SOME FACTS ABOUT HONEY.

Interesting Paragraphs in Regard its Production and Use.

Honey is the only sweet that may be eaten in any quantities and for a long time without interfering with the action of any of the vital organs. Its food value is twice that of pork, pound for pound, and it has been noticed that persistent honey eaters are not nearly so liable to disease of the respiratory organs as those who do not use it at all.

It is calculated that the entire honey product of sixty bees during their entire working life will not amount to more than one pound of honey, an amount that a man with a good appetite would eat in a day without thinking much about it.

Beeswax is almost entirely indigestible, and while it does no harm when swallowed, never enters into the food value of the honey it contains.

The expert can almost tell from tasting honey the place where it is made. The honey from the Northern States is more delicately flavored than that of the Southern States, and California honey tastes rank to an Eastern honey enter, on account of its high flavor.

The honey of Cuba is dark and insipid to the Northern taste, and it is hardly possible to sell it for private consumption. Cuban honey is in favor with bakers, as it has the quality of not losing its flavor when subjected to high heat, as in baking. This makes it preferable for their use.

Extracted honey that has candied should be liquefied by subjecting it to very low heat, otherwise the volatile oils which give it flavor will evaporate and the honey be made simply sweet without its delightful perfume-like taste, which nothing can be found to imitate.

Honey should never be exposed to the air. It will not ferment or sour, but it loses flavor; and sometimes becomes the least bit rank in taste, when air is admitted freely.

Wash away the filth and waste that have accumulated during the winter.

In like manner Hood's Sarsaparilla expels from the blood impurities that have been deposited during the season when there has been but little perspiration and perhaps constant confinement in impure and vitiated air. It is a boon to tired mothers, housekeepers teachers and others who spend their time indoors.

It gives the blood richness and vitality, fitting it to nourish and strengthen the nerves, muscles and all the great organs of the body. It cures all spring humors and banishes that tired feeling.

It is the best medicine money can buy for all diseases caused by impure or impoverished blood. You should begin taking it today.
