A Bull In the Republican China Shop.

PINGREE ON THE RAMPAGE.

Tells of the Woeful Plight of the Common People.

MAKES A STARTLING PREDICTION.

Says the Present System of Inequality Will Precipitate a Revolution. Senator Chandler Gets His Quietus-Ship Subsidy Steal Lambasted. Hanna's Scheme For an Extra Session-A Question That Might Arise as to Presidential Succession - A Bright Young Man From North Carolina-The Election of Quay.

[Special Washington Letter.] A bull in a china shop would be regarded by the average machine Republican as an amiable companion when compared with Hon. Hazen S. Pingree, late Republican governor of Michigan. Whatever else may be said of Pingree, he cannot be charged truthfully with a lack of courage or frankness. In his farewell message he took a parting shot at his enemies, as follows: "My experience during my political life, extending over a period of 12 years, has convinced me that in order to secure the full commendation of those who consider themselves 'the better classes' the governor and other high officials must do nothing to antagonize the great corporations and the wealthy people." If that be true, we have indeed been brought to a woeful plight by Republican maladministration.

Then Governor Pingree says: make the prediction that unless those in charge, and in whose hands legislation is reposed, do not change the present system of inequality in less than a quarter of a century there will be a bloody revolution in this great country of ours." Of course for making that startling prediction the Michigander has received a terrible lashing at the hands of the Republican press. He has been denounced as crank, demagogue, blatherskite, etc., but nevertheless the fact remains that he is a Republican of high degree and that his prophecy stands. Any Republican who has a good word for what Abraham Lincoln affectionately denominated "the plain without saying that no man of sense of any party desires the revolution pre dicted by Pingree, but many mengood men at that, and not alarmistsagree with the Michigan ex-governor that such a catastrophe is impending unless things change. William E. Chandler.

If Hon. William Eaton Chandler, senior senator, and soon to have the right to prefix the hateful "ex" to his title, will place to the ground his auricular appendage-which Joe Blackburn of Kentucky pulled on a certain historic occasion-he will hear a hoarse and triumphant hoot out among the mountains of Montana, Whatever people may conclude as to Senator William A. Clark's election, nobody at all acquainted with Chandler's political antecedents can for one moment believe that his conduct touching Clark's case was the result of any high and patriotic motive, for it can never be forgotten that Chandler was the prime mover, the original instigator in the most colossal crime ever committed against human libertythe theft of the presidency in 1876.

It is written that the leopard cannot change his spots or the Ethiopian his skin, nor is it at all probable that the New Hampshire senator was animated in the Clark contest by any loftler purpose than to secure his own re-election. At the same time it must be confessed that he served a useful purpose in the senate and contributed largely to the gayety of nations by waking up the conscript fathers when they became too sleepy. He is mischlevous as a monkey, sly as Major Joe Bagstock, nimble as a cricket, smart as a whip and delighted to worry such solemn and dignified personages as Senator Hoar and to set them by the ears. First and last, William Eaton has managed to extract a vast deal of pleasure from his 14 years' service in the senate. Nevertheless it is a strange coincidence, illustrative of the vicissitudes of political life, that the stroke of 12 high noon, March 4, which marks his exit, perhaps and most likely his final exit, from the senate will also mark the reappearance in that body of Senator William A. Clark of Montana and Senator Joe Blackburn of Kentucky. If Samuel J. Tilden knows what is happening here, he will be happy at that hour.

schemes, can't stomach the Hanna-Payne ship subsidy job and prints these great headlines, which must cause the junior senator from Ohio to wince: "The Delusive Ship Subsidy Bill; Overfed Snake Is Coiled Within Complicated Folds; How the Scheme Would Work; Oil Men Are Particularly Interested In the Defeat of This Iniquitous Measure." Then through column after column it pours a broadside into this latest and most stupendous scheme to loot the treasury a scheme of public plunder utterly unjustifiable as either a business or a warning to Republicans:

Some of the Washington dispatches have indi-Some of the Washington dispatches have made cated the desire and purpose of a few Republicans peculiarly interested in the ship subsidy bill to attempt to give it the force of a party measure and thus push it through. The Republican party has never advocated in any platform or conven-tion such a subsidy measure as the one for which it is attempted now to make it responsible and for which it certainly would become responsible if the bill were permitted to pass. In fitting expression of the sentiments of the rank and file of the party the Republican conventions and platforms have spoken in favor of stimulating the growth of the American merchant marine, but the present bill is worse than a travesty as to being in accord with those sentiments. better named a bill to check than to promote American shipping and foreign commerce. The many millions of dollars it would bestow on those neither needing nor deserving it were better locked up or even destroyed, for then they could not be applied, as they could be under the operation of this bill, to curb what might otherwise be the healthful and rapid growth of American shipping and commerce, a continuance and improvement of the conditions summed up by McKinley. In view of the conditions which have been described thus by the president it is an open question whether the mass of the Republicans of the country favor the passage of a subsidy law now on any cor tions whatsoever, much less the passage of such a subterfuge and imposition as the one now under consideration. They need but to become informed, as they will, of the rottenness of this measure to place the responsibility where it belongs if the bill becomes a law. As to the Republicans identified with the oil business let not the mis-take be made at Washington of underestimating the number of them. Let it not be forgotten that the oil regions are no longer limited to a little area, but now are included and growing in a doz en states. If those intrusted at Washington with the carrying out of Republican policies so betray the trust as to permit the passage of this obn ious bill it will bring speedy and general re-proach both upon them and upon the party and will cost them dearly. Through its representa-tives at Washington it is the duty of the Republican party to defeat this bill. The Republican majority in congress is ample to do this, and if it is not done there can be no shifting of the re-

Mark Hanna's Cunning.

Some time ago, when it was announced that Senators Richard Franklin Pettigrew, William Vincent Allen and Marion Butler had formed an alliance, offensive and defensive, to fight the subsidy bill to the death, it was whispered about Washington that Senator Hanna had threatened to have an extra session of congress called if pet bill was killed by the trio aforesaid or by anybody else at this session. In reply to that it was said that no administration would dare to call an extra session for the sole purpose of passing a ship subsidy bill. Now it is hinted that in order to avoid that unpleasant and hazardous situation and at the same time to force an extra session of the next congress in the spring (so that it may be as far ahead of the next election as possible, order to let people forget), Senator Hanna is now so engineering things in the senate that some of the necessary great bills will fail, and that the extra session will be called ostensibly to pass them, but really to gated by Republican papers. It goes proponents of the bill are afraid to western country. For 10 or 12 years

> The sickness of President McKinley has been regarded with unfeigned and widespread uneasiness for two reasons: First, because he is a most amiable man, personally very popular, not only with Republicans, but also with Democrats. This is the simple, unvarnished truth. Second, because his death at this particular juncture would leave things touching the presidential succession in a fearful muddle. Mr. McKinley is not president for the term for which he was elected according to the general idea on the 6th of November, to which he was really elected by the presidential electors that term till March 4. Consequently Colonel Roosevelt is not vice president till March 4. He must become vice president before he could be president, and there must be a vacancy in the office in order to enable him to succeed; but were Mr. McKinley to die prior to March 4 Colonel John Hay, secretary of state, would become president and on March 4 would be filling a term of his own whose duration is fixed by law. So that things would be in a tangle sufficiently intricate to puzzle the wisest.

Presidential Succession.

It is passing strange that congress has never made provision for such a contingency. I have no doubt that in the event of Mr. McKinley's death, of which there is no immediate prospect, as he is rapidly recovering, that which would happen would be this: Colonel Hay would serve as president until Colonel Roosevelt is sworn in as vice to him two qualities that do great credpresident on March 4 and would then it to his head and heart. The univerresign, whereupon Colonel Roosevelt sal testimony is that he never loses an would be sworn in as president. In this way everything would be amicably arranged in this particular instance, and everybody would acquiesce in this plan for carrying out the will of the people as expressed at the polls last November, though nobody would be certain that Roosevelt would have a legal title. But, to suppose a case, suppose that a Democratic president were now in and Mr. McKinley, the president elect, were not president now and a Democrat serving as secretary of state. If Mr. McKinley, the president elect and the Democratic president should both die and the secretary of state who succeeded should deem it his duty to hold on as long as he could, or suppose, instead of the amiable Colonel John Hay, some Republican were secretary of state who was avaricious of power or who didn't deem Colonel Roosevelt fit for the presidency and should succeed to the presidency by reason of the death of his chief, then what would happen on March 4 and from fainting. who would be president after the 4th of March? I submit this question to those who are fond of solving such problems and have the leisure for indulging in such luxuries, which I have

Congressman Kitchin.

Coming to congress seems to be a confirmed habit with the Kitchin family of North Carolina. What's more, they make tiptop congressmen after they get here. One of the ablest and brightest young Democrats in the house is William W. Kitchin of the old Tar Heel State. He is handsome, capable, industrious, vigilant and is universally recognized as a growing man. His father was a distinguished representative in congress. In the next congress W. W. Kitchin will sit beside one of his own brothers, also a representative from North Carolina. The other day on the apportionment bill Judge Linney, a Confederate soldier elected as a Republican, made an entertaining but very bitter speech about the recent doings of North Carolina Democrats. Kitchin replied with a great deal of vigor and courage. He didn't dodge, beat about the bush or whip the devil about the stump. He took the bull by the horns and made a speech which the Democrats applauded to the echo and with which many sensible Republicans sympathized. In replying to Judge Linney he said inter alia;

He might have told you that the same spirit that thrills the white man in North Carolina thrills the white man in Indiana, where recently white mobs lynched two negroes for murdering He might have told you that the spirit that thrills the white man in North Caro lina is the same that thrills him in Pennsylvania, the home of the gentleman who is so anxious to

He might have gone to Illinois and found that wherever the white man looks to the blue sky the spirit of superiority and progress stirs within graceful and shameful regime inflicted upon the people by the Republican party the white men did rise in their might and hurl them from power The gentleman wants to know if that is fair. He really can't help that three men of the intellectual strength of Tom Patterson, Governor Thomas and ex-Governor Adams compete with each other for the same seat among the conscript fathers. It is really a pity that all three of them could not be elected. Patterson has for pass his ship subsidy bill. There's a quarter of a century been ranked as cunning for you, also strategy. I have had profound admiration for the man ever since I heard him deliver a magnificent speech in the Democratic national convention in 1888, putting his friend, General John C. Black, in nomination for the vice presidency. Though it was a foregone conclusion that the old Roman, Allen G. Thurman, would be nominated, Patterson's magnificent speech demonstrated not only his extraordinary capacity, but his unwaveron Monday, Jan. 14. He doesn't begin ing fidelity to his friend. He takes the place of one of the most brilliant men now in the senate and will easily uphold the prestige of his state. Patterson, Fred T. Dubois, Bailey and Carmack will make a great quartet.

Matt Quay. The election of the Hon. Matthew Stanley Quay to fill out his own unexpired term was hailed in Washington with hilarous delight on the one hand and a decidely mullagrubish feeling on the other. The insurgents, or the Wanamakerites, immediately went into the cave of Aduliam, where they will probably say many things not fit to set down in any "polite letter writer" intended for use as a textbook in boarding schools for young ladles. Altogether it has been a most astounding fight, both for Quay and against him. All who know him personally attribute opportunity to do a kindness to a human being when it is in his power, and that he stands by his friends with unshaken fidelity. Democrats remember that he was largely instrumental in defeating the force bill, but if onehalf of the charges about corruption that are in the air are true, or even one tithe of them, Senator William Eaton Chandler of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, couldn't spend the few days of senatorial life which remain to him in a more useful and patriotic manner than by instituting an investigation into the ways and means used to en compass the election of Senator Quay, and into the condition of Pennsylvania politics and morals in general. I have no doubt that Brother Wanamaker would cheerfully load Brother Chandler to the guards with a superabundance of evidence so odoriferous that it would compel the employees of a soap factory to hold their noses to keep

THE KICKER.

A Theory of His Rise and Progress.

The word "kicker" is no more slang, but an honorable term admitted by the lexicographer to the round table of English speech. This acceptance of the word proves that there was a real need for it;"that a certain class of people had no word in the English language to fitly designate them. As a class these kickers must be as modern as the word which describes them. They are in effect a new product of our latest civiliza-The word which describes the kicker is picturesque. I still kept getting so weak I could scarcely walk. I then tried another physician and he told me my liver was out of order and that I had indigestion. He gave me a treatment and I got some better, but only for a short time. I then tried another one who said I had chronic indigestion, ulceration of the lining of the stomach, torpid
