IMPOSING INAUGURATION.

Took the Oath of Office Beneath a Cloudless Sky.

WASHINGTON IN GALA ATTIRE.

Entrancing Scenes of Brightness and Beauty by Day and by Night-The New President's Inaugural Address an Able Exposition of the Policy of His Administration-He Will Earnestly Support International Bimetallism and a Protective Tariff-President McKinley's Cabinet Complete.

Washington, March 4 .-- William Mc-Kinley, of Ohio, was today installed as president of the United States for the term of four years, continuing until the 4th of March, 1901, and Grover Cleveland for the second time passed from the exercise of the high office of president and entered private life. As ex-president he has but one living contemporary, his immediate predecessor, Benjamin Harrison. Incidental to the actual assuming of office by the president, and slightly preceding it in point of time, Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey, took the oath of office as vice president of the United States, and was installed as ex-officio presiding officer of the senate.

The proceedings of the day were characterized by all the imposing spectacular effects and demonstrations of popular interest which have become a growing feature of the inaugural ceremonies. The weather was appropriate for the grand occasion, gloriously beautiful, and between 20,000 and 25, men tered to President McKinley by Chief Justice Fuller, and here he delivered his inaugural address, which was in substance as follows: Fellow Citizens: In obedience to the States, relying on the support of my countrymen and invoking the guidance of Almighty God. Our faith teaches that there is no safer reliance than upon the God of our fathers, who has so singularly favored the American people in every national trial, and who will not forsake us so long as we obey his commandments and walk humbly in his footsteps.

Our currency should continue under the supervision of the government. The several forms of our paper money offer, in my judgment, a constant embarrassment to the government and a safe balance in the treasury. Therefore, I believe it necessary to devise a system which, without diminishing the circulating medium or offering a premium for its contraction, will put a remedy for the arrangements, which, temporary in their nature, might well in the years of our prosperity have been displaced by wiser provisions.

Most of our financial laws are the outgrowth of experience and trial, and should not be amended without investigation, and demonstration of the wisdom of the proposed changes. We must be both "sure we are right" and "make haste slowly." If, therefore, congress in its wisdom shall deem it expedient to create a commission to take under early consideration the revision of our and upon none more than the holders of small farms. Agriculture has languished and labor suffered. The revival of manufacturing will be a relief to both. No portion of our popula-tion is more devoted to the institutions of free government, nor more loyal in their support, while none bears more cheerfully or fully its proper share in the maintenance of the government, or is better entitled to its wise and liberal care and protection. Legislation helpful to producers is beneficial to all. It is inspiring, too, to remember that no great emergency in the one hundred and eight years of our eventful national life has ever arisen that has not been met with wisdom and courage by the American people, with fidelity to their best interests and highest destiny and to the honor of the American name. These years of glorious history have exalted mankind and advanced the cause of freedom throughout the world, and immeasurably strengthened the precious free institutions which we enjoy. The people love and will sustain these institutions. Lynchings must not be tolerated in a great and civilized country like the United States; courts, not mobs, must execute the penalties of the law. The preservation of public order, the right of discussion, the integrity of courts, and the orderly administration of jus-tice must continue forever the rock of safety upon which our government securely rests.

One of the lessons taught by the late election which all can rejoice in is that the citizens of the United States are both law respecting and law abiding people, not easily swerved from the path of patriotism and honor. This is in entire accord with the genius of our institutions, and but emphasizes the advantages of inculcating even a greater love for law and order in the future.

Our naturalization and immigration laws should be further improved to the constant promotion of a safer, a better and a higher citizenship. A grave p to the republic would be a citizenship ignorant to understand or too vi to appreciate the great value and eficence of our institutions and and against all who come here to n war upon them our gates must promptly and tightly closed. Nor we be unmindful of the need of provement among our own citiz Illiteracy must be banished from land.

Reforms in the civil service mus on. But the changes should be real genuine, not perfunctory or prom

I had been working a good many hours a day and I was so run down that I felt something should be done at once. I had read so much of Nervura that I tried a bottle, to find its effect so wondrously beneficial and strengthening that I tried a second bottle, with the result that I am fully restored to health, my nervousness has disappeared and I feel a hundred per cent better in every way. tol. At least 20,000 people witnessed the administration of the oath of office, on the eastern portico of the Capitol, and listened or attempted to listen, to the delivery of the new president's inaugural address. At night a gorgeous state ball, at which the president and vice president were present, closed the proceedings.

The many glories of the day were eclipsed by the various night displays. The decorations of the ballroom have not been equaled before in this country, and those who have attended noted fetes abroad declare they have not been anywhere excelled. The fireworks display was especially grand. It was just 10:15 o'clock when President-elect McKinley left his temporary quarters at the Ebbitt House, accompanied by the senate committee, con-

The party entered the White House. Shortly before noon they emerged, accompanied by President Cleveland, and were escorted to the Capitol, where the inaugural ceremonies took place on the east portico. Here the oath of office was adminis-

and give them that exhaustive, careful and dispassionate examination that their importance demands, I shall cordially concur in such action.

The question of international bimetallism will have early and earnest attention. It will be my constant endeavor to secure it by co-operation with the other great commercial powers of the world. Until that condition is realized when the parity between our gold and silver money springs from and is supported by the relative value of the two metals, the value of the silver already coined, and of that which may hereafter be coined, must be kept constantly at par with gold by every resource at our command. The credit of the government, the integrity of its currency, and the inviolability of its obligations must be preserved. This was the commanding verdict of the people, and it will not be unheeded.

Economy is demanded in every branch of the government at all times, but especially in periods like the present of depression in business and distress among the people. The severest economy must be observed in all pubexpenditures and extravagance stopped wherever it is found, and prevented wherever in the future it may be developed. The government should not be permitted to run behind, or increase its debt, in times like the present. A deficiency is inevitable so long as the expenditures of the government exceed its receipts. It can only be met by loans, or an increased revenue.

While a large annual surplus of revenue may invite waste and extravagance, inadequate revenue creates distrust and undermines public and private credit.

Loans are imperative in great emergencies to preserve the government or its credit, but a failure to supply needed revenue in time of peace for the maintenance of either has no justification.

The country is clearly opposed to any needless additions to the subjects of internal taxation, and is committed by its latest popular utterance to the system of tariff taxation. There can be no misunderstanding, either, about the principle upon which this tariff taxation shall be levied. Nothing has ever been made plainer at a general election than that the controlling principle in the raising of revenues from duties on imports, is zealous care for American interests and American labor. The people have declared that such legislation should be had as will give ample protection and encouragement to the industries and the development of our country.

In the revision of the tariff especia attention should be given to the re-enactment and extension of the reciprocity principle of the law of 1890, under which so great a stimulus was given to our foreign trade in new and advantageous markets, for our surplus agricultural and manufactured pro ducts. The brief trial given this legislation amply justifies a further ex-periment and additional discretionary power in the making of commercial treaties.

The depression of the past four years has fallen with especial severity upon the great body of toilers of the country
