

GROOM WENT SOUTH

WHY THE NEWLY MARRIED MAN SHIVERED.

The Peculiar Mistake of a Bride and Her Resolve to Not to Forgive—Another Proof That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

Mrs. Louis Tooker young bride of a few hours, slept in a room in the Imperial Hotel of New Haven, Conn., Jan. 17. In the next room, entirely unconscious she was so close to him, slept her husband. He thought she had run away from him, angry because, after their clandestine marriage, he compelled her to kiss a friend of his.

Next morning, reading in a newspaper that she was suspected of leaving her husband, the spirited Mrs. Tooker became so angry that she did leave him; took her clothes and went home to her mother.

Tooker had rushed into Police Headquarters the evening before, and begged the police to search for his wife. They sent a general alarm all over the State. Tooker returned to the Imperial Hotel, went to bed, hopefully leaving his door unlocked, the gas burning. Tooker arose very early in the morning and hurried to headquarters for tidings of his wife. Later Mrs. Tooker arose in her room, dressed, went to breakfast. In the corridor she bought a morning paper and read that she had run away from her husband.

"What does this mean?" she indignantly asked the hotel proprietor. "I haven't run away from my husband. I'm right here. He's run away from me. I don't know where he is." "Did you sleep here last night?" asked the astonished hotel-man. "Of course I did," said Mrs. Tooker. "My husband left me in the parlor and went to celebrate the wedding with the boys. I waited for him a long time and then went to the room he told me we were to occupy."

"You went to the wrong room," groaned the hotel-man. "He slept in the room next to you."

The police had learned nothing of his wife, and Tooker passed the morning hunting for her. Despairing, hungry, tired, he returned to the hotel for dinner. His wife was still there, but all she would say to his prayers for forgiveness was:

"You ran away from me. Now, everybody has read I ran away from you. I've had enough of you. I'm going home to mamma." And packing up her clothes she did go home. Tooker shivered and bought a ticket for Florida.

"It's too cold here," he said. "I'll pass the winter in the south."

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Bank Cashier Kills Bookkeeper and Himself.

Capt. J. W. Murphy, cashier of the Third National Bank at Columbus, Ga., killed his chief bookkeeper and confidential clerk H. T. Shutz, Jan. 16. When the police entered the bank Mr. Shutz sat bolt upright in his chair dead. On the floor, a few feet away, Capt. Murphy lay in a crouching position also dead.

Two shots entered Shutz's head—one in the temple and the other in the top of the head. After firing these two shots Murphy put the pistol in his mouth and again pulled the trigger, the bullet ranging upward through the brain.

Capt. Murphy was one of the best-known and leading bankers and politicians in that state. For several years he held the position of Assistant State Treasurer of Georgia. He gave up this place ten years ago and came to Columbus, where he organized the Third National Bank and the Columbus Savings Bank. He was a large shareholder and was made cashier of both banks. Recently he has been in declining health.

Just before the tragedy President Jordan had talked with him, trying to get him to leave for a sanitarium. It is said Murphy got an idea into his head that after he was dead and gone Shutz would take his place as cashier at the bank.

The two men were devotedly attached to each other. Murphy was fifty years old.

CRIMINAL.

The body of George B. Eyre, of Chester, Pa., who had been missing since December 21, has been found at the mouth of Havercock creek, New Jersey, opposite Chester. The legs of the man were tied together and the back of the head crushed in.

The Frankfort, Kentucky, Grand Jury has returned indictments charging Colonel David G. Colson with the willful murder of Lieutenant Ethelbert Scott and L. A. Demaree.

Ben Richardson, who murdered Jailer Allen Henry, at West Plains, Missouri, has been captured at Mansfield Springs, Arkansas, by Benjamin Elder, Mayor of the town.

A Bridgeport, Conn., despatch says that F. B. Torrey, manager of the Torrey Manufacturing Company, has reported to the police that Arthur Moore, confidential clerk of the company, has disappeared, leaving a shortage of $3,000.

It is reported from Indiana that burglars attacked the bank safes in the little town of Silver Lake and Elliottville the other day, blowing them open with nitroglycerine and securing about $5,000.

In the case of Homer Bird, who is under sentence of death for murder alleged to have been committed in Alaska, the President has granted a respite until March 15, 1900.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

A Feud Ends in Killing One and Wounding Three.

One of the most shocking tragedies that has ever been enacted in that state was the culminating scene of a quarrel at the Capitol Hotel at Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 16.

As a result Ethelbert Scott, one of the parties to the affray, and Luther W. Demaree and Charles Julian, bystanders, are dead; Capt. B. Golden is in a dying condition; Harry McEwan and O. D. Redpath, a Chicago drummer, are suffering from wounds from stray shots, and ex-Congressman D. G. Colson is suffering from a wound in one of his arms.

There has been bad blood between Col. Colson and Lieut. Scott since the fight between them at Anniston, Ala., where both were severely wounded. It was renewed when they came face to face in the well-filled and spacious lobby of the hotel. Colson was sitting in the west end of the lobby looking out of the window when Scott and Capt. Golden came into the lobby from the hall and walked to the cigar stand. Here they met Kit Chinn, and after Golden introduced Chinn to Scott, and while engaged in conversation, Colson saw Scott.

Immediately on the men catching sight of each other they began firing. Golden claims that Colson fired the first shot, and almost instantly there was a general fusillade. Demaree, who was standing near Colson, fell dead, with two bullet holes near his heart, evidently from the pistol of Scott. Capt. Golden was shot through both legs just below the knee, the bullet penetrating an artery.

Scott emptied his revolver and retreated starting to run down the basement steps in the southeast end of the room. Colson followed close behind and holding his revolver with both hands, with the blood streaming from his hand where a bullet had passed through his cuffs and clipped the skin. As Scott reached the top of the steps Colson fired the fatal bullet. Scott halted, reeled and fell down the steps. Colson stood at the head of the steps and fired two shots. Scott was dead when he was reached by the bystanders.

Charles Julian walked to room No. 9, where he sat down on the edge of the bed. He was bleeding profusely and it was fifteen minutes before he was discovered, writhing in agony from loss of blood. Had medical aid been able to reach him ten minutes sooner his life might have been saved. O. D. Redpath was knocked down by the retreat of Scott and had his leg broken by one of the men tramping him under foot.

McEwan's wound was slight, he being shot in the foot. Colson showed wonderful nerve until he was arrested and placed in a carriage to be taken to his boarding place before being taken to jail. Here he broke down and cried like a child. It was pitiful as he exclaimed: "My God! my God! He has been wonderfully broken in nerve since."

There was a rumor that Julian's friends would attempt to use violence in seeking revenge on Colson, but this is denied, and while there is profound grief, Julian's death is regarded as an accident.

BRITISH AND BOERS

LATEST MOVEMENTS IN THE CAMPAIGN.

A Full Summary of the Transvaal War News—Progress of the Conflict From Day to Day—The British Encouraged.

News from South Africa still continues fragmentary and uncertain. The following are leading events of the week:

The recent fighting near Ladysmith was clearly not of a decisive nature. The British gained 1,000 yards, but Warren is not likely to give the Boers leisure to prepare vast entrenchments of the pattern constructed at Magersfontein and Colenso. It must be remembered also that Buller is attempting to carry out a very complex plan of campaign. Its execution must necessarily be slow, not merely because of the extent of ground to be traversed and the difficulty of transport and the arduous character of the country, but from the fact that it is not one, but many objects that Buller is simultaneously trying to secure.

Captain Honley, of the Dublin Fusiliers, fell mortally wounded while leading his men to seize a fresh point of vantage in Warren's attack.

General Buller reports that in a fight with the Boers, near Ventor's Spruit, Natal Colony, several officers and 270 non-commissioned officers were killed or wounded.

Carefully compiled figures, from Boer sources, some of which have been investigated and found to be correct, show the Boer losses up to date are, approximately, 6425 men, including 2000 casualties during the siege of Ladysmith.

A third supplementary list of the British casualties in the attack upon Ladysmith on January 6, published by the war office, shows 28 non-commissioned officers and men killed and 5 dangerously wounded. This brings the total British casualties in that engagement to 488.

Gen. Buller's army is advancing slowly, and is being strengthened by reinforcements as it moves. The British War Office is well pleased at the situation, and confidence is expressed that the Boers will be defeated in the coming great battle, and that the relief of Ladysmith is now assured.

In the German Reichstag Minister Von Buelow, replying to an inquiry, has explained that the demands of Germany on England, in connection with the recent steamers, has been conceded, and expressed the hopes that the relations between the two governments would continue to remain friendly.

The Britishers of Newport News, Va., have started a movement for the relief of the widows and orphans of English soldiers killed in the Boer war, and the fund will be forwarded at once.

The British losses in killed, wounded and captured up to date are 7,987 officers and men, according to a cablegram from London.

A mass meeting of women of Vancouver has been held to arrange for providing British soldiers in South Africa with necessary comforts.

British sympathizers in Milwaukee have contributed $1,000 toward the Mansion House fund in aid of the widows and orphans of the British killed.

It is stated at Johannesburg that twenty field guns were recently smuggled through Delagoa Bay for the Boers.

The correspondent of the London Times at Lorenzo Marquez says: "I am informed on the best authority that six days ago Mafeking was holding out as pluckily as ever. There was then no likelihood of capitulation."

THE MANILA NEWS.

Another Serious Ambush of the American Troops.

A battalion of the Forty-sixth Infantry, reinforced later by three companies of the Thirty-eighth, has driven the insurgents from Balayang, in Southern Luzon, through Calaca and Temery, and captured their stronghold, Taal, together with four cannon and a quantity of rifles. General Schwan's troops are concentrating to attack the enemy at Santa Cruz.

Gen. Wheeler sailed from Manila Jan. 24 on the transport Warren for the United States by way of Guam and Honolulu.

The plague statistics at Manila show a total of fourteen cases and eleven deaths.

Instruction has been sent Rear Admiral Watson to grant authority to Lieutenant J. C. Gillmore, recently released by the Filipinos, to return to the United States, if he desires to do so.

A pack train of twenty ponies transporting rations between Santo Tomas and San Pablo, in Laguna province, escorted by fifty men, under Lieutenant Keston, of the Thirtieth Infantry, was ambushed by Filipinos the other day. Two men were killed, five wounded, nine missing, and the pack train was lost.

General Otis reports that an American force, under Doret, struck the insurgents in Batangas mountains and prepared to ambush to meet him; he killed eight, wounded three, captured seventeen, one a Spaniard, and secured six rifles. His casualties were two men slightly wounded.

Beginning April 1, the Philippine postal service will be placed on an independent footing, as in Cuba and Puerto Rico. Heretofore the Philippine service has been under the supervision of the postmaster at San Francisco.

A Manila despatch says that Brigadier General Kobbe has been appointed Governor of Albay province and Catanduanes islands, and has been given temporary charge of islands of Samar and Leytes, his command embracing the principal hemp ports. He has sailed with a brigade to occupy the country.

Thirty thousand fruit trees, comprising the entire orchard of D. C. and G. M. Bacon, in Mitchell county, Ga., will be burned by order of State Entomologist Scott, owing to the ravages of the San Jose scale.
