

THE PRESIDENT-ELECT

Speaks to the New York Chamber of Commerce.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW'S "OBITUARY."

The Eminent Republican Orator Bows Gracefully to the Will of the People and to the "Typical American."

Attorney General Miller's Tribute to the President—Whitelaw Reid's Speech.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—President-elect Grover Cleveland was one of the honored guests last night at the 124th annual dinner of the chamber of commerce, held at Delmonico's. Three hundred guests were seated in the large banquet hall when Rev. Dr. William Vibbert, pastor of Trinity chapel, said grace at 7:15. On a raised dais at the table of honor, in the center of which was seated Mr. Alexander E. Orr, the president of the banquet, on either side of Mr. Orr were Mr. Cleveland and Hon. Charles Foster, and among others seated were Senator Carlisle, Carl Schurz, ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio, Chauncey M. Depew, Whitelaw Reid, Rev. Dr. John Hall, Hon. W. C. P. Breckenridge, Murat Halstead, William Havenmeyer and Henry Clews.

There were several absentees. One of these was Hon. Stephen B. Elkins, secretary of war, who was to reply to the toast "The President of the United States." Baron de Va was also expected, but failed to be present, and this was the case with Hon. Frank Hiscock. There were two guests present, however, who filled vacancies at the president's table. These were ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio and Senator John J. Carlisle.

Miller's Tribute to Harrison.

It was 9:30 when President Orr called for order and, amid the clouds of fragrant Havanas, made a graceful speech of welcome. Mr. Orr concluded by giving the first toast, which was responded to by Attorney General Miller. Mr. Miller responded to the toast, "The President of the United States," for which Secretary Elkins had been originally slated. Mr. Miller was hardly prepared for the change and said he approached the task assigned him with great diffidence and really "under protest."

Continuing, the attorney general said: "I am also embarrassed in the subject which has been assigned to me as the toast. I have not won in the twenty years of intimate association with President Harrison to attempt to analyze his character, to catalogue his great qualities, to try to determine wherein he was weakest; but I have been accustomed to work beside him, each of us trying to accomplish that which was set before us as the task; I can only say that never in all that twenty years I found him to fall below the expectation which was entertained as to what he could and what he would do."

"Tonight, as I think of my friend sitting in his lonely home, watching for the faintest glimmer of light, and I think of that shall never come, listening for the voice whose music he shall never again hear, I cannot but feel that the best tribute I can pay to him is that of simple, unspoken sympathy."

General Miller then closed his speech by a commentary upon the official duties devolving upon the president of the United States and deprecating of the tendency of the legislature to encroach upon these executive duties.

In the absence of Baron Fava Mr. Sinclair McElwray, of Brooklyn, responded to the toast, "Italy."

"Commerce and Civilization," was responded to by Rev. John Hall, and Hon. William C. P. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, responded to "The House of Representatives," "Commerce and Education" was responded to by President J. G. Schurman, of Cornell university.

Schurman's Speech

Schurman's speech was the last on the regular toast list. No sooner was this announced than a storm of cries for "Cleveland" and "Depew" arose. Mr. Depew arose smilingly and waving his hand, cried "Cleveland" and Mr. Cleveland at last arose, and after the bursts of applause had somewhat subsided, the president-elect spoke as follows:

President-Elect Cleveland's Speech.

"MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN—I am exceedingly gratified by the kindness and warmth of your greeting. It does not surprise me, however, for I have seen and felt on more than one occasion the cordial hospitality and heartiness of those who assemble at the annual dinners of our chamber of commerce."

"We have noticed that many men, when they seek to appear especially wise and impressive, speak of our business interests as something awful and mysterious, and quite often when a proposition is under discussion its merits are no longer apparent to those whose hair is on end at the solemn suggestion that our business interests are lying in wait with numerous vials of wrath in complete readiness for those who arrive at an unaccepted conclusion."

"I am fortunate in being able to say that my relation to the chamber of commerce of the state of New York, though merely of a complimentary kind, arising from honorary membership, has so familiarized me with business interests that I no longer regard these words as meaning a bloodthirsty beast, nor do I have constantly before my mind those children in the Biblical story who were torn in pieces by bears for discussing too much at random the baldness of an ancient prophet."

"It is entirely natural that my familiarity with business interests, arising from the relation to which I have referred, should be of a very pleasant sort, and free from fear and trepidation, for the only meetings I have ever attended of the chamber of commerce have been precisely such as this, when the very best things to eat and drink have been exhaustively discussed. I am bound to say that on these occasions the dreadful things representing business interests have been very human indeed."

"I know you will not do me the injustice of supposing that I would in the least underrate the importance of commercial and financial interests here represented. On the contrary no one appreciates more fully than I that, while a proper adjustment of all interests should be maintained, you represent those which are utterly indispensable to our national growth and prosperity. I do not believe that any other interests should be obliged to feed on the crumbs which fall from the table of business, nor do I believe the table should be robbed of the good things which are honestly and fairly there merely because some tables are not well provided."

"It comes to this. We are all interested Americans in a common pursuit. Our purpose is, or ought to be, in our several spheres, to add to the general fund of national prosperity. From this fund we are all entitled to draw—perhaps not equally, but justly, each receiving a fair portion of individual prosperity. Let us avoid trampling on each other in our anxiety to be first in the distribution of shares, and let us pot attempt to appropriate the shares of others. As I have said, I cannot refrain from expressing my thanks for the courtesies often extended me by the organization at whose hospitable board I have sat this evening. I beg to assure you that, though I may not soon meet you again on an occasion like this, I shall remember with peculiar pleasure the friends among your membership, and shall never allow myself to be heedless of the affairs you so worthily hold in your keeping."

There was more applause when Mr. Cleveland finished speaking, only to be renewed when Hon. Whitelaw Reid spoke. Mr. Reid said in part: "No, Mr. President, it is not my turn. I am not in the programme. I have been making a great many speeches within the last three or four weeks, and I am bound to say I do not particularly admire the result of them. I did not think too highly of them when I made them, and I think a great deal less of them now."

Mr. Reid made several graceful allusions to the president-elect, concluding by saying: "I think I may speak for my associates as well as myself in saying to the gentlemen who are soon to take control of the government that whatever they may do to sustain our flag and promote the prosperity of the country they will find in the United States no Republicans and no Democrats, but we are Americans all."

Mr. Depew's "Obituary."

It was midnight when Mr. Reid finished speaking, and yet the event of the banquet had not yet taken place. This happened some minutes later, though, when, amid uproarious laughter and great applause, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew was introduced to the audience. There was a smile on Mr. Cleveland's face as the distinguished orator arose and there was a bland smile on Mr. Depew's face as he, at ten minutes past midnight, began speaking.

"I suppose that I am the only person here tonight," he said, "who occupies an embarrassing position. A man upon a platform in the heat of a political canvass makes a speech which it is difficult for him to fulfill."

"The trend of events does not create the condition for which he has prepared his speech. I expected to be here tonight attending the obsequies of a distinguished friend of mine, and I had prepared an eulogium which would have been satisfactory to the spirit of the deceased. Instead, I discover that I am a listener at a Democratic ratification meeting. I find that our places are changed. I am the corpse. But even the moribund have privileges."

"A classmate of mine who was a preacher, found himself settled in a Spiritualistic neighborhood. The leader of the Spiritualistic band died and his friends came to see the clergyman and said: 'We have something of the old Puritan spirit left, and we think your leader ought to be buried by a Christian ceremonial. Will you do it?'"

"My friend consented and delivered the best eulogy that he conscientiously could. The wife of the dead spiritualist arose and said she had a message from her husband. She transmitted the message, which roundly abused the minister and his eulogy and his sermon and everything else. One of the friends of the deceased said to the preacher: 'We had no idea that our departed leader would be here in spirit. We hope you will forgive him.'"

"My friends, I would forgive, for this is the first time in many ministrations that I have been passed by the corpse."

Mr. Depew then referred to the speech on the "Typical American" which he delivered at the Astor House two years ago, and said that this speech had formed a campaign document for the Democrats, and had inspired him to the promise that he would pronounce a eulogy still further of taffy over Mr. Cleveland at the present dinner after Mr. Cleveland's defeat.

"I cannot add," he said, "anything to what I was alleged to have said on that occasion, because a greater orator than I has spoken. It is the American people who spoke last Tuesday. They have pronounced Mr. Cleveland's eulogy, not in figures of speech, but in figures that were disastrous to us."

"I sympathize somewhat with Mr. Cleveland in the feeling that he has that too much is said about business interests threatening this or promising that. Yet, as our friends have been out of power for thirty years, and have not had the duty thrust upon them to deal with the business interests, I want to give them this word of warning: Business interests, like the wasp, have a business end, and they had better be careful how they finger it."

"If Mr. Cleveland's policy wins, then he stands for the next century as the evangelist of a policy which has done for the country what the best statesmen have failed to do."

"If, however, his policy is fairly tried, and shall prove that it was not wise, then Mr. Reid and I shall at the end of four years have the pleasure of hearing the corpse talk to us."

There was laughter and applause, amid which Mr. Depew sat down, and the chairman declared the banquet over.

Judge Wescott Sued for Slander.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 15.—Lawyer John Harris, of the firm of Scovel & Harris, who assisted the state in prosecuting Lingo, as attorney for Mary Collins and John Miller, has commenced suit for $50,000 damages against ex-Judge Wescott. Lingo's counsel, for slander. The alleged slander consists in an assertion ex-Judge Wescott made Saturday night on a ferryboat that Mary Collins had acted improperly with a colored man, and that John Miller killed his wife.

One Frick Employee Kills Another.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 16.—One non-unionist shot and instantly killed another in a bank house of the Carnegie Steel works at Homestead. The murderer is Max Newman, and the name of the victim is supposed to be Maynard. Newman says he was assaulted while asleep, and believing that his assailant was a striker, he awoke and killed him.

Agnes Huntington Married.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—A notable wedding took place yesterday at St. Thomas' church, on Fifth avenue. It was that of Lawyer Paul D. Cravath to Miss Agnes Huntington, the singer. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Wesley Brown, rector of St. Thomas, and the bride was given away by her brother-in-law, C. D. Lathrop.

Vile and Unworthy

Of consideration are nostrums which it is asserted—and there are many such—that they cure immediately bodily ailments of long standing. There are none such that can, Chronic disorders cannot be instantaneously removed. Continuity in the use of a genuine medicine, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will eradicate chronic physical evils. Not the least of these last in the force of its opposition to medicine is constipation. To the removal of which, if persisted in, the Bitters is particularly adapted. Constipation of the bowels is a complaint which should be dealt with early and systematically. So are its usual attendants, liver complaint and dyspepsia. For these, for malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble and more recently "la grippe," this highly and professionally compounded medicine is an undoubted specific. Nothing can exceed it, moreover, as a meat-imparting strength to the feeble and nervous.

LANE'S MEDICINE MOVES THE BOWELS EACH DAY.

In order to be healthy this is necessary.

Sparrows Disappearing.

Our exchanges are remarking on the disappearance of the sparrows. It is claimed there is a decrease of at least 50 per cent. in the number of those birds. Some think they are following the example of the song birds and going to a warmer climate to spend their winter.

Lay of the Thankful Hens.

From FARM-POUNCEY, November, 1892.

When for no man an egg we lay,
How thankful we should be,
If these good meals we get each day,
How thankful we should be,
That on the day when all give thanks,
We're left to "dust" on sunny banks,
While the turkey's neck our master yanks,
How thankful we should be.

When we don't lay at this time of year,
How thankful we should be,
If our mistress says to her "It's clear,"
How thankful we should be,
"That she believes to make hens pay
In their morning meal most every day
She will put a powder to make them lay,"
How thankful we should be.

That she knows the best, and reason why,
How thankful we should be,
And on her judgment we rely—
How thankful we should be,
For, "nothing on earth will make Hens Lay
Like Sheridan's Powder"—by the way—
If with us hens it's come to stay,
How thankful we should be.

So here's long life to Sheridan's Powder;
How thankful we should be;
If we could cackle it even louder
How thankful we should be,
That with a large one dollar can
We pleased the most exacting man,
As his egg-basket overran
How thankful we should be.

Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure. Highly concentrated. In quantity costs tenth of a cent a day. No other kind is like it. L. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Chestnut Street, Boston, Mass. Important Times.

There are three important times in a man's life—when he is born, when he marries and when he dies. And even then his own importance is overshadowed by the curiosity to know if he is a boy or girl, what the bride wore, and what he left in his will. Vain man, you don't cut much figure in this world.

Poisoned by Scrofula.

Is the sad story of many lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially than any other a hereditary disease and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of foetal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a remedy for whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerful effect on the blood, expels all trace of the disease and gives to the vital fluid the quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not accept any substitute.
