Distinguished Bravery in Battle That Won Him Immortal Honors.

After his retirement from the White House March 4, 1881, ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes was heard of but seldom. Occasionally he attended a Grand Army reunion, and he was a prominent figure at the Columbian celebration and banquet in New York city Oct. 12-14, 1892. He was always present at the annual meetings of the board of trustees of the Peabody fund, of which all ex-presidents are members. But beyond these modest functions Mr. Hayes remained in absolute retirement at his home in Fremont, O., up to the time of his death. Mr. Hayes' career furnishes one of the most interesting chapters in the political history of the United States. He was born in Delaware, O., Oct. 4, 1822, his father having died the preceding July. He was graduated with honor from Kenyon college, Ohio, in August 1842, attended Harvard law school for a little over a year, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. In November, 1848, his health being somewhat impaired, he went to Texas for the winter, the White House during her sway there gave her a world wide fame, and for that action she received many testimonials of esteem both from Europe and America. Under the first call for troops by President Lincoln the literary club of which Mr. Hayes was a member organized a company, and he was elected captain, and on the 7th of June following the governor of Ohlo commissioned him major of the Twenty-third regiment Ohio infantry. It is both amusing and instructive to go over the roll of this regiment and note how many future great men were concealed in it under such modest titles as Colonels W. S. Rosecrans and James M. Comlay, Lieutenant Colonel Stanley Matthews, Lieuten-ant William McKinley, Jr., and others. Here, too, we find evidence the though Major Hayes had been reticent in conversation he had acquired quite a reputation as a speaker, for it was largely on account of his ability as an orator in rousing popular patriotism that he received his commis-

At this late day, too, one can afford to smile at the wild confusion of the timesrecruits pouring into Columbus ten times as fast as tents could be provided, the raw adjutant general "flying about like a sud-denly beheaded hen," and everybody blam-ing Governor Dennison, who frankly confessed that he "did not know a field officer from a grand marshal," and handed over all his military power to the suddenly cre-ated major general, George B. McClellan. Suffice it that Major Hayes' regiment got into West Virginia in July and did splendid service there.

He was judge advocate for a short time. was commissioned lieutenant colonel Oct. 24, 1861, and greatly distinguished himself at the battle of South Mountain, Oct. 14, 1862, where he was severely wounded. Soon after he became colonel of the regiment, and as such particularly distinguished himself in many movements and battles. He led a desperate charge on Cloyd mountain, and at the first battle of Winchester won the applause of the whole army. But it was at the second battle of Winchester, Sept. 19, 1864, that he won immortal honors. There he led an assault across a morass, and his horse having mired he charged on foot, and though but forty or fifty menfollowed so close as to keep up with him this squad captured a battery which had been deemed perfectly secure. Again at Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek he performed prodigies of valor. His commission as brigadier general soon arrived, and on March 13, 1865, he was made brevet brigadier general "for gallant and distinguished services." In the meantime he had been elected to congress from a Cincinnati dis-

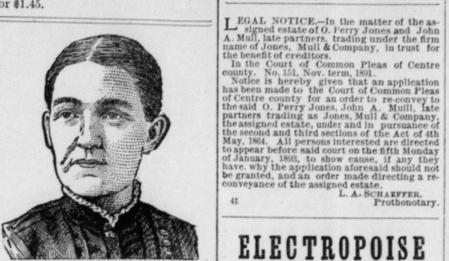

It was on this occasion that he made his famous retort. A friend having written to him to come home in the fall of 1864 and canvass the district, he answered with a rather sharp reproof, ending with this sen-tence: "An officer fit for duty who at this crisis would abandon his post to electioneer for a seat in congress ought to be scalped." He was re-elected in 1868, but his two terms in congress were uneventful. He voted with his party throughout, except on some minor resolutions on finance. In view of his subsequent prominence as a "prompt resumptionist," it is rather singular that these votes indicated an opposition to strong measures leading toward

In 1867 he was nominated by the Republicans for governor of Ohio and was elected. No election of that era excited more astonishment. The state had long been over-whelmingly Republican, the majorities ranging above 40,000 for some years, yet at the first election after the soldiers came home, with a phenomenally large rots, the highly honored general had less than 3,000 majority over Allen G. Thurman, and the legislature was carried by the Democrats. That body chose Judge Thurman for the

-M. C. Walk, a Taylor township farmer whose post office address is Port Matilda, sends the Bellefonte Gazette a report which to date proves him the champion hunter of this season. He states that since the season opened for the several kinds of game, several of which are closed now, he shot and killed 8 raccoons, 59 rabbits, 33 grey squirrels, 20 ground hogs, 3 pheasants, 15 wild turkeys. Five of the latter named weighed 112 pounds combined. Mr. Walk further states that he is not like some of the other sportsmen who go out and buy their game, but he killed them with his own gun in their respective haunts. If any one can beat Mr. Walk let him step up and prove it.

should hesitate to approve an Article of Merit and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commenda-tion may serve to extend those benefits to others by increasing their confidence. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe Nervous Headache for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but per-formed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bot-tle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surpris-ing what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their inten-sity, while her general health has been im-proved. Her appetite has also been better. From our experience with and after a period of unsettlement located in Cincinnati the next winter. In civil cases his practice was not very large, but he won considerable reputation as a prosecutor in criminal cases.

During all the years he was in Cincinnati no one seems to have taken a deep interest in him, and when he became a subject of national inquiry Cincinnati could furnish no reminiscences of him. The gen eral expression of the old citizen was, "Yes, he was city solicitor, and I knew him, but that's all." He was quist, studi-ous and rather reticent. He did not, says one who knew him, "talk about a matter and arrive at conclusions. When the company had talked for an hour he would suddenly break out with a statement, and that was his final judgment on the matter. If we had been asked to pick the future presidentout of all the young professionals of Cincinnati, not one of us would have named Mr. Hayes." It may also be added that of all the stories told about the boyhood of great men and the predictions as to their future not one is told of the boy Hayes. He grew like a hardy apple of the far north, a genitan or a russet, ripening with extreme deliberation.

On Dec. 30, 1852, he married Miss Lucy Ware Webb, daughter of Dr. James Webl a physician of high social standing in Chillicothe. Of their eight children four sons and one daughter reached maturity. Mrs. Hayes was noted for her devotion to sick and wounded soldiers during the war, and to temperance and public charities in Her refusal to have wine served in now become the exponent of advanced "hard money" views, and on the platform of prompt resumption he made his third campaign for governor in 1875, receiving about 5,500 majority after a campaign of almost unprecedented vigor on both sides. In the meantime he had run for congress in 1872 and been defeated by some 1,500 majority, and had in 1873 retired from public life and settled at Fremont, O. Soon after he came into possession of the large estate of his uncle, Silas Birchard, which further confirmed him in his resolution to lead a private life, and he only yielded in 1875 to the most earnest solicitations of the Republicans.

Of his presidential campaign in 1876 little need be said. His usual "luck of getting there by very narrow margins" followed him

In financial affairs his administration was an unequalified success. It was his good fortune to become president just at the time when panic and depression were giving way to "better times." Seven years of unexampled deficit in the crops of western Europe and equally unexampled good crops in the United States made the resumption of specie payments possible. The exports of grain in one year of his administration exceeded the ten year average before the war, and one year's import of gold were greater than all the previous gold imports since the administration of James K. Polk.

The death of Mrs. Hayes was a sad blow to the ex-president. He, more than the average man, valued the advice and respected the judgment of his wife, but he accepted the blow without murmuring and resignedly resumed the even tenor of his life
