A FEW CASES OF LOVE.

Some Illustrations of Matrimonial Fellcity Brought Out at a Sewing Society.

"But she's living with the third like a modern edition of Boucis."

It was at a sewing society and the talk had drifted from servants to husbands; thence to love and marrige.

"O, it's all very well for people to lay down hard and fast rules about, what kind of marriages will be happy and what sort won't. After a long and varied experience with young people I've come to the conclusion that it's all luck." Thus spoke a serene-faced, gray-haired woman who had earned a right to a respectable hearing from the masterly manner in which she had just cut the 14 dozen flannel petticoats for females of all ages, and without a pattern, too.

"Look at John Fitzgerald-as particular and immaculate a man as ever lived. His wife is pretty, but she started to housekeeping with three dish towels and uses old black stockings for washcloths because they don't get grimy like white ones-and yet he's happy."

"That makes me think of a true story I heard about why Jennie B-'s engagement was broken with that eastern man," said the girl with the new gold thimble. "He was one of these fastidious persons, but you know how dainty and pretty Jenny was. Well, he fell terribly in love with her at Newport and followed her out here. And they became engaged. He was anxious for a speedy marriage because he wanted to spend the autumn abroad. She most devoted. One day, such a hot August day, she had been shopping all morning with her mother and met him and sweet and that day was no exception, but as they left the table she up, and, after gazing at it an instant, returned it. He was called to New York by telegram that night and sailed alone for Scotland the next week."

"Well, she married a much better man," remarked the white-haired lady. "That is not so good as the story Jack Frain told, is it, Elsie?" said the one Tyrone. idle girl. "You know he's gone to St. Louis to be best man at his friend's wedding, and he told us a lot about the man. A year or so ago he became much interested in a girl-a St. Louis girland paid her a lot of attention. She was bright, and unexpected, and pret- latter's health. ty. One night he took her to a concert. As she came into the parlor with her jacket on one of the buttons was hanging by a thread. He admired her and was observant of everything about

HISTORIC WINE CELLAR.

Important Discoveries Made by Two

German Explorers in Asia Minor.

The explorer, Dr. Belck, who was attacked in September last while prosecuting his studies in Asia Minor, has made some interesting discoveries near Lake Wan. He and Dr. Lehmann are searching for Chaldean inscriptions, and the cost of their expedition is being defrayed from a fund to which the principal contributors are the kaiser and the Virchow institute, says a Berlin Dispatch in London Mail.

According to letters dated Tiflis, November 26, the two explorers, in excavating among the ruins of a palace of the old Chaldean king Argastes II., came across this monarch's wine cellar. It was filled with colossal earthenware vessels, a few of which have been secured for the Berlin museum.

Of far greater importance, however, is their discovery of inscriptions on the drains of the palace, which furnish a complete chronology to the time of the Assyrian king Tiglat Phalasar (about the eighth century before Christ). The Armenian patriarchs have been very gracious to the two German explorers, and have even allowed them the unwonted privilege of taking away an extremely interesting inscription from the wall of an old monastery.

Dr. Belck and his colleague intend now to visit the upper Tigris, Mossul and Nineveh, and to continue their investigations in what is probably the home of the earliest civilization, the district between Mount Ararat and the upper reaches of the Tigris and Euphrates.

Sion Reward Sion. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constu-tional disease, requires a constitutional treat-ment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitu-tion and assisting nature in doing its work. She said it was of no consequence, that he should not trouble himself about it for a moment, and went and changed it. When she came back he asked her to marry him. After they were married he told her about the test, and that he never had seen such amiability. 'O.' she answered, 'you didn't know that I went upstairs and bit a piece out of the marble mantel."
