The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only posi ive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional freatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the dh. ase, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

OUR OLDEST HOUSE.

"YANKEE DOODLE" SAID TO HAVE BEEN COMPOSED IN ITS GARDEN.

History of "Fort Crailo," the Ancient Van Rensselaer Mansion at Albany-It Was Erected Between 1639 and 1642-Guarded Against Indian Attacks.

Perhaps no historic house in the country has ever been so neglected and uncared for as an ancient large brick dwelling which was sold at auction recently in East Greenbush, a village just south of the new city of Rensselaer, and across the Hudson River from Albany, N. Y. No more sentimental history nor greater wealth of tradition clings to any house in the United States than to this one, and yet its fame has almost faded from recol-

It is believed that this house, erected in the interest of Killian Van Rensselaer between the dates of 1639 and 1642, while he was still in Holland, is the oldest in the United States, if not in the entire Western hemisphere. A bronze tablet, which was erected in the year 1886, at the time of Albany's Bi-Centennial, states this fact, and undoubtedly the Bi-Centennial Committee's decision will be quoted hereafter as being authentic. Certain it is, however, that a tradition, handed down from mouth to mouth and by history almost from the date of its occurrence, says that the song of "Yankee Doodle" was composed in the garden of this house, and what song is there in this country whose music is better known than that old and not remarkably sensible one, for neither the words nor the sentiment merit this popularity? One would suppose that these two facts would add something to its value, but such was not the case, and few persons sought to acquire the property. It was purchased by an iceman. and there is probability that this venerable building will in time be turned into an ice house or become the stable for the business. There is no better evidence than this sale that this is a decidedly prosaic age, and the relentless march of progress has forced sentiment to the wall.

The house consists of two stories and an attic. It faces the west and stands about 100 feet back from the river, the River road passing the door. The property for miles about was embraced in the Van Rensselaer patent in 1630, and the house was erected for the Grandpap Peck is still improving and younger branch of that family. It is not established by any papers in the Van Rensselaer family that Killian, or country, but it was through their agency that shiploads of utensils and the required number of persons to form a colony were sent over from Holland, and Killian (sometimes in America. It has often been said Mr. Jole Kling and daughter Gittie, of that with the shiploads sent the first year came the large beams and bricks used in the construction of the house, and, although not to be discovered now, some of these bricks are said to have read "K. V. R., 1642, Anno Domini." Recently an architect has endeavored to prove that these bricks were made in this country, giving as reasons that the soil in the neighborhood was of the proper quality, that no ship would be cumbered with bricks, and that in point of size they were between the very old Dutch brick and the later Colonial brick, the latter measuring 6 by 31/4 by 11/2

The front of the house is pierced by two stone loopholes at the height of a person's head above the ground. These were necessitated by the repeated attacks of Indians other than the peaceful Mohawks, and the house was known as a stronghold, going by the name of Fort Crailo. Other than these two marks of defense the building bears a peaceful aspect. The large door in the center of the ground floor is a divided one, according to the Dutch custom, and little mental activity suffices to recall scenes of the days when this thickly populated section of the Empire State was a struggling colony. The rooms are spacious, and each was provided with a fireplace of more than ordinary size. The tiling which once ornamented them has disappeared, and in an uninhabited state all appears desolate. Undoubtedly there was room to house many whenever an attack made this building a place of refuge for the settlers. At the rear of the mansion is an old well. It is said that while seated at that spot the British surgeon, Dr. Schuckburg, composed "Yankee Doodle." The British troops were quartered there while on their way to push acquisitions in Canada, and the colonies were called upon to furnish men. These recruits came from the fields, and were so uncouth that they furnished the topic for the song to the ready wit of the surgeon. When he put his thoughts on paper for the sport of the British soldiers it probably never occurred to him that they would survive a century, and perhaps endure as long as the nation which was born soon after that date.
