Subject: "The Truth About Russia."

Text: "Presumptuous are they, self-willed; they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities."—II Peter ii., 10.

Among a most reprehensible crew Peter Among a most reprehension crew rever here paints by one stroke the portrait of those who delight to slash at people in au-thority. Now we all have a right to criti-cise evil behavior, whether in high places or low, but the fact that one is high up is no proof that he ought to be brought down. It is a bad streak of human nature now, as it was in the time of the text a bad streak of human nature, that success of any kind excites the jealous antipathy of those who cannot climb the same steep. There never was a David on the throne that there was not some Absalom who wanted to get it. There never was a Christ but the world had the many and hen many ready to fashion, a gross saw and hammer ready to fashion a cross on which to assassinate Him.

Out of this evil spirit grow not only indi-vidual but national and international def-To no country has more injustice been done than to our own in days that are past, Loug before "Martin Chuzzlewitt" was printed the literature of the world scoffed at everything American. Victor Hugo, as honest as he was unequaled in literary power, was so misinformed concerning Amer-ica that he wrote: "The most singular thing is the need of whittling, with which all Americans are possessed. It is such that on Sunday they give the sailors little bits of wood, because if they did not they would whittle the ship. In court, at the most critical moment, the judge, whittling, says: 'Prisoner, are you guilty? and the accused tranquilly responds, whittling, 'I am not

Lord John Russell called us "a bubble bursting nationality." But our country has at last recovered from such caricature, and there is not a street in any city of Europe or Asia where the word "America" will not or Asia where the word "America" will not win deference. But there is a sister nation on the other side of the sea now going through the process of international defamation. There is no country on earth so misation. There is no country on earth so misunderstood as Russia, and no monarch more misrepresented than its emperor. Will it not be in the cause of justice if I try to set right the minds of those who compose this august assemblage and the minds of those to whom, on both sides of the ocean, these words shall come? If the slander of one person is wicked, then the slander of one person is wicked, then the slander of one hundred and twelve million people is one hundred and twelve million times more wicked.

In the name of righteousness, and in behalf of civilization, and for the encouragement of all those good people who have been disheartened by the scandalization of Russia, I now speak. But Russia is so vast a subject that to treat it in one discourse is like attempting to run Niagara Falls over one mill wheel. Do not think that the very one mill wheel. Do not think that the very naked courtesies extended me by the emperor and empress of Russia have complimented me into the advocacy of that empire, for I shall present you authenticated facts that will reverse your opinions, if they have been antagonistic, as mine were re-

I went last summer to Russia with as many baleful prejudices as would make an avalanche from the mountain of fabrication which has for years been heaped up against which has for years oben heaped up against that empire. You ask how is it possible that such appalling misrepresentations of Russia could stand? I account for it by the fact that the Russian language is to most an impassable wall. Malign the United States or malign Great Britain or Germany or France, and by the next cablegram the falsehood is exposed, for we all understand English, and many of our people are familiar with German and French. But the Russian language, beautiful and easy to those born to speak it, is to most vocal organs an unpronouncable tongue, and if at St. Petersburg or Moscow any anti-Russian calumny were denied the most of the world outside of usia would never see or hear the denial

What are the motives for misrepresenta-Commercial interests and international jealously. Russia is as large as all the rest of Europe put together. Remember that a nation is only a man or a woman on a big scale. Go into any neighborhood of America and ask the physician who has a small practice what he thinks of the physician who has a large practice. Ask a lawyer who has no briefs what he thinks of the lawyer who has three rooms filled with clerks trying in vain to transact the superabundant business that comes to him. Ask the minister who has a very limited audience what he thinks of the minster who has overflowing audiences.

you mean to charge the author and the lecturers who have written or spoken against Russia with falsehood? By no means. You can find in any city or nation evils innumerable if you wish to discourse about them.

I said at St. Petersburg to the most eminent lady of Russia outside of the imperia "Are those stories of cruelty outrage that I have heard and read about true?" She replied: "No doubt some of them are true, but do you not in America ever have officers of the law cruel and out-rageous in their treatment of offenders? Do you not have instances where the police have clubbed innocent persons? Have you no instances where people in brief authority act arrogantly?" I replied, "Yes, we do." Then she said: "Why does the world hold our government responsible for exceptional outrages? As soon as an official is found to be cruel he immediately loses his place."

Then I bethought myself, Do the people in America hold the Government of Washington responsible for the Homestead riots or for railread insurrections or for the torch for railroad insurrections, or for the torch of the villian that consumes a block of houses, or for the rufflans who arrest a rail train, making the passengers hold up their arms until the pockets are picked? Why, then hold the emperor of Russia, who is as impressive and genial a man as I have ever looked at or talked with, responsible for the wrongs enacted in a nation with a popula-tion twice as large in numbers as the miliions of America? Suppose one monarch in Europe ruled over England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Austria, Norway and Sweden.

Would it be fair to hold the monarch responsible for all that occurred in that mighty dominion? Now you must remem-ber that Alexander the Third reigns over wider dominion than all those empires put woman on a big scale, let me ask, would you individually prefer to be judged by your faults or your virtues? All people except ourselves have faults.

in America would not have called forth from all the despotisms of Europe and Asia a shout of gladness wide as earth and deep as perdition. But whoever else failed us, Russia never did, and whoever else was doubtful, Russia never was, Russia, then an old government, smiled on the cradle of our government while vet in its earliest infancy. government while yet in its earliest infancy. Empress Catherine of Russia in 1776 or thereabouts offered kindly interference that our thirteen colonies might not go down un-der the cruelties of war.

Again, in 1813, Russia stretched forth to-ward us a merciful hand. When our dreadful civil war was raging and the two thunder clouds of northern and southern valor clashed, Russia practically said to the nations of Europe, 'Keep your hands off and let the brave men of the north and the south sattle their own troubles." I rehearsed some of those scenes to the emperor last July, saying, 'You were probably too young to remember the position your father took at that time." but with radiant smile he responded, 'Oh, yes, I remember, I remember,' and there was an accentuation of the words which demonstrated to me that those occurrences had often been talked of in the imperial household. clashed, Russia practically said to the na-

I stood on New York Battery during the war, as I suppose many of you did, looking off through a magnifying glass upon a fleet of Russian ships. "What are they doing there?" I asked, and so every one asked. "What business have the Russian warships in our New York harbor?" Word came that another fleet of Russian warships was in in our New York harbor?" Word came that another fleet of Russian warships was in San Francisco harbor. "What does this mean?" our râlers asked, but did not get immediate answer. In these two American harbors the Russian fleets seemed sound asleep. Their great mouths of iron spoke not a word, and the Russian flag, whether floating in the air or drooping by the flag-staff, made no answer to our inquisitivewilliam H. Seward, secretary of state, asked the Russian minister at Washington the meaning of those Russian ships in American waters and got no satisfactory response. Admiral Farragut said to a Russian officer after dining in the home of the emi-nent politician, Thurlow Weed, that maker and unmaker of presidents, "What are you doing here with those Russian vessels of war!" Not until the war was over was it found out that in case of foreign intervention all the guns and the last gun of these two fleets in New York and San Francisce harbors were to open in full dispason upon any foreign ship that should dare to interfere with the right of Americans, north and south, to settle their own controversy.

But for those fleets and their presence in American waters there can be no that two of the mightiest nations of Europe would have mingled in our fight. But for se two fleets the American government would have been to-day only a name in his tory. I declare before Go: and the nation that I believe Russia saved the United States of America. Last July I stood before a great throng of Russians in the embarrassing position of speaking to an audience three-fourths of which could not universely. derstand my language any more than I could understand theirs. But there were two names that they thoroughly under-stood as well as you understand them, and the utterance of those two names brought forth an acclamation that made the city hall of St. Petersburg quake from founda-tion stone to towers, and those two names "George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Now is it not important that we should feel right toward that mighty, that God given friend of more than one hundred years? Yea, because it is a nation of more possibilities than any othe, except our own, should we cultivate its friendship. There is a vast realm of Russia as yet unoccupied. If the population of the rest of Europe were poured into Russia it would be only partially cupied. After awhile America will be so well populated that the tides of emigration will go the other way, and by railroads from Russia at Behring straits—where Asia comes within thirty six miles of joining America—millions of people will pour down through Russia and Siberia, and on down through all the regions waiting for the civilization of the next century to come and culture great harvests and build mighty

If Russia can afford to be the frie of America, America can afford to be the friend of Russia. And now I proceed to do what I told the emperor and the empress and all the imperial family at the palace of Peterhof I would do if I ever got back to America, and that is to answer some of the calumnies which have been announced and calumnies which have been announced and reiterated and stereotyped against Russia. Calumny the First—The emperor and all the imperial family are in perpetual dread of assassination. They are practically prisoners in the winter palace, and trenches with dynamite have been found dug around the winter palace. They dare not venture forth, except proceded and followed and surroundative most alaborate military guard. i by a most elaborate military guard. My answer to this is that I never saw a face more free from worriment than the emperor's face. The winter palace, around which the trenches are said to have been charged with dynamite, and in which the imperial family are said to be prisoners, has never been the residence of the imperial family one moment since the present emeror has been on the throne.

The winter palace has been changed into n museum and a picture gallery and a place of great levees. He spends his summer in the palace at Peterhof, fifteen or twenty miles from St. Petersburg; his autumns at the palace at Gratschua, and his winters in a palace at St. Petersburg, but in quite a different part of the city to that occupied by the winter palace. He rides through the at his side and the driver on the box. There is not a person in this audience more free from fear of harm than he is. His subjects tonly admire him but almost worship

There are cranks in Russia, but have we not had our Charles Guiteau and John Wilkes Booth? "But," says some one, "did not the Russians kill the father of the present emperor?' Yes, but in the time that Russia has had one assassination of emperor America has had two presidents assas-sinated. "But is not the emperor an autocrat?" By which you mean, has he not power without restriction? Yes, but it all depends upon what use a man makes of his

Are you an autocrat in your factory, or an autocrat in your store, or an autocrat in your style of business? It all depends on what use you make of your power, whether to bless or to oppress, and from the time of Peter the Great—that Russian who was the Feter the Great—that Russian who was the wonder of all time, the emperor who became incognite a ship carpenter that he might help ship carpenters, and a mechanic that he might help mechanics, and put on poor men's garb that he might sympathics with poor men, and who in his last words said: "My Lord, I am dying. Oh, help my unbelief!"—I say from that time the throne of Russia has, for the most part, been occupied.

biography would take you in your weaker moods, and the picture of you on the first page of your biography would be as you looked after some meanness had been practiced on you and you were tearing mad.

Now, as I am an optimist, I give you fair warning that if I ever write your biography I will take you as you looked the day your dividend came in twenty per cent. larger than you ever anticipated, or the morning on your way to business after your first child was born, or the morning after your conversion, when heaven had rolled in on your soul. The most accursed homunculi of all the earth are the pessimists, who, whether they judge individual or national character, and whether they wield tongue or pen, are filled with anathematization, and who have more to say about the freekles on the cheek of beauty than of the sunrises and sunsets that flush it.

It is most important that this country have right ideas concerning Russia, for among all the nations this side of heaven Russia is America's best friend. There has not been an hour in the last seventy-five years that the shipwreck of free institutions tremity of their despair will put the life of your majesty in jeopardy."

The emperor replied in words that will last as long as history, "Gentlemen, if I should die because of my devotion to such a cause, I am willing to meet my fate." When, under an attack of pneumonia from exposure to severe weather in the service of his people, that emperor put down his head on the pillow of dust, Russia lost as good a monarch as was ever crowned. Then came Alexander the Second, father of the present emperor. Amid the mightiest opposition and innumerable protests, he, with one stroke of his pen, emancipated twenty million serfs, practically saying, "Go free. Be your own masters, and this is for you and your children forever."

On the day he was basely assassinated (and I will parenthetically say that I saw his carriage in splinters, as it looked when his carriage in splinters as that will lion as compared with the English advance of domain two hundred and fifty million: The United States and England had better keep still about extravagant and extortionate enlargement of domain.

Calumny the Fifth—

Alexander the Second, father of the present emperor. Amid the mightlest opposition and innumerable protests, he, with one stroke of his pen, emancipated twenty million serfs, practically saying, "Go free. Be your own masters, and this is for you and your children forever."

On the day he was basely assassinated (and I will parenthetically say that I saw his carriage in splinters, as it looked when he stepped from it, not to save himself, but to look after some poor people of the street who had been hurt, and I saw the bed on which he died, the mattress yet crimson with which he died, the mattress yet crimson with his life's blood)—on the day he was assassinated he had on his table, found afterward, a free constitution that proposed to give the right of suffrage to the people of Russia. If it had not been for the assassination he would have soon signed that constitution, but that horrible violence put things back, as violence always does.

What a marvelous character of kindness was Alexander the Second, the father of the present emperor, so that the present em-peror, Alexander the Third, inherits his benignity. Alexander the Second, hearing that a nobleman had formed a conspiracy against his life, had him arrested. Then the eyes of the criminal were bandaged, and he was put in a carriage, and for some time traveled on, only stopping for food. After awhile the bandage was removed, and supposing that he must by that time have been almost in Siberia, he found that he was at the door of his own home. But this punshment was sufficient.

The same emperor, having heard that a poet had written a poem defamatory of his empress, ordered the poet into his presence. Expecting great severity, the post entered the palace and found the emperor and em-press and dukes and duchesses gathered together. "Good morning," said the emperor to the offender. "I hear you have written a most beautiful posm, and I have sent for you that you may read it to us and we may have the pleasure of hearing it." The man cried out, "Send me to Siberia or do anything with me, but do not make me read this poem in your presence." He was compelled to read the defamatory poem, and then the empress, against whom it was aimed, said: "I do not think he will write any more verses about us again. Let him go." And

And now comes in Alexander the Third, doing the best things possible for the nation which he loves and which as ardently loves But what an undertaking to rule hundred and twelve million people, made up of one hundred tribes and races and speak ing forty different languages! But, notwithstanding all this, things there move on mar-velously well, and I do not believe that out hundred thousand Russians would find more than one person who dis-likes the emperor, and so that calumny of dread of assassination drops so flat it can fall no flatter.

Calumny the Second-If you go to Russia Calumny the Second—If you go to Russia you are under severest espionage, stopped here and questioned there, and in danger of arrest. But my opinion is that if a man is disturbed in Russia it is because he ought to be disturbed. Russia is the only country in Europe in which my baggage was not examined. I carried in my hand, tied together with a chord so that their titles could be seen, a pile of eight or ten books, all of them from hid to lid cursing Russia, but I had no trouble in taking with me the books. There is ten times more diffi-

Depend upon it, if hereafter a man believes he is uncomfortably watched by the police of St. Petersburg or Moscow it is because there is something suspicious about him, and you yourself had better, when he is around, look after your silver spoons. I lieves he is uncomfortably watched by the police of St. Petersburg or Moscow it is bepromise you, an honest man or an hone woman, that when you go there, as many of you will—for European travel is destined to hange its course from southern Europe to those northern regions-you will have no more molestation or supervisal than in Brooklyn or New York or the quietest Long Calumny the Third—Russia and its ruler are so opposed to any other religion except the Greek religion that they will not allow any other religion; that nothing but perse cution and imprisonment and outrage intolerable await the disciples of any other religion. But what are the facts? I had a long ride ia Nt. Petersburg and its suburbs with the prefect, a brilliant, efficient and lovely many who is the highest official in the city of St. Petersburg, and whose chief business is to attend the emperor. I caid to him, "I suppose your religion is that of the Greek church?" "No," said he; "I am a Grack church? "No," said he; "I am a Lutheran." "What is your religion?" I said to one of the highest and most influential officials at St. Petersburg. He said, "I am of the Church of England."

Myself, an American, of still another denomination of Christians, and never having been inside a Greek church in my life until I went to Russis, could not have received more consideration had I been baptised in in the Greek church and all my life wor-shiped at her alters. I had it demonstrated to me very plainly that a man's religion in Russia has nothing to do with his prefer-ment for either office or social position. The only questions taken into consideration are honesty, fidelity, morality and adaptation. I had not been in St. Petersburg an hour pefore I received an invitation to preach the description of Christ as I believed it. Besides all Gospel of Christ as I believed it. this, have you forgotton that the Crimean war, which shook the earth, grew out of Russia's interterence in behalf of the prosecuted Christians of all nations in Furkey?

"But," says some one, "have there not been persecutions of other religions in Russia?' No doubt, just as in other times in New England we burned witches, and as we killed Quakers, and as the Jews in America have been outrageously treated ever since I can remember, and the Chinese in our land can remember, and the Chinese in our land have been pelted, and their stores torn down, and their way from the steamer wharf to their destined quarters tracked with their own blood. The devil of persecution is in every land and in all ages. Some of us in the different denominations of Christians in America have felt the theory. America have felt the thrust of persecution America have left the thrust of persecution because we thought differently or did things differently from those who would, if they had the lower, put us in a furnace eight times heated, one more degree of caloric than Nebuchadnezzar's. Persecutions in all lands, but the emperor of Russia sanctions none of

I had a most satisfactory talk with the emperor about the religions of the world, and he thinks and feels as you and I do, that and he thinks and feels as you and I do, that religion is something between a man and his God, and no one has a right to interfere with it. You may go right up to St. Petersburg and Moscow with your Episcopal liturgy, or your Presbyterian catechism, or your Congregationalist's liberalism, or your Immersionist's Baptistry, or any other religion, and if you mind your own affairs and let others mind theirs you will not be molested.

Calumny the Fourth—Russia is so very grasping of territory, and she seems to want the world. But what are the facts? During the last century and a quarter the United States have taken possession of everything between the thirteen colonies and the Pacific ocean, and England, during the same length of time, has taken possession of nearly three million square miles, and by the extent of her domain has added two hundred and fifty million population, while Russia has added during that time only one-half the number of square miles and about eighteen million of population—England's advance of domain by two hundred and fifty million against Russia's advance of domain by eighteen million. What a paitry Calumny the Fourth-Russia is so very and to most of them cruelty is an impossi-bility. I hold in my hand a card. You see bility. I hold in my hand a card. You see on it that red circle. That is the government's seal on a card giving me permission to visit all the prisons of St. Petersburg, as I had expressed a wish in that direction. As the messenger handed this card to me he told the messenger handed this card to me he told me that a carriage was at the door for my disposal in visiting the prisons. It so hap-pened, however, that I was crowded with engagements and I could not make the visitation. But do you suppose such cheerful permission and a carriage to boot would have been afforded me if the prisons of Russia are such hells on earth as they have been described to be?

I asked an eminent and distinguished American, "Have you visited the prisons of St. Petersburg, and how do they differ from American prisons?" He replied, "I have visited them, and they are as well ventilated and as well conditioned in every respect as the majority of the prisons in America." Are women whipped in the street? No; that statement comes from the majority of statement comes from the manufactory of fabrication, a manufactory that ruus day and night, so that the supply may meet the

But how about Siberia? My answer is, Siberia is the prison of Russia, a prison more than twice the size of the United States, John Howard, who did more for the improvement of prisoners and the reformation of criminals than any man that ever lived, his name a synonym for mercy throughout Christendom, declared by voice and pen that the system of transportation of criminals from Russia to Siberia was an admirable plan, advocating open air punishment rather than endungeonment, and also because it was taking all offenders hundreds of miles away from their evil companions. Howard, after witnessing the plan of de-portation of criminals from Russia to Sibe-

s, commended it to England. If a man commits murder in Russia he is not electrocuted as we electrocute him, or choked to death by a halter as we choke him to death. Russia is the only country on earth from which the death penalty has been driven, except in case of high treason. Murderers and desperate villains are sent to the hardest parts of Siberia, but no man is sent to Siberia or ordered to any kind of punishment in Russia until he has a fair trial. So far as their being hustled off in the night and not knowing why they are exiled or punished is concerned, all the criminals in Russia have an open trial before a jury just as we have in America, except in revolutionary and riotous times, and ou know in America at such times the writ f habeas corpus is suspended.

There are in Russia grand juries and petit juries, and the right to challenge the jurors, and the prisoner confronts his accuser, and, mark this, as in no other country, after the prisoner has been condemned by juries and judges he may appeal to the minister of the interior, and after that to the senate, and after that to the emperor, who is constantly pardoning. As I said, the violent and murlerous are sent to the American custom house than through the Russian. I speak not of myself, for friends intercede for me on American wharves, and I am not detained. I was several days in Russia before I was asked if I had any passport at all.

Depend your luggage through the mardest part of Siberia, but the more moder ate criminals to propitious parts of Siberia, and those who have only a little criminality to parts of Siberia positively genial for climate, for you ought to know, if you do not know, that Siberia is so large and wide and long that it reaches from frigidity to the same to the same so that Siberia reaches from the furs at the north to the palm leaf fans at the south It has been demonstrated that ninety per cent, of the Russian criminals colonized into Siberia go into a climate milder than New York-a land songful with birds and broidered with flora enough manifold to confound the botanists. Much of the soil is rich loam, and harvests wait for a plow to liberate them. When a criminal is sent to Siberia, in the vast majority of cases it gives him an op-portunity to make a new start under the best possible circumstances. The criminal allowed to take his or her family along, and that is a mercy no other country grants. In the quicksilver mines of Siberia—the hardest place of expatriation—only one-fourth of the miners are criminals. The other three-fourths go there because they choose it as a place to earn their living.

After being in Siberia awhile the demned go to earning a livelihood, and they come to own their own farms and orchards come to own their own farms and orchards and vineyards, many of these people coming to wealth, and thousands of them under no inducement would leave those parts of Siberia which are paradises for salubrity and luxuriance. Now which do you think is the best style of a prison—Siberia or many of our American prisons? When a man commits a big crime in our country, the judge looks into the frighted face of the culprit and says, "You have been found guilty; I sentence you to the pennitentiary for ten Jentence you to the pennitentiary for ten years." He goes to prison. He is shut in between four walls. No sunlight. No fresh air. No bathroom. Before he has served his ten years he dies of consumption or is so enervated that for the rest of his life he sits with folded hands—a wheezing invalid.

In preference to the shut in life of the average American prisoner, give me Si-beria. Besides that, when offenders come out of prison in America, what chance have they? Ask the poorly supported societies formed to get these people places for work. Ask me, to whom the newly liberated come Ask me, to whom the newly liberated come from all the prisons imploring what they shall do. No one will commend them. The pallor of incarceration is on their cheek. Who wants to employ in factory or store a man or woman who, in answer to the question: "Where did you live last?" should make for reply: "State's prison at Auburn or Moyamensing?" Now in Siberia they have a better chance. They are never spoken of as criminals, but as unfortunates, and of as criminals, but as unfortunates, and they are allowed every opportunity of re-trieving their lost reputation and lost for-I talked with the President of the National Society of Russia for the Education and Moralization of the Children of Siberian Convicts. The president of that society, appointed by the emperor, is a lady of great accomplishments and much sympathy, which illumines her face and makes tearfu which illumines her face and makes tearful her eyes and tremulous her voice. The evening I passed at her house in St. Petersburg was one of the memorable events of my lifetime. I will not attempt to pronounce the name of that noble woman appointed by the emperor as the President of the National Society of Russia for the Einthe National Society of Russia for the Eincation and Moralization of the Children of Convicts. Please to name any such national society in our country, supported by govern-ment, for taking care of the children of convicts.

You know, if you know anything, that there is no chance in this country for a man who has been imprisoned, or for his children. God pity them and hasten the time when we shall by some national institution established by the congress of the United States, imitate the mercy of the Russian government toward the innocent children of imprisoned offenders. He who charges cruelty on the imperial family and the nobility of Russia belies men and women as gracious and benignant as ever breathed oxygen.

The merciful character of the present emperor was well illustrated in the following occurrence: The man who supervised the assassination of the father of the present emperor, standing in the snow that awful day when the dynamite shattered to pieces the legs of Alexander the Second—I say the man who supervised all this fled from St. Petersburg and quit Russia. But after awhile the man repented of his crime, and wrote to the emperor asking for forgiveness for the murder of his father, and promising to be a good citizen, and asking if he might come back to Russia. The emperor pardoned the murderer of his father, and the forgiven assassan is now living in Russia, unless re-

When I talked to the empress concerning the sympathy felt in America for the sufferings of the drought-struck regions of Rus sia, she evinced an absorbing interest and a compassion and an emotion of manner and speech such as we men can hardly realize, because it seems that Gol has reserved for woman as her great adornment the coronet, the tear jewellel coronet of tenderness and commiseration. If you say that it was a man, a divine man that came to save the world, I say yes; but it was a woman that gave the man. Witness all the Madonnas— Italian, German, English and Russian—that bloom in the picture galleries of Christen-dom. Son of Mary, have mercy on us!

But how about the knout, the cruel Russian know, that comes down on the bare back of agonized criminals? Why, Russia abolished the knowt before it was abolished from our American navy. But how about the political prisoners hustled off to Siberia? According to the testimony of the most calebrated literary enemy of Russia, only four hundred and forty-three political prisoners were sent to Siberia in twenty years. How many political prisoners did we put in prison pens during our four years of civil war? Well, I will guess at least one hundred thou-America's one hundred thousand political prisoners versus Russia's four hundred and forty-three political prisoners. Nearly all these four hundred and forty-three of twenty years were noblemen or people des-perately opposed to the emancipation of the serfs. And none of the political prisoners is sent to the famous Kara mines.

For the most part you are dependent for information upon the testimony of prisoners who are sent to Siberia. They all say they were innocent. Prisoners always are innocent. Ask all the prisoners of America to-lay, "Guilty or not guilty?" and nine-teen out of twenty will plead "Not guilty." Ask them how they like their prison, and how they like sheriffs, and how they like the government of the United States, and you will find these prisoners admire the au-thority that arrested them and punished them just about as much as the political prisoners of Russia like Siberia.

But you ask how will this Russophobia, But you ask how will this Russophobia, with which so many have been bitten and poisoned, be cured? By the God of Justice blessing such books and pamphlets as are now coming out from Professor de Arnaud, of Washington; Mr. Horace Cutter, of San Francisco; Mr. Morrill, of England, and by the opening of our American gates to the writings of some twenty-four of the Russian authors and outborses. authors and authoresses, in some respects as orilliant as the three or four Russian authors already known-the translation of those twenty-four authors, which I am authorized fron Russia to offer free of charge to any responsible American publishing house that will do them justice.

Let these Russians tell their own story, for they are the only ones fully competent to do the work, as none but Americans can fully tell the story of America, and as none but Germans can fully tell the story of Ger-many, and none but Englishmen can fully France. Meanwhile let the international defamation come to an end. Cease to speak evil of dignities merely because they are dignities, and of presidents merely because they are presidents, and of emperors merely beacuse they are emperors.

And may the blessing of God the Father, and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost be upon all the members of the imperial household of Russia, from the illustrious head of that family down to the princess, seven years of age, who came skipping into my presence in the palace of Peterhof last summer! Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men!

Some curious and interesting facts have just been placed on record in regard to the cause of death among the inhabitants in the London Zoological Gardens. Out of 126 consecutive cases of deaths from all causes, no fewer than forty-one, or 321 per cent., wers due to tuberculosis. The chief mortality in this respect was among the monkeys and birds, and these fell victims to the discase at all ages. "Sally," the chimpanzee, whose untimely decease excited so much public notice a few months ago, died of disseminated tuberculosis. Besides the birds and the monkeys, tuberculous disease was found in several other amimals. The peculiarities of the English climate are shown by the fact that bronchitis is a very common disease among the animals; but, on the other hand, diseases of the heart are very rare. No mention is made of cancer, a maindy which authorities have pointed out is sometimes met with in domesticated animals, and but seldom if ever in wild ones. Rickets, curiously enough, is recorded as being very common among the animals in the gardens-a fact which seems to point to some irregularities or deficiencies in diet. Among the deaths which may be described as due to the casualties, mention may be made of a white-tailed eagle, which indiscreetly attempted to swallow a large bone five inthes in length. Again, a common sheldrake apparently committed suicide on account of the death of its mate. Soon atter the latter melancholy incident occurred the bird was found dead, and examination of its remains showed that it had asphyxiated itself by blocking the upper portions of its respiratory passages with mud. Lastly, the death of a crane is wortny of notice, inasmuch as the bird had been an inhabitant of the gardens for forty-two years .- Bost on Tran

Color Perception in Savage Races.

From various investigations made of the subject the opinion would appear to be justified that savage races possess the perception of color to a greater degree than do civilized races. This is made evident by the facts presented by Dr. Webster Fox before the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, his statement covering the results of some two hundred and fifty examinations among Indian children. one hundred of these being boys. Researches of this character show that in a selection of one hundred white boys from various parts of the United States, at least five of the number would have proved color blind. Among all these Indian boys not a single case of the kind was discovered. Some years ago an examination by Dr. Fox of 250 Indian boys resulted, be stated, in the discovery that two were color blind-a very low percentage when compared with the whites-while none of the Indian girls were thus affected .- New York Tribund

"August, Flower" "For two years I suffered terribly

with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said my stomach was worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food. On the recommendation of a friend I procured a bottle of August Flower. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained strength and flesh rapidly. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has cured me.' Jas. E. Dederick, Saugerties, N.Y.
