It is proposed to introduce the kangaroo of Australia into North America as a substitute for the extinct, or all but extinct, bison. Parts of the country, especially in the West, unsuited for cultivation or other stock, might, it is thought, be used in breeding kangaroos, which afford not only good sport, but "flesh, fur and footwear."

It has been left to this late day, marvels the New York Sun, to discover that two almost unknown rivers in East Africa may be navigated by steamboats for a far greater distance from the sea than any other rivers save two in the Dark Continent. No one had imagined that the almost unmapped Tana River, and the Juba, still wholly unknown for probably more than half of its course, would provide a far longer highway for vessels entering their mouths than the mighty Congo, the great Zambesi, or the Niger proper. A steamboat has now ascended each of these rivers for more than 350 miles, and in the development of commerce they are certain to prove among the most useful of Africa's water highways.

Says the New York World: The women of the State of Wyoming of the proper age are all voters in these good times, and they call the attention of their American sisters to the fact that they have the ballot because they really wanted it. An eminent ex-philosopher of Laramie once said that the men "encouraged the girls to vote in Wyoming" because it made them "hurry up and get the dishes done so as to get down to the polls." Ten years ago less than fifty per cent. of the population of Wyoming were women, but they are catching up with the men in numbers as in political power. There are (or were in 1890) 29,343 men in Wyoming and there are 21,362 women. Alternate women delegates from Wyoming attended the Republican Convention at Minneapolis. There is no reason in the world why women might not have been regularly made Presidential Electors. But certain it is that several thousand women voted on election day for President. And it is not the first time that this has happened. New Jersey came into the Union with a clause permitting "taxpaying women and taxpaying colored men to vote," and in the first three Presidential elections many New Jersey women's votes were cast and counted. But that clause was afterward changed to "white males."

The recent test of speed of horses and that of the endurance of officers and men in which a hundred German officers engaged from Berlin to Vienna, and a hundred Austro-Hungarian officers from Vienna to Berlin, have been freely commented upon, observes the New York Tribune, but are not considered by Army officers as so very remarkable. In 1877. Captain Ezra Fuller, of the Seventh United States Cavalry, during the pursuit of Chief Joseph, was sent out by General Miles from Fort Keogh to ascertain and give warning as to the route which Chief Joseph was taking over the mountains. Captain Fuller rode his own private horse, his guide had two Indian ponies, and an extra horse was taken along to carry the rations for the party. They were gone twelve days, during which they rode more than 600 miles-not over the King's highway, but through an unknown mountainous wilderness. During this twelve days Captain Fuller was unable to procure more than three feeds of grain for his horses. The Indian ponies gave out on the third day, and the guide then rode the extra horse. Captain Fuller once rode sixty-six miles in nine hours in search of deserters. Adjutant Beil, also of the Seventh Cavalry, rode through the Bad Lands, in North Dakota, in 1882, 105 miles in twelve hours. Many instances of long rides of United States Cavalry officers might be mentioned in which the endurance of both men and horres was tested, and comparisons would show that American men and horses are second to none in tests of this

CONGRESS REASSEMBLES

The Senate and House Formally Organize for Business.

Scenes Attending the Opening of the Short Session

The final session of the Fifty-second Congress was opened at noon on the appointed day for assemblage, and with probably a brief intermission during the holidays will continue until March 4, when a new Congress and a new Administration will come into existence. The President's message was not ready for transmission, so there was nothing to do but to adjourn over until next day. An unquestioned quorum was present in each branch, so that the routine work of the session will no doubt be promptly resumed after the President's recommendations have been received and read. A beautiful crisp winter day and read. A beautiful crisp winter day ushered in the session, and long before the hour of noon spectators began to arrive at the House wing of the Capitol in order to the House wing of the Capitol in order to secure advantage of seats in the galleries. Members also began to arrive early and the scene presented on the floor was a lively and bustling one. In both Senate and House there was a rare display of beauty in the galleries and flowers on the floor, for although it was generally understood that no business could be transacted to-day, and that no communication would be received from the President, it is the habit of the Washington women to be in attendance on the opening caremonies of Congress, and to see that the desk of her favorite statesman is suitably decorated.

Sharp upon the stroke of 12 Vice-President forton brought the gavel down, barely missing a circular-shaped basket of roses that rested on his desk, and the Senate came to order. Chaplain Butler, in his prayer, referred feelingly to the President's recent afflictions. There was a surprisingly large number of Senators recent asserts on of the sights. was a surprisingly large number of Senators present, seventy-one of the eighty-eight being ready for business. Among the absentees were the two New York Senators. After the opening prayer by the Chaplain, Senator Morrill presented the certificate of election of his colleague, Senator Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, for the unexpired term of George F. Edmunds, terminating March 3, 1893, and for the ensuing term of six years. Upon the arm of his venerable colleague, Mr. Proctor, advanced to the dais of the Vice-President's desk, and Mr. Morton administered the statutory Mr. Morton administered the statutory oath. Senator Sherman presented the customary resolution instructing the Secretary to inform the House that the Secretary to inform the House that the Senate was ready to proceed to business. Senator Hale offered a resolution authorizing the President to appoint a committee of two to join a similar committee or the part of the House to inform the President that a quorum of each House was present, and that Congress was ready to receive any communication be might have to make. The resolution was adopted and Messrs. Hale and Gorman were named as the committee. Mr. Sherman suggested that the Senshould take a recess until 1 o'clock, ich was agreed to. On reasseming the Senate received a message on the House of Representatives by from the House of Representatives by Mr. Kerr, its Clerk, announcing that a quorum had appeared, and that it was ready to proceed to business. At 1:33 Senators Hale and Gorman appeared, and that they had performed Mr. Hale reported that they had performed the duty assigned them. The President had responded that he would send a message in writing to Congress at the beginning of to-morrow's session. Thereupon the Senate, on motion of Mr. Sherman, adjourned.

A committee, com-posed of Messra, Springer, Forney and O'Neill (Pennsylvania), was appointed to join a committee of the Senats to announce to the President that both to announce to the President that both Houses were in session and ready to receive any communication he saw fit to make. Mr. Payne, of New York, presented the petition of John I. Davenport, Chief Supervisor of Elections for the Sauthern District of New York, for a hearing before the bar of the House of Representatives, "he having been denied a hearing by a committee of the House." It was re-ferred to the Select Committee appointed to investigate the administration of United States election laws in the city of New York. The credentials of John L. McLauren, from the Sixth District of South Carolins; S. G. Hilborn, from the Third California District; Lewis B. Oneghan, from the Sixteenth Ohio District; John B. Brown, from the First Maryland District, and Sykes, from the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania District, were read and approved. The members-elect came forward and were sworn in. The report of the Utah Commission, the report of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and the report submitted by the Board of Managers of the Home for Disabled Soldiers were read by title and referred. At 12:40, upon motion of Mr. McMillin, the House took a recess for thirty minutes in order to give the committee appointed to wait upon the President oppor-tunity to report. At 1:35 the committee returned, and Mr. Springer announced that the commission with which they were charged had been executed and that the President would seni a communication to the House next day. Mr. English, of New Jersey, announced the death of his colleague, the late Representa-tive Edward F. McDonald, and stated that at a future time he hoped to submit some appropriate remarks. He offered the usual resolutions of respect and asked that as an additional mark of respect the House adjourn. The resolutions were adopted, and at 1:40 the House adjourned.
