AN ITEM WITH POULTRY.

Brawing the Tendons Takes the Toughness From the Drumstick.

At this time of the year anything pertaining to the better preparation of minds of many concerning two dress poultry for gastronomic purposes is of interest. Good Housekeeping says: Louis XV., which comes from a want

They are attached to the foot, but through the dark meat they run away up into the leg, well into the upper made, it being ornamented with real Joint.

If the bird has seen several seasons, all the muscle that can be put into the job will be required, but it is exactly such a bird that demands most the tendon drawing process.

A turkey calls for more muscle, and "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull ail together." Cut the skin in the leg about half way between the knee joint and foot, and there will be discovered immediately the group of shining white tendons. Slip a strong skewer, or if the bird is quite elderly the point of the sharpener that belongs to a carving set, under the bunch of tendons. Lift them carefully, then twist around two or three times, acquiring a firm hold. Give a strong pull, and out they will come together. Count them, and if there are not eight go after the ones that are left.

With the tough sinews removed, the dark meat is so delicious and tender that the drumsticks of one turkey will be found scarcely a large enough sup ply for the family table

The Man Who Will Govern Greater New York's Bluecoats.

If to be a trained soldier, a successful disciplinarian, an experienced man of coats, one the Russian, the other the affairs and a conscientious public servant counts for anything, then Greater New York is going to have at the head of its police force the best man it ever had. Colonel John Nelson Partridge, Mayor Low's appointee for this position, has a public and private record that any individual might well be proud of. It has long been contended

A few buttons to match finish the fronts, while glimpses neckband is the very softness needed. One confesses to thinking it somewhat stiff and formal to repeat the cloth and satin applications upon petticoat and coat trimming. Some lace upon collar and cuffs would have been an improvement, yet this toilet has the prestige of authority which one is not apt to dispute. The beauty of the wearer in her white hat and feathers will forbid anything but praise and compliment once she enters a room wearing this modish combination of green and white, says Vogue, which is the source of the fashion and models here given.

One figure represents a visiting gown of Russian velvet over the same color of taffeta. With this are worn a silver fox stole and muff and picture hat of black velvet and ostrich plumes. The other figure shows an evening cloak of cadet blue French camel's hair cheviot. lined throughout with ivory white satin. A Point In Darning.

Loosely twisted knitting silk is better for darning woolen underwear than wool, which is apt to shrink. If the threads of the darn are left loose, after washing it will have about the same appearance as the original texture.

Fashion Echoes.

The storm collar, when used at all, is, as a rule, much modified, while the bog is cut roundly, so that it sets flatter round the throat, and the collar on the jacket is invariably turned down. The long, sloping shoulder is the new est effect in the separate walsts that do all around duty both for day and evening. Nets of all sorts of dots and meshes, the square being the latest, are in high fashion for evening gowns. Albatross cloth is used in light shades for linings to silk skirts, black or colored, for street wear in winter.
