THE JINGO HUMBUG.

The jingo humbug is thus touched up by the Lewisburg Journal: The republican party are evidently very hard put to in finding an issue upon which they can go to the country in the next presidential election against the democrats and thus get the offices they so much covet. They cannot make a howl on the silver question, since honors are about equally divided, if honors there be in such a miserable squabble. The republican silverite is about as plentiful as the democratic, and he occupies an equally high and important place in his party's councils.

In this dreadful situation, and when the country does not seem to be rallying around the banner of the G. O. P., the only thing left is to give the British lion's tail a twist every now and then from the safe position of three thousand miles distance. The best way to do this is to pass some resolutions in which you condemn the policy of the democratic administration concerning Nicaragua, call the president, in a cheap sneer, "Grover," shout vociferously that the old party would never permit a red coat to land anywhere on this western hemisphere, and generally show to beholders that a calamity howler with lungs like the furnace of an ocean steamer has climbed up into a place which ought to be reserved for men of calm judicial temper, able to dignify the position and be a help to the country. Now if you will give the people time, they will generally find out the trick in this whole contemptible business, and conclude that it is done merely to make a stir and call attention to your waning prospects.

For the moment they look into the case they will find that the administration could not do otherwise than they have done and maintain our reputation as good neighbors. England has done only what we would and ought to have done in a similar case, what any self-respecting government would do, what it must do or be voted out of first-class nations. England had an official representative in Nicaragua. For some reason he was mistreated by the people of that country. England demanded reparation just as we would have done, in order to protect her citizens in their lawful right all over the globe. Nicaragua refused—and then England proceeded to punish her and prevent such a thing in the future. She demanded a money consideration and when this was refused she sent her ships to collect the bill.

Then Nicaragua waked up to the fact that something must be done, and after the troops had landed she paid the money and apologized. When this was done, England retired and the incident was over to the infinite disgust and disappointment of the blow-hards who hoped that we might somehow get into war about and give them a chance to make money by swindling the government in some way or other. Every government must maintain the safety and dignity of its official representatives and any other government that would try to prevent it from so doing would be in the wrong and soon find itself in very hot water.

We are not set for the defense of any other land but our own. Washington told us to keep clear of entangling alliances; and the "Monroe Doctrine," of which we hear so much, has not the slightest application to the case of Nicaragua. Those who assert that it has, proclaim their ignorance of the principles set forth by President Monroe, who was not such a fool as to commit us to the defense of all the wild, ungovernable people who in Central and South America change their government almost every Saturday night. For the true Monroe Doctrine, the American people will ever stand, as they stood against the French years ago for putting the Austrian prince on a throne in Mexico. But for this bastard Monroe Doctrine which the "jingos" are now trying to foster on the country, the people will have none of it, and the lover of peace and good will and commercial intercourse will be glad because the administration was not made up of "high-fliers" whose statesmanship consists in their ability to cry "mad dog" every time a British ship heaves in sight. Having failed to create any considerable feeling among the people against the democrats because they did not put on war paint and go down to scare the British away, the jingos will be forced to look elsewhere for material about which to howl. A fellow introduced one of these foolish resolutions into the Connecticut legislature and the resolution was knocked into a cocked hat when another member moved that one regiment of cavalry and one infantry be placed upon the Brooklyn bridge which should be loosed from its moorings and floated down there to frighten away the English. The legislature would have saved some of its credit had there been a wise man present to puncture the wind bag in this very effective way.

THE FIRST REPORTS CONFIRMED.

A Survivor Says the Steamer Struck on a Reef and began to Pound Herself to Pieces—Appalling Scenes as the Vessel Began to Sink.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—As further particulars are being received concerning the Colima disaster the outlook for the passengers and crew not already reported saved is very poor. The Pacific Mail last night received a dispatch from its agent at Manzanillo, saying that the Colima foundered, going down astern, sinking entirely in ten minutes.

A dispatch from Colima, Mexico, says that a special messenger has arrived there with official information for the governor of Colima regarding the Colima disaster. According to this statement a hurricane was encountered seventy-five miles below San Blas, and it was debated as to whether or not the ship should attempt to gain partial shelter in the shallow and treacherous Bandillas bay, which has reefs near its entrance, or whether it were better to push out to sea.

One Mexican passenger, Don Mathias Moreno, says the report was about on the deck, and he testifies that while cautiously steering for what to all appearances was the usual entrance a slight tremble was felt to go through the ship. It was so faint that it was hardly apparent to the trained senses of the pilots and captains. The captain ordered a slight change in the course, and gave other directions which were obeyed by the officers and crew.

In a very few seconds after the keel grounded on a rock lightly, and there was at once great excitement among the officers and crew, and fear on the part of the few passengers on deck. Following the danger signal the great ship crunched on an unknown reef, and a shudder ran through the hull from bow to stern.

The passengers sprang from their berths in terror and ran out on the decks, screaming and praying in a prooxym of fear as the awful truth began to burst upon them. The wind howled and a dense pall of fog hung over the ship as she was tossed by the surges and began to pound herself to pieces on the rocks. She rose and fell three times, and then a crash was heard.

"On the boats," trumpeted the captain, after a short interval, in which another crash was heard from beneath the water. The boats had previously been made ready, with all the life savers placed at convenient places, although covered from the view of nervous passengers. Within three minutes of the first crash in the hull, the ship began to reel from its upright balance, to settle, and to sink in its free hinder part. The scenes about the lifeboats were indescribable. According to all the testimony obtainable the panic-stricken passengers, and the ship's crew struggled for first place, although to the credit of the crew it is said only a few of the sailors or ship's people lost their presence of mind, but gave their main attention to saving the passengers.

There were a number of children on the passenger list, and one of these was pitched overboard into the frothing sea by a frenzied father, who aimed for one of the lifeboats while still upon the vessel, and swept away by the mighty force and swallowed by the night fog. Of this load only one of the sailors is known to have escaped the engulfing flood which swept over the boat within five minutes after it was launched. A similar fate befell all the other boats, with one exception.

COLON, Colombia, June 2.—Advice received here as to the manner of the wreck of the steamship Colima says that a heavy sea struck her, and the large deck load of lumber and cargo shifted, the vessel being overturned. Bad stowage is reported to be the cause of the disaster. Twenty-one persons are reported saved and 195 lost.

Drugged Whiskey and Robbery.

The Tyrone Times of last week has the following to say of the adventures of a Centre county sport while at that place: On Tuesday evening 21, C. F. Allen, of Boalsburg, Centre county, arrived in Tyrone and proceeded to get on the outside of considerable booze. He continued his debauch on Wednesday and landed at the hill side near the station that evening. About dark Foster Kaup and Amos Crane, of town, approached the man and told him they were tramps on their way to Pittsburgh. During the talk Allen produced fifteen cents and Kaup twenty-five cents when Kaup left with it for fun. He soon returned and Allen took a drink. The rum was drugged and soon Allen was under its influence. Kaup and Crane then secured his watch and other valuable. Allen awoke on Thursday morning and found his companions gone. Officers Snyder and Barr interviewed Allen during the day and the result was suspicion of the above named boys. Watch was kept and at 9.33 Thursday night they alighted from the train. A decoy was set and the boys enticed to a pool room where Allen recognized them. Their arrest followed. A hearing was given them yesterday morning before Justice Smith. Being unable to secure bail, Officer Barr took them to Hollidaysburg to jail on the 1.02 train.

A Fish Story.

The following fish story is somewhat out of the usual run, but it need not take second place for anything ever put in print:

"Starrucca, a little village on the Erie (Railway, between Deposit and Susquehanna, is interested in the discovery made yesterday of a subterranean cavern. Some quarrymen, in removing a layer of flag stones, found the cavern, through which ran a stream of water of greenish hue containing speckled green fishes. The fishes are without eyes and propel themselves by their tail. They invariably swim backward and have a motion unlike that of a fresh water crab. Several have been sent to the Pennsylvania Fish Commissioners as curiosities. The quarry was located in a bed of limestone rock in an unfrequented place. When the layer had been removed it was further observed that the internal walls of the cavern were lined with translucent stalactites and stalagmites imperfectly formed.

During the talk Allen produced fifteen cents and Kaup twenty-five cents when Kaup left with it for fun. He soon returned and Allen took a drink. The rum was drugged and soon Allen was under its influence. Kaup and Crane then secured his watch and other valuable. Allen awoke on Thursday morning and found his companions gone. Officers Snyder and Barr interviewed Allen during the day and the result was suspicion of the above named boys. Watch was kept and at 9.33 Thursday night they alighted from the train. A decoy was set and the boys enticed to a pool room where Allen recognized them. Their arrest followed. A hearing was given them yesterday morning before Justice Smith. Being unable to secure bail, Officer Barr took them to Hollidaysburg to jail on the 1.02 train.

A Fish Story.

The following fish story is somewhat out of the usual run, but it need not take second place for anything ever put in print:

"Starrucca, a little village on the Erie (Railway, between Deposit and Susquehanna, is interested in the discovery made yesterday of a subterranean cavern. Some quarrymen, in removing a layer of flag stones, found the cavern, through which ran a stream of water of greenish hue containing speckled green fishes. The fishes are without eyes and propel themselves by their tail. They invariably swim backward and have a motion unlike that of a fresh water crab. Several have been sent to the Pennsylvania Fish Commissioners as curiosities. The quarry was located in a bed of limestone rock in an unfrequented place. When the layer had been removed it was further observed that the internal walls of the cavern were lined with translucent stalactites and stalagmites imperfectly formed.
