The large room over the shoe room in A. J. Griest's store has been handsomely furnished for a "roosting" place for Chas. McEwen, junior clerk, and he will hereafter take his meals with the proprietor.
The latest fad with the boys is practicing with boxing gloves, and several boys have already got it "in the neck."
On last Saturday about 4 o'clock, A. J. Griest received a telegram informing him of the death of his brother-in-law, William Irwin, which occurred in the city of Pittsburg on that day. For a number of years prior to his death he was superintendent of the postoffice building, in that city, and was at one time conductor on a Bald Eagle valley passenger train and is well and favorably known by many citizens of this county. His remains were brought to Tyrone and were interred in the cemetery at that place on Monday noon.
Miss Verna Moran, who has been in ill health all winter, is at present visiting her uncle, Dominis Peters, at Hecla Park.
On last Thursday morning our citizens were thrown in a fever of excitement by the report that a man had been killed during the night previous, by the cars at Underwood's crossing, a short distance above town, where the corpse was discovered by Geo. W. Morrison, one of the trackmen, in his early tour of inspection, which proved to be that of Lloyd W. Meyers, son of Aaron Meyers, of Julian. The facts, as they have been gleaned from the most reliable sources by foreman P. J. McDonnell, are as follows: On Wednesday the unfortunate young man, with two others, came in from Retort where they were employed in the fire brick works, arriving at Vail about 6 o'clock p. m.; at this point he boarded an east bound freight, thinking he would get home sooner, as his father was stricken with paralysis and was not expected to survive. When the train passed Julian it was running at full speed so that he could not or dared not risk jumping off. Before coming to Unionville the train slowed up for some purpose when he thought he could safely alight, but the speed was still too great for him, and when he took the fatal leap, his head struck the cattle guard at the aforementioned place, and threw him close to the track. This is evidenced from the fact that his left hand was nearly cut off by the cars; in other part of his body having come in contact with the car wheels, it is believed that he had fallen with his head on the iron cattle guard with such force as to cause his death. The county coroner, Dr. Huff, of Milesburg, was telephoned for, who arrived on the 10:11 train; but on examining the body, and surroundings, he concluded not to hold an inquest as not the slightest evidence of foul play existed. In his pocket were found nearly $10 in notes and silver. He was 17 years of age, of industrious habits and excellent character. The parents, brothers and sisters of the unfortunate young man have the sympathy of the entire community.

Good farm hands are worth all that may be paid them; as intelligence is of more value sometimes than the actual labor performed, for when an incompetent person is entrusted with particular work and mistakes are made the entire crop and season's preparation may be lost. A skillful farm hand may demand high wages, but his work will be worth more than that of an incompetent person.

Easter Millinery Opening

Was a grand success. Hundreds of people crowded our store. All were pleased, and it was the universal opinion of all that never had they seen such a handsome display of Millinery as we displayed this season. By adding NEW NOVELTIES from day to day we hope to still keep our customers in touch with the Eastern markets. All who have not yet seen this handsome display we still give them a cordial invitation to call.

Our new Spring line of

are also on display on our second floor. We claim to show more desirable patterns and a better selection of these goods than any store in Bellefonte.

A sample line of

Ladies' Suits and Skirts

sold at manufacturers' prices ought also to make this department boom for the next two weeks. All we ask is a call. We will please you.
