TO BE HELD ON JUNE SIXTEENTH.

San Francisco Led on the Informal Ballot, but on the Fourth Formal Ballot, After a Two Hours' Struggle, the Mound City Comes in Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.-The Republican national convention will be held at St. Louis on June 16 next. That was the decision reached by the national committee assembled here yesterday after spirited balloting lasting two hours. The successive ballots, the first being informal, are shown as follows:

Pittsburg.....

The morning was spent in hearing speeches in behalf of the contending cities, the doors being open to the various contesting delegations. This concluded, the committee began its afternoon session behind closed doors. An eager crowd choked up the corridors leading to the committee room, and awaited the announcement of

The first important question of the afternoon was the fixing of the date of the convention. The executive committee reported a resolution favoring June 16. This was amended by Committeeman Lannan, of Utah, in favor of Aug. 18. There was a sharp debate, and Mr. DeYoung, of California, finally proposed July as a compromise between June and August. The De-Young and Lannan amendments were both defeated, and then, by a practically unanimous vote, the date was fixed at June 16.

Then came the main contest between the cities. There was much excitement as the ballots proceeded, the committeemen from the interested sections hurrying about and seeking to effect combinations. At the outset San Francisco secured one more than the nineteen claimed from the first. The announcement of her lead was greeted with enthusiasm when it reached the outer corridors. The strength of St. Louis was somewhat greater than had been expected. while neither Pittsburg nor Chicago made the showing anticipated.

St. Louis gained steadily on each ballot. San Francisco sought to meet this by drawing the votes of Chicago, but without avail. The first serious break occurred when David Martin, of Pennsylvania, led the Pittsburg forces toward St. Louis. On the fourth and last formal ballot the San Francisco forces broke for the first time, Michigan, Wyoming and Connecticut going to St. Louis. That settled it, and gave St. Louis the convention. The choice was made unanimous on motion of Mr.

DeYoung, of San Francisco. On the announcement of the decisive ballot there was a rush for the St. Louis headquarters, where all the delegates from that city gathered with Missouri congressmen and politicians at large. There was a great handshaking and popping of corks for a few minutes, with occasional cheers, followed by speechmaking by both Republicans and Democrats.

Salvie of boundary for States 3511110 of New York, acting for the reorganization committee, yesterday bid in the entire system of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad company, which was sold at public auction here under decree of the United States circuit court of Aug. 2 last. Sixty millions of dollars was the price paid. At 2:30 p. m. John B. Johnson, special master in chancery in the celebrated receivership case, quietly and without any more flourish than if he were about to sell a town lot, offered the property to the highest bidder. "What am offered?" the auctioneer said. "I offer sixty million dollars," said Edward King a low voice. "Do I hear any more bids?" cried Judge Johnson. "Once, twice, the last call. THE AFTERNOON TEA.

terially Changed.

It is the general complaint that both at afternoon teas and at homes the tea is made disagreeably and perniciously strong. Formerly such a complaint was never heard; a strong cup of tea was the fashion; all liked it, and thought themselves ill treated if anything else were offered them; now it is quite the other way, and a hostess who studies the fashion of the day and the tas es of her guests makes a rule of asking whether weak or strong ten is preferred before pouring it out, and then adding hot water to taste, while others train their servants, at some trouble to themselves, to bring in the tea the moment it is made.

Now is the time for some spirited patentee to produce an invention that could be applied to our dear old silver teapots or to modern china ones to hold the tea leaves and prevent their sinking to the bottom of the teapot, and thus brewing the harmful solution that is accredited with bringing about such ill effects. An approach to something of this sort has been attempted in the little Japanese teapots with china strainers, but these are too small for large teapots, and something further, which could be adjusted to any sized teapot, is required.

Half past 4, or even 4 o'clock, is now the regulation tea hour, and when people adhere to the old fashioned custom of giving 5 o'clock tea their friends regard it in the light of a grievance, especially in the country, when, after a long drive or bicycle ride, the half hour's delay in the accustomed tea hour makes all the difference to exhausted nature, for tea is allowed, even by its opponents, to have a "stimulating and restorative effect on the constitution" in spite of the "subsequent depression" and the "deleterious" results.

Afternoon tea is now very justly styled a meal, as so many substantial things are given in the way of sandwiches of many varieties, of potted game and chicken, potted fish; also of tomatoes, cucumber and cress, etc., in addition to hot scones and tea cakes, or muffins and buttered buns, rich cake, iced and ornamented cakes, etc. Not only at large at home teas are these. given, but at the usual afternoon drawing room, and, as a rule, the appetites of the guests are found equal to the oc-

The lateness of the dinner hour is doubtless the excuse and the reason for the readiness shown to eat and enjoy these dainties thus early in the afternoon. Be this as it may, a substantial afternoon tea has become the fashion, and few wish it otherwise; occasionally one comes across a man or a woman who avers that he or she never "touches tea," which in this case bears out the medical strictures upon this beverage; to some it is almost a poison, and to others it is an unnecessary luxury, not to be indulged in .- London Queen.

Roman Taste the Country.

Hadrian's villa, near livoif, which

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 11.—Edward King, was seven miles round, and Diocletian's farm. The Stones came from Massa-"retreat," the ruins of which form the town of Spalato, show the Roman taste for the country run wild and grown monstrous. After the empire fell, for awbile terror and insecurity drove men to stay in towns when they could not build for themselves fortified castles; the antithesis of the villa. But with the first opportunity the old love reappeared. In other countries the castle gave birth to the exclusive country seat, where the great noble lived as a king. The town house, if there was one, was a secondary affair; often there was none, as is the case to this day in Austria and Hungary. In Italy, on the other hand, there was a reversion to the Roman arrangement; the house in the city was the most important, but it was supplemented by more or less numerous, more or less splendid, villas. Not to have two houses was destitution; hence the crown of villas around any characteristically Italian town-Brescia or Vicenza or Trento.

The untraveled Italian looks in amazement at the well to do Englishman who admits that he has only one home. An Italian "person of quality" who was obliged for the sake of economy to spend all the year at his villa might complain, as Browning makes him complain, but were he forced to pass 12 months in the vaunted city square there would possibly be suicide instead of sighs. This time the poet, who dived deep in the Italian mind, only brings to the surface half a truth. - Contemporary Review.

Paying For the Honor.

In China it is believed that people should pay according to their means. The one barber in Peking who understands the foreign mode of hairdressing charges a foreign minister half a dollar, a secretary of legation 25 cents and an unofficial foreigner 10 cents. Natives pay about half a cent for the same service. So says Mr. Holcombe in his book. "The Real Chinaman," and he adds this bit of personal experience:

In passing through Japan I once had occasion to employ a Chinese chiropodist residing there. His charges, so be declared, were 5 cepts to his fellow Chinese, 10 cents to an ordinary Japanese and half a dollar to all other foreigners. In the course of the conversation, while he was at work, he said:

"I hear that our Chinese minister came to this hotel today. Do you know whom he came to see?"

"Oh, yes," said I, "he came to call on me.

"Then you must be an official," said the Chinaman.

I modestly admitted such to be the fact, and the conversation drifted to other subjects. When the man's labors were concluded, He demanded a dollar, in the face of his own statement that his regular charge to all foreigners, excepting Japanese, was 80 cents, and he enforced his claim by this argument:

"Sposey that China minister come

"DIED OF CHOLERA."

This English Function Has Latterly Ma- The History of Eighteen Graves In the Country Churchyard at Sandy Hill.

In the old graveyard of the Sandy Hill district, in the town of Dansville, are 18 graves, the time anined stones of which, below the names and dates inscribed thereon, bear the words, "Died of Cholera." The time covered by the dates is from Aug. 24 to Sept. 5, 1834 -12 days. The settlement thereabout, in 1834, was an isolated one among the pines that then covered northern Steuben county, and composed of not more than threescore souls. The story of how it fell victim to the scourge that carried one-third of its population away is told by an old resident.

Among the earliest settlers in the Sandy Hill district was John Brail, who came with his wife and seven children in 1817 and began clearing up a farm. He was a Pennsylvania German, eccentric, but kindly and lovable. A physical peculiarity of this pioneer was that his teeth were all double, every one of them being sound when he died at the age of 90. In 1834 a great many Germans began settling in that part of Steuben county. They came from New York up the Hudson river to Albany, thence to Buffalo by the Erie canal, and the rest of the way as they could.

In the summer of 1834 five Germans next year. He made the announcement came to the Sandy Hill district, where in a letter ad freezed to State Senator Methey had purchased land of agents and became guests of Brail. They had walked from Buffalo, where they had left their families. In the kindness of his heart Brail sent teams to Buffalo to fetch the latter in. He had a vacant loghouse on his farm, which he placed at the disposal of the emigrants until they could put up houses on their land. Mrs. Brail helped some of the women in washing clothes the day they arrived.

That evening she was taken violently ill and died in great agony the next day, Aug. 24. Doctors had been summoned from Dansville. They said Mrs. Brail had died of cholera morbus. Some of her neighbors insisted that it was a case of malignant cholera and forbade a public funeral Mrs. Brail was buried on Thursday. On Saturday two of her daughters were prostrated with the disease. One of them died the same night. While her plain hem lock coffin was being made a brother was seized with the malady and shut himself in the barn, where he died while his sister's body was being taken to the graveyard. One by one the emigrants fell victims to the disease. A Mrs. Kerch and her children died within three days. Between that time and Sept. 30 eight others fell victims to the plague. All were buried, after the funeral of Mrs. Brail, with the clothes they were or wrapped in the bedding on which they died. It was afterward learned that on the way from Albany to Buffalo a sister of Mrs. Kerch died after symptoms such as had attended the victims at Sandy Hill. She was buried, but her clothing was kept and placed in a trunk. That clothing was some that Mrs. Brail assisted in washing on the arrival of the emigrants at chusetts. Mrs. Stone brought with her the seeds of a sweet apple that grew in an orchard on her father's farm in that state. She planted them and raised a fine orchard of the same variety of apples. In the season of 1835 the trees bore apples that were as sour as they had been sweet before, and their fruit was sour ever afterward. One of those trees of that original orchard is standing yet and bore apples for the last time three years ago. They were sweet-the first sweet apples it had borne since 1834.—Bath (N. Y.) Letter in New York Sun.

A Double Dinner.

A distinguished judge frequently brings friends home to dinner quite unexpectedly. This habit is certainly hospitable, but it is not popular with wives.

One court day the genial judge invited a number of his legal brethren to dine with him, serenely oblivious of the fact that his wife was totally unspared for such an incursion. The laly, however, was equal to the occasion. She did not fuss and frown and make things unpleasant all round. On the contrary, she accepted the situation with a good grace and made the best of it.

The modest meal was served as promptly as possible, and though it was not a sumptuous banquet it was at least agreeable to guests and host. When dinner was over, just before leaving the gentlemen to their wine and cigars, the lady rose and said:

"Gentlemen, I wish to say one word. You have dined today with the judge; will you do me the honor of dining tomorrow with me?"

A chorus of applause greeted this speech, and next day the lady welcomed her husband's friends to a dinner worthy of such an accomplished hostess.-Ex-

Unconventional Preacher of St. Albans. The unconventional preacher at St. Albans, Holborn, has been giving his congregation some seasonable advice as to the kind of dinner parties they should give. "Do not," Father Stanton said the other day, "give dinners at 2 guineas a head to rich people who have plenty of food at home and do not appreciate your attentions, but spend the £50 which the dinner would cost you on a feast to the poor, who are in want of the necessaries of life and who would not say at the end, 'How thankful we are that this is over.'
