May Day passed off in Europe without any serious disturbances, a few explosions in several places doing comparatively little damage. Instead of the red dragon of anarchy the dove of peace hovered over Europe, and with few exceptions order prevailed everywhere.

In England, where free speech and the right of peaceable assemblage was respected, the workingmen met in public places and intelligently and temperately discussed the means of attaining their ends through legislative enactments. A frothy tongued anarchist who sought to create a disturbance in Hyde Park, London, was dragged from the speaker's stand and hustled beyond the outskirts of the assemblage, which numbered nearly 500,000. The streets of Paris, France, and all the public buildings were heavily guarded with military and police, and outdoor meetings were prohibited there and elsewhere throughout the Republic, from all parts of which quiet day was reported.

Spain also was quiet, the only startling incident being in Seville, where a priest found a bomb with ignited fuse in the confes-

In Italy the elaborate police precautions sufficed to prevent any outbreaks, except at Forli, were two bombs were exploded, one at the prison. No damage was done with the exception of smashing some window representations.

In Germany, generally, and in Austria rain put a damper on the ardor of the op-ponents of all law, and this combined with the precautions of the authorities, served to give those countries a peaceful day. The only reported outbreak of any moment was at Liege, where the mob attacked a company of soldiers who were marching through a street, but were dispersed after two bombs had been exploded without, however, causing any loss of life.

Altogether, it would seem that the authorities have succeeded in badly scotching the anarchistic snake, and that the real workingmen of Europe are most disposed to kill it than to warm it into life, and are inclined to seek redress for their wrongs by the peaceful way of political agitation.

London witnessed one of the largest labor demonstrations in its history, marked by only one disquieting incident. Up to 6 p. M. the police around Hyde Park had made arrests only for drunkenness and disorderly conduct in isolated cases. Shortly after noon a sentinel at the Woolwich Arsenal discovered at the entrance of the gun factory a bag con-taining eight canisters loaded with dyna-mite, gun cotton and cartridges. He mite, gun cotton and cartridges. He called in a policeman and the bag was removed. No fuse was attached to the canisters, but a detonator was found at the bottom of the bag. The plot was undoubt-edly to destroy England's greatest arsenal, although thereby 17,000 men would have been thrown out of employment. Excepting this incident nothing marked the peacefulness of the demonstration. By 2 o'clock there were fully 250,000 people in the park, and betwen then and 5 the crowd swelled to half a million. Scores of meet-

May Day was celebrated at Manchester, England, with processions and meetings. Between 20,000 and 30,000 men assembled in the park and listened to speeches from six platforms. All the speeches were on the eight-hour day.

There were several processions of labor organizations at Bradford, England, and an open-air meeting attended by about 10,000 workingmen. Resolutions in favor of the eight-hour day and sending more laborers to Parliament were adopted.

eight-hour demonstration at Glasgow, Scotland. There was no trouble.

Liege, Belgium, was panic-stricken, and collisions between the crowds of workingmen and the National milita occurred hourly. The day passed without disorder, and no attempt was made to hold meetings. After sundown the streets were filled with working men, some intoxicated, but most of them sober and orderly. A body of milita, in marching out to relieve a company on guard near the City Hall, came upon a crow1 of workingmen and tried to march through. Instantly there was cries of "Down with the police?" "Kill the hirelings!" and "Long live __arachy!" The militia charged and dispersed the crowd, but hardly a minute later an explosion was heard and the air was filled with splintered glass. A bomb had been set off in front of a shop about fifty yards off. The pavement was shattered and all the windows of near-by building were blown out. Nobody was injured exploded in the same district.

"ANGEL MAKERS" TO HANG.

Six Murderers of Children Convicted in Russia

At Vilna, Russia, six men and women were convicted of murdering babies that had been intrusted to their charge, and were sentenced to from six to twenty years penal servitude. In many cases the murders were committed with the connivance of the mothers of the little victims.

The preliminary inquiries into these crimes lasted nearly two years, each case being thoroughly investigated before any arrests were made. The first clue to this wholesale conspiracy to murder was obtained in April, 1890, when some one discovered in the cess-pool of a wretched hovel in Vilna the bodies of six small children. This led to further rchez, and in the end the remains of sixtyfive infants were found.

Forty men and women were arrested, and 350 witnesses were summoned to testify against them. The dispatch from Vilna does not state whether all the prisoners were tried and only six convicted, but the supposition is that, as the evidence was so strong against accused, only the six condemned were

The prisoners had gained the colloquial name of "angel makers," from their practice of killing children whose existence was inconvenient or distasteful to parents.

SUICIDES IN BERLIN.

A Banker and Two Merchants Thus

Escape Financial Scandal. The suicide of a banker and two prominent merchants in Berlin, Germany, has shaken financial confidence, and a panic like that of last winter is feared. !Herr Hammerstein, the chief of the well known banking house of Hammerstein & Friedlander, went to bed apparently in his usual frame of mind. Next morning he was found dead, having shot himself in the head. He left no message as to the cause, but it has been known for some time past that the banking house has been threatened with disaster.

Later in the day it was announced that Fa-gerstroem Brothers, wholesale merchants and exporters in Berlin, had committed suicide.

The elder was found in his room with a bullet wound in his temple and a revolver on the floor. His brother hanged himself in the at-tic. They are believed to have made the agreement to die together. They were fluancially embarrassed.
