Now reduce temperature below the freezing they are back to the primitive method again, because the war has paralyzed all commercial industry in Santiago and the ce-making machines are at a standstill.

The "water monkey" is a jar of porous as was used by the early Egyptians. There is nothing new about it, and it is a little singular that the "water monkey" of to-day in Cuba is of the same pattern as that used 3,000 years ago on the Upper Nile, and also used by the Moqui Indians in North Arizona.

That is what General Shafter's men will have to use in lieu of cracked ice. The best drinking water down there is that which comes from the clouds. Wells are almost unknown in Eastern Cuba. Up in the mountains there are a few springs, but nothing to compare with what we have in the Catskills or the Adi-
