DISCUSSING SILVER.

Opening of the Great Debate in the Lower House of Congress.

BLAND AND HARTER CROSS SWORDS

The Former Urges That the Nation's Only Hope Is in Free Coinage, While the Latter Claims That Only Disaster Can Result from Such Action.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The silver bill was taken up for consideration in the house yesterday, in accordance with the special order adopted some time ago. The champions on both sides have been preparing for the contest, and the prospects are that it will prove a very bitter struggle. In anticipation of a lively fight the public filled the galleries to their greatest capacity.

In opening the discussion Mr. Bland, chairman of the committee on coinage, weights and measures, and the author of the bill, spoke in part as follows:

"It was just 100 years ago that the wise founders of this government, in pursuance, adopted what we call 'the double standard.' They provided for the coinage of gold and silver without limit at the mints of the United States; that silver should be coined the same as gold, should have the advantages and the same recognition. The silver dollar should consist of 371 4-15 grains of silver—precisely the dollar of silver that is called for in this bill. This bill provides that gold and silver shall be equal at the mints.

"In order that this equality should be preserved, it is necessary that silver should be put on the same plane in regard to the issue of certificates at the mint as gold. To-day the law provides that gold bullion may be taken to the mint of the United States and certificates issued to the owner, or that he may be paid for it in money. He is not required to wait for its coinage. The whole fight over this issue is between the capitalists who demand interest, and the people who demand money instead of interest."

Continuing Mr. Bland said that when you demonetized silver the world over gold itself was gone. If that day should come when silver was demonetized he did not care how soon gold went with it. The money of the world would then be disembodied and metallic money would then be a thing of the past. Gold and silver had been twin brothers since the days of civilization. When you severed the ligature between them they were dead. The benefit to be derived from this bill was that it restored the old power of the two metals and it preserved to this country the standard of money based upon both metals. If our gold went abroad and our silver remained here we still would have the same volume of money.

Mr. Bland was followed by Mr. Williams, who made the minority report on the bill for the anti-silver Democrats. He asserted that the bill deliberately undertook to depreciate the standard of value. In conclusion he submitted as an amendment the bill contained in the report of the minority of the committee, providing for an international monetary conference.

In opposing the measure Mr. Harter, the leader of the anti-silver Democrats, said Mr. Bland's claim that the passage of the bill would make money more plentiful was misleading and untrue. All the laws that congress could pass from January to December, from now until eternity, would not materially alter the market (or world) value of silver. The trusting farmer, who today was tending by with bated breath, waiting for the salvation which the Bland bill was to bring him, would find it becoming a law would sweep away one-half of the saving of his life time. Truly Mr. Harter would prove a worse curse to the farmer than all the dry seasons, wet seasons, frosts, cyclones, locusts, chinch bugs and protective tariffs he had suffered from during the past decade.

That it would deeply wrong the creditor was beyond a doubt true, for it was one of the results of this kind of crime that it hurt practically everybody. The creditor class, properly speaking, made up ninety per cent. of our people, for every man who was solvent belonged to the creditor class. The real creditors, said Mr. Harter, were: First, the 4,258,903 who own the $1,524,846,596 of deposits in savings banks. Free coinage would cost them $457,453,351. Second, the 800,000 pensioners whose pensions would be cut down $47,000,000 in one year. Then the 5,000,000 life insurance policy holders, who would lose $2,250,000,000. Then the 500,000 men and women who have invested in building and loan associations, and then the millions of clerks, men in the army, navy and civil service, who would get but seventy cents on the dollar. Every time the money of a country was debased these were the classes which suffered most. The Bland bill, he said, while called a free coinage bill, was really a bill compelling the nation to buy all the silver the silver ring could get together, no matter how much it might prove to be, at 129.25 per ounce. This would utterly and hopelessly bankrupt the country and might, in the end, create a revolution and ultimately change our form of government.

Mr. Raynor, of Maryland, opposed the measure and said in substance: "Our present silver dollar is dishonest. It does not come up to the test that I have referred to, and it is not a dollar in any sense of the word, except in so far as a congressional fiat or a government device can make it so. We have two kinds of dollars in circulation—one that is honest and properly labeled; the other is dishonest and falsely labeled. If the dollar is not worth a dollar how is it that it passes for a dollar from hand to hand and has purchasing power equal to that of the gold dollars. The answer is that legislation has given it an artificial value. There is no one to profit by the bill but the mine owners. They compel the government to place the emblem of a dollar with the emblem of the republic upon seventy cents worth of bullion, and it is worse than counterfeiting and is an artifice and trick upon the people. No such juggling with the finances could ever succeed."

Messrs. Taylor and Hopkins (Rep., Ills.) spoke in opposition to the measure. Messrs. Epps (Dem., Va.), Crawford (Dem., N. C.) in favor, and Mr. DeForest (Dem. Conn.) against it.

At the evening session speeches were made in favor of the bill by Messrs. Lewis (Dem., Miss.), Bowers (Rep., Cal.), Wynn (Dem., Ga.) and Post (Rep., Ills.), while it was opposed by Weedcock and O'Donnell (Dem., Mich.) and Covert (Dem., N. Y.).

—A copy of the Dayton Times, Ohio, was received and it contains a portrait of Major C. G. McMillen, who has been nominated by the democrats of that city for Mayor. Mr. McMillen a short time ago was the proprietor of the Brockerhoff House, this place and was a popular landlord. He is at present engaged in the hotel business in that city; he and his brother conduct the Dickey House, the leading hotel of that place. We hope he will receive a handsome majority on the day of election.

—There came to the Pennsylvania railroad freight station, at Phillipsburg, last week, a consignment of patent rat traps for J. F. Barber & Co., which were left in the depot overnight. The next morning when Agent Rumberger opened up the warehouse he was surprised to see that said traps had captured 32 rats. Tom Ashcroft's rat terriers were taken down to the scene and it took the two little dogs less than seven minutes to dispatch the whole lot. J. F. B. & Co., ought to be able to sell such traps without much advertising. It was a big catch of rats anyhow.
