GO AND HEAR THEM.

The republicans have opened a club room in Bellefonte, and will hold public meetings every two weeks, on Tuesday evenings. It was our pleasure to attend their first gathering and hear Messrs. Love, Dale and Reeder make their little republican speeches. Of course, they had to fight the war over again and call the democrats "rebels" "traitors" and such like. Then each one tried to talk about tariff and made a great many rank assertions, claiming that everything that was good, everything that grew, must be due to the republican policy of placing a high tariff tax on almost everything used; and because the laboring man had to pay more to live, from the effect of the McKinley bill, than formerly-and in many cases his wages were reduced-they said, the policy of high tariff was a blessing to and there was no use of disputing their as follows: word. It was true and that was all there was of it. The democrats would ruin the country too, and are bad men (at this point Feidler took a fresh chaw of tobacco and smiled heartily; anxious at the same time, for fear the meeting would not close before 10 p. m. as he had an engagement).

It is interesting indeed to attend such a meeting and hear the nonsense uttered by the speakers. Then when they argue a point they say it is so because it is so: and since it is so you must believe it is so and 'so forth. We would, in all candor, urge every democrat to try and attend these meetings. Go and hear how they attempt to bolster up a weak cause. Go and hear the war fought over again and see buckets of blood spilled before your eyes. Go and hear political bigotry; hear narrow minded politicians spit forth their prejudice. Go and hear some of Bellefonte's lawyers stand up and deliberately lie in the face of the people and workingmen hoping forms a part, and the manner of electthereby to delude them. Let every democrat and intelligent voter go and hear these political expositions and all will say that it dies in its own defence, by its own weapons.

WHEREAS. All nominations of candidates for public offices to be voted for by the people, should be made by the people themselves, or by the representatives chosen in such a manner as to give every qualified voter an equal voice in making such nomination; and whereas the method of making district nominations in the Democratic party in the 'central part of Pennsylvania by district conferences in which every county has the same representation regardless of its population or democratic vote, is manifestly unjust, and is at variance with the general plan of organization of the democratic party, therefore be it Resolved, 1st. That hereafter the democratic party of Centre county will insist that the representation in all district conferences or nominating conventions, from each county, shall be in proportion to the democratic vote of such county.

President Harrison has become angry at Carnegie, the iron baron for allowing trouble at this critical stage of the campaign. The strike will hurt Harrison and he realizes that it will and all .Republican influence will be brought to bear on Carnegie to come to turms at once with his men and thus save the Republican party from a most disastrous defeat.

A few more strikes and lock-outs among the protected industries and Pennsylvania will swing around into the Democratic column. Four years ago Pennsylvania and Kansas were the banner Republican States, their majorities for Harrison running into the tens of thousands. Ex-Senator Ingalls says "Kansas is lost to the Republicans in this campaign," and with Pennsylvania trembling in the balance, what hopes can the Republicans have of re-electing Harrison in 1892. He is doomed to defeat. Cleveland is the coming man.

THOUSANDS of Democratic farmers voted for Harrison in 1888 under the belief that the success of the Republican party would insure such legislation on the tariff that the price of farm products would be largely increased, and their financial condition materially improved. This is exactly what they were for the ensuing six months' term promised by that party. Harrison was elected and a Republican Congress enacted a new tariff measure which met Price; High Priest, W. G. CARNEGIE'S STRIKE Andrew Carnegie, the iron and steel manufacturer, of Pittsburg, and great apostle of protection, is just now giving a practical demonstration of the republican tariff as formulated by the Mc-Kinley bill. The strike now in progress at his mills at Homestead, near Pittsburg, was brought on by the attempt on the part of Carnegie to force a reduction of wages at that mill, when all other employees in the same district were receiving the scale of wages adopted by the Amalgamated Association. While Mr. Carnegie has a right to say whom he shall employ at his Homestead mill, and what wages he will pay, it comes with bad grace just now when he is enjoying the sweet fruits of the Mc-Kinley tariff, and reveling in luxurious ease in his splendid palace in Scotland. Especially is his conduct aggravating to his discharged emyloyees, when he and his fellow tariff robbers during the campaign of 1888 promised that wages should be increased in the event of the election of Harrison, and that general prosperity in business should follow the success of the republican party. Harrison was elected, by the use of the money contributed by Carnegie and others, and the passage of the McKinley bill followed as a natural consequence. The republicans since March 1889 have been in absolute power, shaped all legislation, and could most certainly have fulfilled their campaign promises if they had had any intention of doing so. What have they done, and what are the results? The McKinley bill has, by the grace of the republican party, become a law, and has been in full operation for two years. Its efforts for weal or for woe have been felt in every avenue of business and in all conditions of life. The poor unfortunate men and their families at Homestead are now reaping the bitter fruits of a system, which they were promised would bring to them manifold blessings, instead of the woe and misery that they are now experiencing. This is the experience of everyunder the instruction of an expert butter | body except a few men like Carnegie who are hoarding their millions, filched thorough knowledge of the practical from their employees and the consumers of the products of their mills. Winchester rifles. They are thus confronted with starvation for themselves and families, or submission to a slavery which is at once repulsive and unbearable. In the light of all this is it strange that men should become defiant them. Two wrongs never make a right, but in this case forbearance has almost and property. But who is the author of | tective industries. violence; the poor deluded workmen, or the plutocrat who prevailed upon tions that need sober reflection; especially should they be carefully considered by those who are ever ready to condemn Gen. James B. Weaver, of Iowa, has the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. THE election of William J. Campbell, as Chairman of the national republican convention brought out the fact that Armour, the Chicago beef magnate, contributed one hundred thousand dollars to the Republican campaign fund in 1888, under the promise that the tariff would be restored on hides.
