have gone, as far as possible, have all your worldly matters made straight, for "this year thou shalt die."

I advise, also that you be busy in Christian work. How many Sabbaths in the year? Fifty-two. If the text be true of you it does not say at what time you may go, and therefore it is unsafe to count on all of the fifty-two Sundays. As you are as likely to go in the first half of the year as in the last half, I think we had better divide the fifty-two into halves and calculate only twenty-six Sabbaths. Come, Christian men, Christian women, what can you do in twenty-six Sabbaths? Divide the three hundred and sixty-five days into two parts, what can you do in one hundred and eighty-two days? What, by the way of saving your fancy, the church and the world? You will not go through all the ages of eternity in heaven, get over the day, and the outrage of going into glory and having helped none up to the same place. It will be found that many a Sabbath-school teacher has taken into heaven her whole class; that Daniel Baker, the evangelist, took two thousand into heaven; that Toddridge has taken in hundreds of thousands; that Paul took in a hundred millions. How many will you take in? If you get into heaven and find none there, that you see and that there are none to come through your instrumentality, I beg of you to crawl under some seat in the back corner and never come out lest the angels get their eyes on you and some one cry out, "That is the man who never lifted hand or voice for the redemption of his fellows. Look at him, all heaven." Better be busy. Better put the plow in dew. Better say what you have to say quickly. Better cry "Alas, better fall on your knees. Better lay hold with both hands. What you now leave undone for Christ will forever be undone. "This year thou shalt die."

In view of the probability mentioned, I advise all the men and women not ready for eternity to get ready. If the text be true, you have no time to talk about non-essentials, asking why God let sin come into the world, or whether the book of Jonah is inspired, or who Melchisedec was; or what about the eternal decrees. If you are as near eternity as some of you seem to be, there is no time for anything but the question, "What must I do to be saved?" The dying man, when a plank is thrown him, stops not to ask what sawmill made it, or whether it is oak or cedar, or who threw it. The moment it is thrown, he clutches it. If this year you die, there is no time for anything but immediately saying hold to God. It is high time to get out of your sins. You say, "I have committed no great transgressions." But are you not aware that your life has been a sin? The snow comes down on the Alps flake by flake, and it is so light that you may hold it on the tip of the finger without feeling any weight; but the flakes gather; they compact, until some day a traveler's foot starts it, and it goes down in an avalanche, crushing to death the villagers. So the sins of your youth, and the sins of your manhood, and the sins of your womanhood may have seemed only slight inaccuracies or trifling divergences from the right path, but they are like the snow, mentioning; but they have been piling up and piling up, packing together and packing together, until they make a mountain of sin, and one more step of your foot in the wrong direction may slide down upon you an avalanche of ruin and condemnation.

A man crossing a desolate and lonely plateau, a hungry wolf took after him. He brought his gun to his shoulder and took aim, and the wolf howled with pain, and the cry woke up a pack of wolves, and they came ravening out of the forest from all sides and horribly devoured him. Thou art the man. Some one sin of your life summoning on all the rest, they surround thy soul and make thee a wolf's hole, and with an embrace, wild with the ecstasy of heaven, old friends meet again. Away with your stiff, formal heaven! I want none of it. Give me a place of infinite and eternal sociality. My feet free from the cloths of earth, I shall bound the hills with gladness and break forth in a laugh of triumph. Ah! ah! We weep now, but then we shall laugh. "Abraham's bosom" means that heaven has open arms to take us in. Now we fold our arms over our hearts and tell the world to stand back, as though our bosom was a two-barred gate to keep the world out. Heaven stands not with folded arms, but with heaven open. It is "Abraham's bosom." I see a mother and her child meeting at the foot of the throne after some years' absence. The child died twenty years ago but it is a child yet.

I think the little ones who die will remain children through all eternity. It would be no heaven through the little darlings. I do not want those that are in heaven to grow up. We need their infant voices in the great world. And when we walk out in the fields of light, we want them to run ahead and clap their hands and pick out the brightest spots in the flowers. Here is a child and its mother, and here is a mother and her mother just arrived. "How changed you are, my darling!" says the mother. "Yes," says the child, "this is such a happy place, and Jesus has taken such care of me, and heaven is so kind, I get right over the fever with which I died. The skies are so fair, mother! The flowers are so sweet, mother! The temple is so beautiful, mother! Come, take me up in your arms as you used to. Oh, I do not know how we should like to stay in heaven and give our mother no rest. We will break down in the song from overleight! I once gave out in church the hymn:

There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign,
An aged man standing in front of the pulpit sang heartily the first verse and then he sat down weeping. I said to him afterward, "Father Linton, what made you cry over that hymn?" He said, "I could not stand it—the joys that are coming." When heaven rises for the doxology I cannot see how we can rise with it all. Give our everlasting delight come upon the soul—billow of joy after billow of joy. Methinks Jesus would be enough for the first day in heaven, yet here He approaches with all heaven at His back. But I must close this sermon. This is the last January to some who are present. You have entered the year, but you will not close it. Within these twelve months your eyes will shut for the last. Other hands will plant the Christmas tree and give the New Year's congratulations. As a proclamation of joy to some and as a warning to others, I leave in your ears these five words of one syllable each, "This year thou shalt die."

Let me announce that Christ, the Lord, stands ready to save any man who wants to be saved. He waited for you all last year, and all the year before, and all your life. He has waited for you with blood on His brow and tears in His eye, and two outstretched, mangled hands of love.

You come home some night and find the mark of muddy feet on your front step. You hasten in and find an excited groan around your child. He fell into a pond, and had it not been for a brave lad, who plunged in and brought him out and carried him home to be resuscitated, you would have been childless. You feel that you cannot do enough for the rescuer. You throw your arms around him. You offer him any compensation. You say to him: "Anything that you want shall be yours. I will never cease to be grateful to you." But my Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking, and attempts to bring it ashore, and you not only refuse Him thanks, but stand on the beach and say, "Drop that soul! If I want it saved, I will save it myself."

You might know what a job Jesus undertook when He carried your case to Calvary. They crowded Him to the wall. They struck Him. They spat on Him. They kicked Him. They cuffed Him. They scooped at Him. They scourged Him. They murdered Him. Blood and sweat and tears ran down to lift you up the crimson drops upon you from His brow, from His side, from His hands. Do you not feel the warm current on your face? Oh, for thee the hunger, the thirst, the thorn sting, the suffocation, the struggle, the death.

A great plague came in "Marseilles. The doctors held a consultation and decided that a corpse must be dissected or they would never know how to stop the plague. A Dr. Guypren said, "To-morrow morning I will proceed to a dissection." He made his will prepared for death; went into the hospital; dissected a body; wrote out the results of the dissection and died in twelve hours. Beautiful self-sacrifice you say. Our Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking and saw a plague-stricken race. Sin must be dissected. He made His will, giving everything to His people. He comes down into the reeking hospital of earth. He lays His hand to the work. Under our plague He dies—the bloody and the sick, the pure for the sinner, the innocent for the guilty. Behold the love! Behold the sacrifice! Behold the rescue!

Decide on this first Sabbath of the year whether or not you will have Jesus. He will plant the Christmas tree and give you the New Year's congratulations. With some here His plan ends right speedily. "This year thou shalt die."

This great salvation of the Gospel I now offer to every man, woman and child. You cannot earn it. You cannot merit it. A Scotch writer says that a poor woman on a cold winter's day looked through the window of a king's conservatory and saw a bunch of grapes hanging against the glass. She said, "Oh, if I only had that bunch of grapes for my sick child at home!" A poor spinning wheel she earned a few shillings and went to buy the grapes. The king's gardener thrust her out very roughly, and said he had no grapes to sell. She went off and sold a blanket and got some more shillings, and then she came back to buy the grapes. But the gardener roughly assaulted her and told her to be off. The king's daughter was walking in the garden at the time, and she heard the excitement, and seeing the poor woman, said to her, "My father is not a merchant to sell to you. He is a king and gives." Then she reached up and plucked the grapes and dropped them in the poor woman's apron. So Christ is a king, and all the fruits of His pardon He freely gives. They may not be bought. They may not be earned, and without price, take this sweet cluster from the vineyards of God.

I am coming to the close of my sermon. I sought for a text appropriate for the occasion. I thought of taking one in Job: "My days fly as a weaver's shuttle," of a text in which I might say, "I do not want you to say that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," of the prayer of the vine dresser: "Lord, let it alone this year also," but pressed upon my attention first of all, and last of all, and above all, were the words: "This year thou shalt die."

Perhaps it may mean me. Though in perfect health now, it does not take God one week to bring down the strongest physical constitution. I do not want to die this year. I have plans and projects on foot that I want to see completed; but God knows best, and He has a thousand better men than I to do the work yet undone. I have a hope that, notwithstanding all my sins and wanderings, I shall, through the infinite mercy of my Savior, come out at the right place. I have nothing to brag of by way of Christian experience; but two things I have learned—my utter helplessness before God and the all-abounding grace of the Lord Jesus. If the text means some of you, my heart, I do not want you to say, "I do not want you to say that I am unprepared. I would like to have you, either through money you had laid up or a "life insurance," be able to leave the world feeling that your family need not become paupers. But if you have done your best and you leave not one dollar's worth of estate, you may confidently trust the Lord who hath promised to care for the widow and fatherless. I would like to have your soul fitted out for eternity, so that if any morning or noon evening or night of the three hundred and sixty-five days, death should look in an ask, "Are you ready?" you might, with an outburst of Christian triumph, answer, "Aye, aye, all ready."

I know not what our last words may be. Lori Chesterford prided himself on his politeness, and said in his last moment, "Give Dayrolles a chair." Dr. Adam, a dying schoolmaster, said: "It grows dark. The boys may dismisse." Lori Tenderlea, supposing himself on the bench of a court-room, said in his last moment, "Gentlemen of the jury, you will now consider your verdict." A dying play actor said: "Drop the curtain. The farce is played out." I would rather have for my dying words those of one greater than Chesterford or Dr. Adam or Lori Tenderlea. "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me."

The sooner the last hour comes the better if we are fitted for entrance in the celestial world. There is no clock in heaven, because it is an everlasting day; yet they keep an account of the passing years, because they are all the time hearing from our world. The angels flying through heaven report how many times the earth has turned on its axis, and in that way the angels can keep a diary; and they say it is almost time now for father to come up, or for mother to come back some day to see a cohort leaving heaven, and they say, "Whither bound?" and the answer is, "To bring up a soul from earth," and the question is asked, "What soul?" And a family circle in heaven find that it is not one of their own that is to be brought up, and they come out to watch, as on the beach we now watch for a ship that is to bring our friends home. After a while the cohort will leave in sight, flying nearer and nearer, until with a great clang the gates hold, and with an embrace, wild with the ecstasy of heaven, old friends meet again. Away with your stiff, formal heaven! I want none of it. Give me a place of infinite and eternal sociality. My feet free from the cloths of earth, I shall bound the hills with gladness and break forth in a laugh of triumph. Ah! ah! We weep now, but then we shall laugh. "Abraham's bosom" means that heaven has open arms to take us in. Now we fold our arms over our hearts and tell the world to stand back, as though our bosom was a two-barred gate to keep the world out. Heaven stands not with folded arms, but with heaven open. It is "Abraham's bosom." I see a mother and her child meeting at the foot of the throne after some years' absence. The child died twenty years ago but it is a child yet.

I think the little ones who die will remain children through all eternity. It would be no heaven through the little darlings. I do not want those that are in heaven to grow up. We need their infant voices in the great world. And when we walk out in the fields of light, we want them to run ahead and clap their hands and pick out the brightest spots in the flowers. Here is a child and its mother, and here is a mother and her mother just arrived. "How changed you are, my darling!" says the mother. "Yes," says the child, "this is such a happy place, and Jesus has taken such care of me, and heaven is so kind, I get right over the fever with which I died. The skies are so fair, mother! The flowers are so sweet, mother! The temple is so beautiful, mother! Come, take me up in your arms as you used to. Oh, I do not know how we should like to stay in heaven and give our mother no rest. We will break down in the song from overleight! I once gave out in church the hymn:

There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign,
An aged man standing in front of the pulpit sang heartily the first verse and then he sat down weeping. I said to him afterward, "Father Linton, what made you cry over that hymn?" He said, "I could not stand it—the joys that are coming." When heaven rises for the doxology I cannot see how we can rise with it all. Give our everlasting delight come upon the soul—billow of joy after billow of joy. Methinks Jesus would be enough for the first day in heaven, yet here He approaches with all heaven at His back. But I must close this sermon. This is the last January to some who are present. You have entered the year, but you will not close it. Within these twelve months your eyes will shut for the last. Other hands will plant the Christmas tree and give the New Year's congratulations. As a proclamation of joy to some and as a warning to others, I leave in your ears these five words of one syllable each, "This year thou shalt die."

Let me announce that Christ, the Lord, stands ready to save any man who wants to be saved. He waited for you all last year, and all the year before, and all your life. He has waited for you with blood on His brow and tears in His eye, and two outstretched, mangled hands of love.

You come home some night and find the mark of muddy feet on your front step. You hasten in and find an excited groan around your child. He fell into a pond, and had it not been for a brave lad, who plunged in and brought him out and carried him home to be resuscitated, you would have been childless. You feel that you cannot do enough for the rescuer. You throw your arms around him. You offer him any compensation. You say to him: "Anything that you want shall be yours. I will never cease to be grateful to you." But my Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking, and attempts to bring it ashore, and you not only refuse Him thanks, but stand on the beach and say, "Drop that soul! If I want it saved, I will save it myself."

You might know what a job Jesus undertook when He carried your case to Calvary. They crowded Him to the wall. They struck Him. They spat on Him. They kicked Him. They cuffed Him. They scooped at Him. They scourged Him. They murdered Him. Blood and sweat and tears ran down to lift you up the crimson drops upon you from His brow, from His side, from His hands. Do you not feel the warm current on your face? Oh, for thee the hunger, the thirst, the thorn sting, the suffocation, the struggle, the death.

A great plague came in "Marseilles. The doctors held a consultation and decided that a corpse must be dissected or they would never know how to stop the plague. A Dr. Guypren said, "To-morrow morning I will proceed to a dissection." He made his will prepared for death; went into the hospital; dissected a body; wrote out the results of the dissection and died in twelve hours. Beautiful self-sacrifice you say. Our Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking and saw a plague-stricken race. Sin must be dissected. He made His will, giving everything to His people. He comes down into the reeking hospital of earth. He lays His hand to the work. Under our plague He dies—the bloody and the sick, the pure for the sinner, the innocent for the guilty. Behold the love! Behold the sacrifice! Behold the rescue!

Decide on this first Sabbath of the year whether or not you will have Jesus. He will plant the Christmas tree and give you the New Year's congratulations. With some here His plan ends right speedily. "This year thou shalt die."

This great salvation of the Gospel I now offer to every man, woman and child. You cannot earn it. You cannot merit it. A Scotch writer says that a poor woman on a cold winter's day looked through the window of a king's conservatory and saw a bunch of grapes hanging against the glass. She said, "Oh, if I only had that bunch of grapes for my sick child at home!" A poor spinning wheel she earned a few shillings and went to buy the grapes. The king's gardener thrust her out very roughly, and said he had no grapes to sell. She went off and sold a blanket and got some more shillings, and then she came back to buy the grapes. But the gardener roughly assaulted her and told her to be off. The king's daughter was walking in the garden at the time, and she heard the excitement, and seeing the poor woman, said to her, "My father is not a merchant to sell to you. He is a king and gives." Then she reached up and plucked the grapes and dropped them in the poor woman's apron. So Christ is a king, and all the fruits of His pardon He freely gives. They may not be bought. They may not be earned, and without price, take this sweet cluster from the vineyards of God.

I am coming to the close of my sermon. I sought for a text appropriate for the occasion. I thought of taking one in Job: "My days fly as a weaver's shuttle," of a text in which I might say, "I do not want you to say that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," of the prayer of the vine dresser: "Lord, let it alone this year also," but pressed upon my attention first of all, and last of all, and above all, were the words: "This year thou shalt die."

Perhaps it may mean me. Though in perfect health now, it does not take God one week to bring down the strongest physical constitution. I do not want to die this year. I have plans and projects on foot that I want to see completed; but God knows best, and He has a thousand better men than I to do the work yet undone. I have a hope that, notwithstanding all my sins and wanderings, I shall, through the infinite mercy of my Savior, come out at the right place. I have nothing to brag of by way of Christian experience; but two things I have learned—my utter helplessness before God and the all-abounding grace of the Lord Jesus. If the text means some of you, my heart, I do not want you to say, "I do not want you to say that I am unprepared. I would like to have you, either through money you had laid up or a "life insurance," be able to leave the world feeling that your family need not become paupers. But if you have done your best and you leave not one dollar's worth of estate, you may confidently trust the Lord who hath promised to care for the widow and fatherless. I would like to have your soul fitted out for eternity, so that if any morning or noon evening or night of the three hundred and sixty-five days, death should look in an ask, "Are you ready?" you might, with an outburst of Christian triumph, answer, "Aye, aye, all ready."

I know not what our last words may be. Lori Chesterford prided himself on his politeness, and said in his last moment, "Give Dayrolles a chair." Dr. Adam, a dying schoolmaster, said: "It grows dark. The boys may dismisse." Lori Tenderlea, sup-

Curiosities of Punishment.

An examination of the different entries contained in the Machyn diary sheds a strong light on crime and criminal punishment during the reign of Mary, who served the English people from 1552 to 1558.

First he mentions a young fellow who was tied to a post, "hard by the Standard Chop," with a collar of iron about his neck, and soundly whipped every two hours "for five days by two stout men, for the crime of pretending to see visions. Further on we read: "Chcken, a parson of St. Nicholas, Cold Harbor, was this day driven about the streets of London in a cart, the parson himself dressed in a yellow gown;" all of this because he had sold his wife to the butcher! Was it only a coincidence that a butcher was one of the parties to this transaction, or was it the intention of "the goody man" to have his better half served up in roasts? As it is now nearly 350 years since "the parson" committed that uncanny crime, it is doubtful if we ever find out whether she "went to the skillet" or not.

According to other items in Machyn one can readily see that purveyors of provisions were the same kind of mortals then as they are to-day. They were inclined to palm off their base goods a sound; to use their arts to take in the customer, only the punishment inflicted when the fraud was discovered was somewhat more personal and severe than it is now. Machyn says that a butcher of that time who had exposed diseased meat for sale "was forced to ride about the streets of London, his face toward the horse's tail with half a lamb before and another half behind, and beef and veal borne before him on a long pole." Men who sold spoiled fish were put in the pillory with decayed fish strung about their necks.

The entry of March 3, 1557, says: "Seen Thomas, the shoemaker, soundly thrashed at Cheapside to-day for making a high priced boot of a cheap quality of leather."—St. Louis Republic.

Finest Harbor in the World.
Rio Janeiro, Brazil, situated in the bay of the same name, has probably the finest harbor in the world. It is entered from the south through a passage not more than 1700 yards wide, between steep hills rising more than 1000 feet and extending inland about fifteen miles, thus forming one of the most spacious and most beautiful harbors in the world. The entrance, girded on both sides with lines of impregnable fortifications, can be made without pilots and the largest vessels can anchor immediately at the quays of the city and enter its magnificent docks.—Detroit Free Press.

There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign,
An aged man standing in front of the pulpit sang heartily the first verse and then he sat down weeping. I said to him afterward, "Father Linton, what made you cry over that hymn?" He said, "I could not stand it—the joys that are coming." When heaven rises for the doxology I cannot see how we can rise with it all. Give our everlasting delight come upon the soul—billow of joy after billow of joy. Methinks Jesus would be enough for the first day in heaven, yet here He approaches with all heaven at His back. But I must close this sermon. This is the last January to some who are present. You have entered the year, but you will not close it. Within these twelve months your eyes will shut for the last. Other hands will plant the Christmas tree and give the New Year's congratulations. As a proclamation of joy to some and as a warning to others, I leave in your ears these five words of one syllable each, "This year thou shalt die."

Let me announce that Christ, the Lord, stands ready to save any man who wants to be saved. He waited for you all last year, and all the year before, and all your life. He has waited for you with blood on His brow and tears in His eye, and two outstretched, mangled hands of love.

You come home some night and find the mark of muddy feet on your front step. You hasten in and find an excited groan around your child. He fell into a pond, and had it not been for a brave lad, who plunged in and brought him out and carried him home to be resuscitated, you would have been childless. You feel that you cannot do enough for the rescuer. You throw your arms around him. You offer him any compensation. You say to him: "Anything that you want shall be yours. I will never cease to be grateful to you." But my Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking, and attempts to bring it ashore, and you not only refuse Him thanks, but stand on the beach and say, "Drop that soul! If I want it saved, I will save it myself."

You might know what a job Jesus undertook when He carried your case to Calvary. They crowded Him to the wall. They struck Him. They spat on Him. They kicked Him. They cuffed Him. They scooped at Him. They scourged Him. They murdered Him. Blood and sweat and tears ran down to lift you up the crimson drops upon you from His brow, from His side, from His hands. Do you not feel the warm current on your face? Oh, for thee the hunger, the thirst, the thorn sting, the suffocation, the struggle, the death.

A great plague came in "Marseilles. The doctors held a consultation and decided that a corpse must be dissected or they would never know how to stop the plague. A Dr. Guypren said, "To-morrow morning I will proceed to a dissection." He made his will prepared for death; went into the hospital; dissected a body; wrote out the results of the dissection and died in twelve hours. Beautiful self-sacrifice you say. Our Lord Jesus sees your soul sinking and saw a plague-stricken race. Sin must be dissected. He made His will, giving everything to His people. He comes down into the reeking hospital of earth. He lays His hand to the work. Under our plague He dies—the bloody and the sick, the pure for the sinner, the innocent for the guilty. Behold the love! Behold the sacrifice! Behold the rescue!

Decide on this first Sabbath of the year whether or not you will have Jesus. He will plant the Christmas tree and give you the New Year's congratulations. With some here His plan ends right speedily. "This year thou shalt die."

This great salvation of the Gospel I now offer to every man, woman and child. You cannot earn it. You cannot merit it. A Scotch writer says that a poor woman on a cold winter's day looked through the window of a king's conservatory and saw a bunch of grapes hanging against the glass. She said, "Oh, if I only had that bunch of grapes for my sick child at home!" A poor spinning wheel she earned a few shillings and went to buy the grapes. The king's gardener thrust her out very roughly, and said he had no grapes to sell. She went off and sold a blanket and got some more shillings, and then she came back to buy the grapes. But the gardener roughly assaulted her and told her to be off. The king's daughter was walking in the garden at the time, and she heard the excitement, and seeing the poor woman, said to her, "My father is not a merchant to sell to you. He is a king and gives." Then she reached up and plucked the grapes and dropped them in the poor woman's apron. So Christ is a king, and all the fruits of His pardon He freely gives. They may not be bought. They may not be earned, and without price, take this sweet cluster from the vineyards of God.

I am coming to the close of my sermon. I sought for a text appropriate for the occasion. I thought of taking one in Job: "My days fly as a weaver's shuttle," of a text in which I might say, "I do not want you to say that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," of the prayer of the vine dresser: "Lord, let it alone this year also," but pressed upon my attention first of all, and last of all, and above all, were the words: "This year thou shalt die."

Perhaps it may mean me. Though in perfect health now, it does not take God one week to bring down the strongest physical constitution. I do not want to die this year. I have plans and projects on foot that I want to see completed; but God knows best, and He has a thousand better men than I to do the work yet undone. I have a hope that, notwithstanding all my sins and wanderings, I shall, through the infinite mercy of my Savior, come out at the right place. I have nothing to brag of by way of Christian experience; but two things I have learned—my utter helplessness before God and the all-abounding grace of the Lord Jesus. If the text means some of you, my heart, I do not want you to say, "I do not want you to say that I am unprepared. I would like to have you, either through money you had laid up or a "life insurance," be able to leave the world feeling that your family need not become paupers. But if you have done your best and you leave not one dollar's worth of estate, you may confidently trust the Lord who hath promised to care for the widow and fatherless. I would like to have your soul fitted out for eternity, so that if any morning or noon evening or night of the three hundred and sixty-five days, death should look in an ask, "Are you ready?" you might, with an outburst of Christian triumph, answer, "Aye, aye, all ready."

I know not what our last words may be. Lori Chesterford prided himself on his politeness, and said in his last moment, "Give Dayrolles a chair." Dr. Adam, a dying schoolmaster, said: "It grows dark. The boys may dismisse." Lori Tenderlea, sup-

There is reported to be enough coal in Colorado to supply Kansas and Nebraska.

$100 Reward. $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreadful disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, Etc.

FOR THROAT DISEASES AND COUGHS use BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Like its really good things, they are limited. The genuine are sold only in boxes.

Mothers should watch carefully those signs of ill health in their daughters, and at once use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will prove a lasting blessing.

The Convenience of Solita Trains.
The Erie is the only railway running solid trains over its own tracks between New York and Chicago. No change of cars for any class of passengers. Rates lower than via any other first-class line.

Wise Mothers.
Use Dr. Hoxie's Certain Croup Cure, the only remedy in the world that cures a violent case of croup in half an hour. No opium. Sold by druggists or mailed on receipt of 50 cts. Address: A. F. Hoxie, Buffalo, N. Y.

It is STOPPED FREE BY DR. KLINE'S GREAT NERVE EXHAUSTION. No fits after first day's use. Marvellous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free. Dr. Kline, 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

DR. SWAN'S PASTILLES Cure female weakness; his T-Tablets cure chronic constipation. Samples free. Dr. Swan, Beaver Dam, Wis.

WHO SUFFERS with his liver, constipation, biliousness, poor blood or dizziness—take Beecham's Pills. Of druggists, 25 cents.

Many modest women suffer rather than apply to a physician; Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of such from lives of misery and early graves.

Read Star Stretcher advert. in this paper.

FARMERS: LOOK OUT!
You are exposed to sudden changes of temperature, and to injuries.

ST. JACOBS OIL
Cures RHEUMATISM, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CUTS, WOUNDS, SORENESS, STIFFNESS, SWELLINGS, BACKACHE, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, BURNS.
A PROMPT AND PERMANENT CURE.

DR. TALMAGE'S "LIFE OF CHRIST."
Covering the great time, from the Christ-Land. Illustrated with over 400 wonderful engravings, also a grand picture of Jerusalem in its glory. A complete history. No capital needed. H. H. P. A. V. Also send names and P. O. of Agents or those who will send you a copy of the book and get you a list of agents. Address: HISTORICAL PUB. CO., PHILA. PA.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
DO NOT BE DECEIVED. It is the best. It cleans, and polishes, and shines the hands, the iron, and the brass. It is the best. It cleans, and polishes, and shines the hands, the iron, and the brass. It is the best. It cleans, and polishes, and shines the hands, the iron, and the brass.

W. BAKER & CO'S Breakfast Cocoa from which the excess of oil has been removed, is absolutely pure and it is soluble.

No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EARLY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

IF
You don't want comfort, if you don't wish to look well dressed, if you don't wish the best, then you don't want the Lace Back Suspender. Your dealer has it if it is given. If he hasn't, he shouldn't be your dealer. We will mail a pair on receipt of $1.00. Name genuine without the stamp as above.