Rockview.

Sunday was a lovely day for people to attend bushmeeting and campmeeting.

The farmers are busy plowing and some are ready for seeding.

Miss Carolyn Hoy returned home last week from Atlantic City.

Quite a number of our people were to Hecla Park on Thursday; they must have had a big time down there, for some didn't get home till two o'clock.

Harvey Swartz and wife attended bushmeeting at Egg Hill.

Martin Fleck, of Julian, visited at the home of J. F. Hoy the past week.

There were some young folks at one of the homes in our neighborhood on Sunday, and I guess we can call it a farewell meeting; but now Mary, next time don't cry till the parties that are going to leave for Pittsburg are on the train, for then you can be sure they have gone.

A. B. S. Fleck, of Co. C, 15th U. S. Inf., just returned from the Philippine Islands, after an absence of more than three years.

There was quite a poor attendance in the Rockview Sunday school. They must have been away visiting.

Bellefonte must have some wicked people that don't respect God and the church more than to come down so low as to rob the church like some parties did the 16th of this month, stealing a freezer of ice cream at the Evangelical church festival which was held in the W. C. T. U. room.

Aaronsburg.

Elsie Bing, of Pittsburg, with his wife and children, are visiting at the home of his mother, at this place.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of T. E. Griest on Tuesday evening. The contracting parties were James Stere and Effie Delp. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Mark, pastor of the Presbyterian church, after the ceremony, and the two were pronounced man and wife, they all repaired to the residence of the grooms parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Stere, where a magnificent supper had been prepared and from 7 o'clock to 10 o'clock "all went merrily as a marriage fete."

At 10 o'clock the happy couple were escorted to the "cage" which the thrifty groom had previously prepared for the newly captured bird, after which the call-thumpians got in their work. They will hereafter be "at home" in the Leather's building on Railroad street.

G. W. Dickey, a prominent merchant of Houtzdale, was in town on Tuesday to attend the funeral of Charles Pratt.

A little daughter came to gladden the hearts of George W. Stere and wife, a few days ago.

E. J. Williams and wife, formerly of this place, but now of Hastings, after six years of married life, are rejoicing over the arrival of their first born, a bright little girl.

Say, Charley, did you ever attend a surprise party? Listen! On last Sunday Mrs. Carrie Rowan came to the 40th milestone in her journey of life. (Unmarried ladies seldom get so old.) On Saturday prior, her many friends and neighbors conspired to surprise her. Was she surprised? Well you bet! This is how they managed it: her sister-in-law, Mrs. Owen Underwood, invited her to come up, said she would have some fine ice cream in the afternoon—she went and she got the ice cream too. Then the conspirators got in their work. Three long tables were improvised on the lawn in front of the house, and, of course loaded with the usual good things taken from the scores of baskets that were brought there. About 5 o'clock her daughter, Maggie, sent little Ruth Parsons to tell her mother to come home, they had strangers. Mrs. Underwood said she would go along, she wanted to see some parties in town, "lets go down the railroad" she said; this was cute of her as she could not see what was going on at her home until she got almost there. When they came to the station she saw a great crowd of people hurrying to and from. "Oh Mollie!" she said "just look up there, I'm afraid something has happened Andy." Then she saw the tables, and the true state of affairs dawned on her, when a roar of laughter arose from the happy crowd and she was greeted with hearty hand shakes and best wishes from all present—118 persons were present. It was a most enjoyable affair and hope she may live to enjoy the return of many more birthdays.

Daniel, son of Isaac Beck of Center Line, and Miss Sarah daughter of Joseph Heberling, of Penn'a Furnace, were married at the home of the bride Wednesday, the 20th, at noon. About fifty guests were present.

Edgar Morrison and Mabel Kunes, both of Blanchard, were married Wednesday 20th, at the Baptist parsonage in that place by Rev. G. Stanley West. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present to witness the ceremony. Miss Ruth Fowler was bridesmaid and Porter Kunes was best man.

Wednesday afternoon, August 20, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Snyder, of Retort, assumed a festive appearance; guests in holiday attire to celebrate the marriage of their daughter, Miss Hattie to William M. Faust, also of Retort. At five o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor and stood beneath an arch of ferns and cut flowers while the justice of the peace, J. W. Collins, pronounced the words which made them man and wife.

The bride was attended by Miss Emma Flick, of Retort as bridesmaid, while Frank Faust acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Faust will make their future home just across the street from the home of the bride. The bride is well and favorably known in the vicinity.

The groom is an industrious young man in the employ of Isaac Reese & Son's Brick Works.

Everlastingly at It.

If you took your little tooter and then lay aside your horn, there's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born. The man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day, and the man who keeps it humping is the one who makes it pay. The man who advertises with a short, a sudden jerk, is the man who blames the editor because it didn't work. The man who gets the business takes a long and steady pull and keeps the local papers from year to year quite full. He plans his advertising in a careful, thoughtful way, and keeps forever at it until he makes it pay. He has faith in all the future, can withstand a sudden shock, and like the man of Scripture, has his business on a rock.

OUR HISTORICAL REVIEW.

pieces of bone fitting one on the other, in form of a large shoemaker's pincers, with which it crushes the mussels, its proper food. The meat is better than rock fish, and it is without fins. We also took an unknown species of tortoise, as large as a goose, with a long neck, pointed head and eyes like a dove. The shell is hard only along the back and below in the middle, otherwise all around soft and liver-colored. At the creek here, we also noticed good stone coals.

July 27.—We proceeded over a long mountain to Tschachkat, four miles to where the path from Ligonier passes north, then four miles over a mountain to a creek coming from the south-west, and then one mile to a small run.

July 28.—Advanced eight miles over hill and valley to a bad spring. Here we were met by the Indians from Kas-kaskia enroute for Shemung.

July 29.—With sunrise were again on the way, as we desired today to strike the Ohio [i.e. Allegheny], and in the evening we arrived there without mishap. For three days the weather had been excessively warm, and we traveled over plains and highlands where the winds and fires had wrecked all the timber confusedly together, so that our progress was difficult thing. The land is mostly arable and much of it good. The bean-grass in many places, reached up to my horse back, and stood as thick as though it had been sowed. We came to eight miles above Kittanning, not far above Kawntschehannik, down a very precipitous mountain, (so much so that we were compelled to take off our shoes to effect the descent), to the Ohio, which here is not quite so broad as the Delaware at Easton, and scarce reached to our horses bellies, as we forded it.

July 30.—Some of the men began to make bark canoes, in order to proceed by water with heavy baggage, and with the aged and the sick, and also to look out supplies in and about Pittsburg. To those who had fallen back in the rear, we despatched horses. There was an abundance of mussels here, of which the Indians ate plentifully. As I had sore feet and was worn down, I determined to go on in advance.

July 31.—I set out on horseback with Peter and Jacob. (Up to this time, Roth and I, as well as others, had traveled on foot.) The path led about three miles down on the north bank of the river, then over a high mountain, and about eight miles from the Ohio, there were extensive plains, then succeeded good land with rich vegetation and flowers. The country reminded me of Carolina. Having ridden twenty-five miles, we lodged for the night with two Indians who were out hunting. One of them gave me a fine fawn. In the creek on which we camped were several salt springs.

August 1.—John Heckewelder met us with some Indians and two horses. The Indians turned back with us, and Heckewelder went on with some supplies to meet Rath and his division. We rode briskly the whole day, accomplishing forty miles, and late at night entered Langundostenik (Friedenstadt).*

*Roth's division arrived at the town August 5.

The beginning of this memorable journey was not auspicious, as the measles broke out. The epidemic proved a hindrance to our progress, as it attacked both adults and children. The former had to lay by at least two or three days, after being taken ill, and the children had to be carried. Matters, however, went so well with the sick as to be cause of surprise; all that they required was a drink made of the large sarsaparilla, which proved efficacious in bringing out the eruption. The milk supplied by our cows went far towards our daily support. Scarce a day passed but what we could distribute rations of meat. True, we heard complaints that there was no flour, nor corn, nor beans, but never did a soul go to bed hungry. None received injury to his person, although dangers were without number; especially on the West Branch, where there were rattlesnakes in abundance. I know that upwards of fifty were killed. That peace and unity should have prevailed was a matter of gratitude. It is true, at times, that there were indications of the old feeling of opposition inborn in the Mohicans towards the Delaware, yet no contention came to our notice. ETTWHIN.

It is better to do nothing than to do nothing well.

When money is tight it shouldn't be spent for fun.
