A very exciting coon chase took place in our little town on Thursday evening. About the time J. W. Weber was thinking of going to bed he heard a noise among his chickens. He soon collected a crowd and in a few moments had the coon up a tree. He held the light while Prof B. stood behind him so that the light shining on his head would throw a reflection up in the tree. One of our old hunters, fired several shots and was unable to bring him down. Charles Segner, the hero of the hour, mounted the tree and shook him Then Stuart's famous coon dog took the coon in hands and thus ended one more night that will pass down in history as famous.
