young, with a fresh complexion and the slight figure of a girl. Her father was M. B. Bransford of Lexington, Ky., a state renowned for the beauty of her daughters. She was educated at San Francisco, and while still young she married Mr. A. B. Emery, noted not only as a mining man, but also as speaker of the house in the legislature of Utah and grand master of the Masons in that state.

Seven years ago she was left a widow, and two years later she married Colonel E. F. Holmes of Chicago, a retired lumberman.

It was during the period of her widowhood that Mrs. Holmes developed the remarkable business qualifications that have made her wealthy. She assumed control of her large interests and managed them with marked abil-

In Utah women are independent of their husbands in business relations, and Mrs. Holmes, though married, still directs and supervises her own concerns, but she defers greatly to the advice of Colonel Holmes, to whom she is deeply devoted .- New York World.

Have Women a Sense of Humor? Now, unhappily, in humor there is still just a shade of the brutality of its origin, for it was born of cruelty, heartlessness and pain, a sort of taint of "original sin" that civilization, kindliness of heart and Christian culture are year by year refining out of it. The woman's appreciation of humor is far more refined than is the same sense in her more bolsterous yoke fellow. Even Mr. Howells' womankind, who certainly do delight all men by their ludicrous obtuseness in humorous situations, only fail to see the "joke" when their womanly sympathy is greater than their perception of the ridiculous. While the man laughs at the comical predicament in which his friend is placed as the victim of a practical joke until the tears stream from his eyes, the tears from the woman's sympathetic heart fill her eyes before the laughter, welling up from the twin spring, can ripple across her lips. It isn't because her appreciation of humor is elther atrophled from disease or has not yet been developed that she cannot en-Joy the humor of ludicrously painful situations. It is rather because this sense in her is sensitive, delicate, sympathetic, refined to the highest culture. True humor delights her, while buffoonery, if it be brutal, shocks her, and if it be mere innocent fooling does not interest her.-Robert J. Burdette in Harper's Bazar.

Ethics of Household Service.

Relation between mistress and servant is discussed in a sensible way by the Boston Advertiser. It is to the effect that as the servant's home is in the house where she works the relation between her and the mistress is more close than that between clerks and their employers or workers of any other sort. For this reason there must be more consideration than when the situation can be called a purely business arrangement.

Household service is a business arrangement, and again it is not, and those housekeepers who recognize the twofold character of the situation are the best calculated to succeed in solvling the domestic problem. In the business character of the situation you must demand prompt, efficient labor, bonesty and cleanliness; but, on the other hand, your laborer is a member of your family, and you will not secure good results if you forget her womanhood, There is a great difference in people's ideas of being kind. But a kindly manner, orders given as requests, a little attention to the bodily condition of the worker and a little friendly advice on matters of dress or similar things that concern her as a woman, supplementing a clean and comfortable room, is certainly a good type of

An Invalid's Bed.

All girls should know a little about nursing, so as to be of use in time of sickness. One of the most important things to see to is the bed. Very few people really know how to make a bed properly-that is, to put the sheets on evenly and smoothly. The sheets should be large enough to be securely tucked under the edges of the mattress, and the greatest care should be taken to smooth out all the creases, as nothing fdgets a person so much as crumpled sheets or sheets that keep slipping to one side. Then the pillows. The proper way to arrange them is so that they are neither too high nor too low, just of a medium height to rest the back of the patient when sitting up. Changing and shaking up the pillows when they have become rumpled takes but little time, but is very comforting and refreshing to the patient. The covering for the bed should vary according to the temperature of the room, the nature of the sickness, the feelings of patient and the time of year. Whatever these conditions, the coverings should be as light as is consistent with the comfort of the patient. Feather beds should never be used in cases of sickness. They are uncomfortable for the patient and keep the body unnecessarily

Foot Cushions.

"I don't mind standing," said an experienced housekeeper. "I always have a cushion for my feet when I stand at the ironing board. It is made of a dozen thicknesses of old carpet lining covered with drugget. The lining is cut in squares and very loosely tacked together with long stitches. The drugget is cut of the required size. The edges are turned in and overhanded, then strong stitches are sewed through about every two inches over the surface of the cover. I have a little loop on two corners of the rug and hang it up by both loops. In this way it does not curl up and get out of shape, as it would if it were hung by one corner. have another rug in front of my dishwashing table-indeed, there are a number of them around the houseand when I have any work that requires standing one of them invariably omes on to the floor under my feet. If housekeepers realized how much of their strength could be saved by a few of these simple devices, they would not fail to provide them."

Preserving Children.

The following amusing "recipe for preserving children," written by Miss Mignone Lincoln, aged sixteen, of New Orleans and which won the prize for the best answer sent to St. Nicholas Magazine will be relished by all women, whether mother or not:

Take one large, grassy field, one-half dozen children, all sizes; three small dogs, one long, narrow strip of brook, pebbly if possible. Mix the children with the dogs, empty them into the field, stirring continually; sprinkle with field flowers. Pour brook gently over the pebbles. Cover all with a deep blue sky. Bake in a very hot sun. When the children are well browned, they may be removed; will be found right and ready for setting away to cool in the bathtub.

Washing Cretonne.

The washing of cretonne is really simple. Shake it free of dust and then immerse it in a lather made with warm water and soap jelly. Wash thoroughly and then rinse well in cold water in which vinegar has been mixed in the proportion of a wineglassful to three quarts of water. Next dip each article separately in gum water, wring and fold it in a cloth. It is best to iron the cretonne immediately. The gum water must of course be prepared beforehand. It is made by dissolving half an ounce of gum arabic to every quart of water used.

Washing Silk Ribbons.

Silk ribbons of any color can be safely washed in cold suds made with the best soap. After the soil is removed rinse in clear, cold water, but never wring. The best way to dry them is to lay them while wet upon a marble mantel or table or on a pane of glass, and with a stiff finger nail brush rub them sideways until every crease and wrinkle and air bubble is removed. Then leave until dry.

Toilet Vinegar.

Toilet vinegar is quite cheap if made at home. Take one pint of the best white vinegar and add two drams of each of the following: Rosemary, rue, lavender and camphor. Let the herbs soak in the vinegar for twenty-four hours, then strain. A little of this added to the bath is deliciously reviving.

The Wringer. In using the wringer it saves both the wash and the washerwoman to fold the clothes to an even thickness and exactly the breadth of the wringer rolls. Sending things through in lumps and bunches strains the springs and brings them quickly to the breaking point.

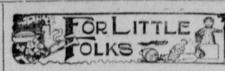

Things to Avoid. That house is no true home where the steam and fumes of the kitchen penetrate to the living rooms or where the mistress sits down to her family table with her face clouded under the petty trials and vexations of her house-

The woman who cries when she is alone has a sorrow that is cutting into her heart, and the tears that come in solitude simply save the heart from a never healing wound.

If new linen be rubbed over with fine white soap, it may be embroidered more easily. This prevents the threads from cracking.

Horn and whalebone can both be easily bored or bent if first soaked in absolutely boiling water.

Prepared chalk is an excellent cleanser for jewelry.

HER PET PIGGY.

It Made Little Rosabelle's Heart Sad by Its Misdeeds.

Little Rosabelle came running to the house as fast as she could with something round and fat in her arms which made a terrible squealing noise, "Oh. mamma, mamma! Won't he make a nice pet?" she cried, and then she began rubbing her tinger over a soft, pink little nose that stuck out just above ber arm. "Why, Rosabelle, don't you know any better than to bring a pig in the house? Now, take it straight to the barn, where you got it," commanded her mother.

"But, mamma, I didn't get it at the barn-it was right out here at the woodshed. Don't scold me. Now, I know you won't," coaxed little Rosabelle. "He was eating something out there, and he looked so cute. I wondered how he would look in that new dress you made for my Polly yesterday. When I caught him, he just jumped and squealed, but I held him tight."

low the pig in the house, and so the little girl and her new found pet started for the barn. There she patted the pig and played with it until she became tired and then left it run again. Now, Rosabelle had a little garden of her own in which she took the greatest pride. In that garden was a little bed for flowers, one for the cabbage and one for the turnips, which were just peeping out of the ground. Several days after she had captured the pig she came running to the house again, but in a much different mood. With her head on her mother's lap she told between sobs how something had eaten up all her cabbage plants and had dug the bed "all around." "Why don't you watch your garden and catch the naughty person," said her father to her when she told him her troubles. He had an idea who was doing the mischlef, but thought he would leave his little girl to find out for berself.

Rosabelle did as her father had suggested, and great was her surprise on a visit to the garden to find her pet pig standing inside the fence as if he were listening for the approach of an enemy. "Well, pig," she said slowly. "it must be you who have been in my garden. It does really make my heart sad to think you would do such a thing."

Rosabelle had heard her mother make such a saying. The pig crept through the fence and ran toward the barn, and Rosabelle went to find her mother and tell her of what she had discovered. Rosabelle's father promised to put the little pig in a pen the next day.-Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Combination Puzzle.

Here is a puzzle that may seem very hard at first, but is really quite easy. as you will see if you look sharply a the picture. Still, as the very easiest things are sometimes the most difficult

we think this puzzle will be a very interesting one indeed. Just try it, and when you are puzzling your brains the hardest remember that the solution is under your eyes all the time.

To open this lock three magic words must be formed from the letters which surround it. The method of selecting the letters is clearly indicated in the picture.-New York Herald.

The Outer Part.

In the development of the fraction 'one-third" in a primary class imaginary pies, bread and cakes galore had been divided into thirds, and the teacher gave the following problem:

"If Mary found a nest with six eggs in it and on the way to the house broke | tract." two of them, what part of her eggs would she break?"

The owner of a sparkling pair of eyes and fluttering hand was given permission to speak and said: "The shells would be broken."

The merry ripple that ran around the class showed appreciation of the point.

On the Contrary.

While Willie was in the cupboard one day his mother, on hearing the lid of the sugar bowl rattle, called to him, "Here, young man, get out of that

"I'm not in the sugar; it's the sugar 'at's in me," replied Willie, with his mouth full.
