For example horses, unless they are in prime condition, perfectly sound and well broken, will command no at decent prices. This brings on privations and purpose in the history of the commonsuffering. In many places men are driven to thieving to obtain the necessaries of life. Some may ask, how does it come that there are no crops on those fine lands of Kausas and by the republican officials in South Daspell, the soil soon bakes under the burning rays of August suns. Then when the southwesterly winds come they burn up every ves-tige of vegetation left, and that is one reason farmers are suffering. You may ask again, why do people stay in such a droughty coun-try? When one has his all invested in one of do people stay in such a droughty country? When one has his all invested in one of these farms and a mortgage on top of it, he simply has to stay or walk out of the country. On the other hand we notice that all sections of the country are suffering from depression. There seems to be a lack of confidence that affects all avenues of trade and industrial enterprises—there is stagnation, which produces Coxeyites and tramps. These things promise to continue until congress arrives at a satisfactory solution of producing sufficient revenues and a flexible currency.

When there is over production in one section and destitution and starvation in an adjoining district, it is evident that there is something radically wrong in our economic systems. Monopolies and corporations contribute largely to this distressing condition of the times. It is to be hoped that congress will furnish a speedy remedy.
