-More building seems to be in progress this year about State College than in any part of the county. Many Bellefonte workmen and mechanics have secured steady employment there during the past summer. Centre Hall also enjoyed considerable of a boom in the line of building new residences. When prosperity strikes our town again we expect to see things different.

-John Noll, a son of Mr. Emanuel Noll, and Eversley Thomas, a nephew, arrived home last Thursday. He is in the employ of the Peoria Transfer and Storage Co., and likes Illinois's second largest city so well that two years ago he got John Noll a nice position in a bicycle works there and now both boys are home for a week. -Two of the finest dressed windows seen in Bellefonte for a long time are those of the Philadelphia Branch clothing house, in Temple Court. The one is a display of clothing, and the other gent's furnishing goods. At night they attract much attention and are quite tasty.

-Wm. Potter, a 17 year old son of John Potter, of Milesburg, has two samples of modeling in clay on exhibition in town. The one is a life sized bust of Napoleon and the other a reclining deer on a pedestal. They evince considerable artistic ability from a boy of his age, who never had any instruction in that line. It attracts much attention.

The young man is anxious to secure assistance to attend an art school. He certainly is deserving.

A Great Surprise Is In Store.

For those who will go to-day and get a package of GRAIN-O. It takes the place of coffee at about 1/2 the cost. It is a food drink, full of health, and can be given to the children as well as the adult with great benefit. It is made of pure grains and looks and tastes like the finest grades of Mocha or Java coffee. It satisfies everyone. A cup of Grain-O is better for the system than a tonic, because its benefit is permanent. What coffee breaks down Grain-O builds up. Ask your grocer for Grain-O, 15c. and 25c.

A Sperty Time.

Tuesday evening a lot of Bellefonte sports went out the pike beyond Axemann for the purpose of speeding their nags. A large delegation were on hand for the fun. The horsemen were Mart Garman, Shem Spigelmeyer, John Shugert and Geo. Lose. The road was narrow and only two could go at a time, and then the distance was too short to give a good test. Some of the horses have track records and showed a good movement.

Among the crowd was Gen. Hastings' coachman, who came out to see the fun. After considerable persuasion he was induced to put the Gov's nag on the road, it took a pace that completely dusted all the rest. Few, who loaf about the livery stable parlors in Bellefonte, knew that the Gov. had a 2.14 flyer, and of course will talk about the animal for weeks to come.

The Cornelly Case

Many persons inquire as to what has been done with the James Cornelly arson case. The defendant is still in the county jail and sentence has not yet been imposed. Immediately after the verdict of the jury was announced at the last term of court, Messrs Furst and Taylor at once moved for arrest of sentence and made a motion for a new trial. They were given ten days time for filing the reasons for same, which was done.

The question of granting a new trial will likely be argued before the court on the second week of October, at regular argument court. It may be granted or refused at once, or held over for consideration. In case of refusal, the prisoner would likely receive sentence soon after, unless the case should be appealed to a higher court.

Make the Most of Yourself.

It is the duty of every man to make the most of himself. Whatever his capacities may be, he is sure to find some place where he can be useful to himself and to others. But he cannot reach his highest usefulness without good health and he cannot have good health without pure blood. The blood circulates to every organ and tissue and when it is pure, rich and healthy it carries health to the entire system, but if it is impure it scatters disease wherever it flows. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true blood purifier. It cures salt rheum, scrofula, catarrh, dyspepsia and rheumatism, because these diseases have their origin in the blood.

Lewisburg Fair.

The Union County Fair will be held at Brook Park, near Lewisburg, Sept. 28, 29, 30 and Oct. 1, 1897. For the benefit of visitors, the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. will sell excursion tickets to Brook Park, Sept. 28, 29, 30 and Oct. 1, valid for return passage until October 2, 1897, inclusive at greatly reduced rates.

Special return train will be run Thursday Sept. 30, to Rising Springs and on Friday October 1 to Glen Iron, leaving Lewisburg 5:50 p. m. Brook Park 5:55 p. m.

Will Remain.

The following item appeared in several papers: "Rev. Edward Evert Houshour, the faithful and efficient pastor of the Lutheran church at Bellefonte, has been called and unanimously elected to the church at Hellam, Pa." Rev. Houshour has not accepted the call and will remain with his Bellefonte charge.

CLOSE OF THE PICNIC.

Last Thursday the Patrons Exhibition at Centre Hall was well attended. Trains from all points were filled and private conveyances lined the road all day. It was the first day of the week for a good attendance. The weather was exceedingly warm and the ground very dusty so as to make traveling exceedingly unpleasant. A cloud of dust, seemed to hover over the ground. You inhaled it in large quantities, it penetrated your clothing until you felt as dirty as a pig. But that did not interfere with many who came to see the picnic and have a good time.

This year the program was about the same as formerly. There was a liberal display of farm machinery, live stock and merchandise. In the auditorium a list of prominent speakers talked on agriculture and public questions. The other forms of entertainment consisted in a visit to the "Midway Pleaisance" where almost every device imaginable was in full blast to make you happy or rich. It was a fine assortment of fakers, thugs, confidence-men ready to lure you into some game of chance, or gambling device, and they were well patronized. The country boy dropped his dimes and dollars, the town sports shoved up their chin like true sports, and doubled again and again until they went away badly nipped and skinned. Some parties lost heavily and never squealed, others played the baby-act and wanted their money back and made threats of an arrest. And thus it went. Without doubt more people hung about the dives and gambling dens, found them more interesting than any other portion of the exhibition.

On Thursday evening, at about 8 o'clock, a terrific windstorm came up and hunting's large circus tent was blown down while the performance was in progress. A panic ensued that was frightful. Women and children screamed, some prayed who never were known to do so before. In all the scramble and excitement no one was injured except a lady who was on the trapeze when the tent dropped. Her hand was cut by a piece of glass on the ground where she fell. The tent was almost ruined. Some of the small tents about the ground were blown down also.

Friday the ground was in fine condition but the attendance was small and many began to pull up stakes for home.

FURNACE NEWS.

At present all sorts of rumors are afloat in this community relative to the iron furnaces that have closed down. Everybody naturally is anxious to see them in full operation as it means much to this community. The iron industries were the town's principal support, and when they close down, every branch of trade suffers. In order to find out as near as possible what was likely to happen, the writer interviewed some of our prominent men who know what is transpiring.

The owners of the present Bellefonte Furnace, commonly known as the Collins plant, recently entered into negotiations for the sale of the entire property. One week ago a party agreed to buy it at a sum that was satisfactory, and has thirty days in which to close up the option. Accordingly the sale of the plant is considered a sure thing, and will likely be put in operation, after that.

The Valentine Furnace is still idle, but the rise in iron may cause its resumption. John P. Harris president of the same said that if the price of pig iron advanced another dollar per ton the furnace would be started.

The Hebrew Year.

The Jewish year 5658 commences on Monday the 27th inst., the day being known as the first of the month Tisri.

The Israelites, Carthaginians, Egyptians, Persians, Syrians and other eastern people commenced their year about the autumnal equinox. The Greeks previous to Menton's time commenced their year at the winter solstice, and then changed it to the summer solstice. The Romans were the first people to adopt January 1st as the commencement of the year. The French until 1564 commenced their year in March or April and the Russians reckoned from September 1st, until Peter the Great's time.

The primitive nations followed the seasons of the year in making their divisions of time, while modern peoples use the sun in their computations. Most civilized nations divide the year into quarters, but according to Genesis the Israelites divided their year into seasons, viz, seed time and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and Golius writes of the same divisions now existing among the Arabs. Frequently the years varied in length. Sometimes the revolution of one planet was taken and sometimes that of another. The 473000 years of the Chaldean empire are generally considered as being equivalent to our days or 1296 modern years, and the 720,000 years of Babylon equal to 1972 of our years.

In all countries the beginning of a new year has been regarded as a holiday and Hebrews all over the world will celebrate the beginning of another period in their long annuals.

Church Dedication.

The dedication of Christ's Union church, near Hecla Park, will take place on Sunday, October 10th, services at 2 p. m. The different denominations have been invited to participate in the services.

Privations of Early Settlers.

charged from the service of the United States after a perilous servitude on the frontier of over seven years.

Another of these hardy pioneers, whose only music at night was the "nightingales of the wilderness", sometimes called wolves, was Bob Covenhoven the scout, the surveyor, and farmer. He was born of Dutch parents in New Jersey and moved into the settlements on the West Branch of the Susquehanna in 1779. He served his country in the revolutionary struggle and was on the staff of General Sullivan as a spy and a guide. After the war was over and peace again surrounded the homes, he settled at Jersey Shore and there lived until the time of his death in October 1846 at the good old age of 90 years.

On Wednesday, October 15, 1879, at Muncy, Pa., a monument was unveiled to the most historic family along the West Branch of the Susquehanna, and possibly no error would be made in saying, the most historic family on the frontier from Maine to Georgia. This was no other than the Maine granite obelisk, 27 feet high, weighing 25 tons, and dedicated to the memory of Capt. John Brady. The Brady's were of Irish descent. Hugh Brady, the head of the family, immigrated to America and temporarily located in the state of Delaware, where in 1733, the one who was to figure prominently in the history of the colonies, Captain John, was born.

During the summer of 1778, some horrible massacres occurred. On June 10th of this same year the butchery of the Peter Smith party on the site of the present city of Williamsport was perpetrated. During the fall of this year, about the 8th of August, young Jim Brady was scalped by the Indians. The settlements were all in confusion and uproar—the rude forts of protection along the Susquehanna were abandoned to the ravages of the red man and terror was in every home. Hastily improvised means of transportation down the river were constructed and the personal effects of the settler, with his wife and children, were loaded on board and a race for life was inaugurated. The women and larger children were left to pilot the rude rafts and canoes down the river while the husband and father walked along the banks to guard the party from ambush attacks of the Redskins. Many times the rafts would become lodged to some obstruction in the river, and the women would quickly jump off into the water and with their frail strength dislodge the object of delay, to again float towards Fort Augusta and reinforcements. Farm implements, goods, and stock were left behind to take care of themselves. This hasty movement is what was known as the "Big Runaway." 'Tis said that years afterwards when the settlers returned to their homes they found their chickens and turkeys running wild, also their cows with young, fat, calves, but their crops and pains for their toil were nothing. During all this commotion in the valley and after a general summing up of the cost, there was in addition to human lives, a financial loss of over 4000 pounds sterling to the industrious pioneers of the magnificent and picturesque country.

Returning again to the fate of the noble James Brady, it was on the morning of the 8th of August that the reapers and cradlers began to cut the crop of the Peter Smith farm, on Turkey Run, near Williamsport. The gleaners were protected by a corporal's guard, as an attack from the Indians was suspected during the foggy morning hours. Neither were their anticipation wrongly calculated, for in the early dawn the Redskins pounced down upon them like so many wolves, and young Jim Brady was pierced through the side with a spear in the hands of a young brave. Another savage marked the horrid circle around his head and the reeking scalp was torn from their man and born off in triumph as a trophy of their hellish work. His cruel tormentors were supposed to have been the Mingoes, and foremost in the murderous work was the celebrated chief Bald Eagle. Brady was also tomahawked four different times and used as an object to demonstrate and teach the young Indians in the manner of using the cruel weapon. Through all this suffering the hardy young fellow lived for five days when his reason returned, and remained long enough that he was able to describe his murderers. Sympathetic friends watched by the couch and bathed the fevered brow, while an aged hand clasped that of the scout, ever and anon smoothing the pillow or administering such delicate kindness, as only the heart of a mother or the affection of true woman can tender. A gentle movement, a nervous silence, as only can pervade the death chamber, and the words "my poor head, oh! where am I mother," another moment's suspense—another breath, a flutter—and life had departed from the body of the noblest scout that ever guarded the West Branch of the Susquehanna.

Nor was this all that was to pain the already overburdened heart of the "mother of heroes," for in the following spring, April 11th, the father too was shot through the heart while riding his favorite horse along the public highway near his home on Muncy creek. After the death of young James, his brother, Captain Sam Brady, vowed vengeance upon the Bald Eagle and all his tribe, to which, 'tis said, he was simply mocked by the noted chief and derisive laughs were had by the Redskins at the expense of Brady. The Bald Eagle was soon to learn that he had a foe to cope with of more than ordinary ability as a fighter and he had met a foeman worthy of his steel in any combat. Upon the receipt of the news of the death of John Brady, Captain Sam Brady, fired with hatred for the red men, gave utterance to the oath, "Aided by Him who formed yonder Sun and Heavens, I will revenge the death of my brother and the murder of my father, nor while I live will I ever be at peace with the Indians of any tribe." He kept his vow and lived it to the minutest part. Many an Indian bit the dust from a shot from Sam Brady's rifle, and the scornful chief, Bald Eagle, who had killed James Brady, paid the penalty of his acts a few years later while heading a party of Indians towards the west, near Milesburg, for the Captain recognized him in the band and shot him on sight, thus avenging the murder of his brother James on the West Branch of the Susquehanna. He became a veritable Indian killer, was void of sympathy, reckless, hardened, and his sole and only object of life was to kill Redskins.

Such were the examples of adversity that faced the founders of these beautiful valleys, which now abound with plentiful harvests, dotted with villages of happy families, who enjoy the privileges of churches and schools, and in our homes we can not respect too much the names of those rugged mountaineers, who risked their lives and bore innumerable hardships that future generations might enjoy the fruits of their toils and their names live forever in the memory of their countrymen. indicating supreme excellence to footwear, has been awarded us by the grand jury of shoe buyers. The mercury is not more sensitive in changes of temperature than the feet are to their surroundings. It hurts them to have more room than they require or to be pinched into a smaller space than they should occupy. Exact fits in soft, easy, yielding shoes are absolutely essential to comfort. Our footwear combines all the fine points at prices as pleasant as sunshine after a storm.
