

HORROR AT BALLGROUND

Falling Balcony at Philadelphia Park Kills Nine and Injures 300.

AN AVALANCHE OF HUMANITY

Sudden Crash Let Fall Hundreds of Shrieking Persons into the Street, a Distance of 20 Feet - Disaster Caused by Rotten Timbers.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—Nine people were killed and 300 more or less seriously injured, a score perhaps fatally, by the collapse of a rotten balcony at the Philadelphia National League Base Ball Park.

Rotten timbers were responsible for the accident, which occurred during the second game between Boston and the Phillies. A drunken man's attack on a little girl started a fight in Fifteenth street, and the crowd in the ball park rushed to the overhanging balcony, all yelling excitedly.

The scene after the accident was fairly indescribable. It was a literal fact that blood fairly flowed in the gutter. Many of the injured fell from the top of the wall face downward, and it is thought that there were scores of fractured skulls.

Scores of homes are grief-stricken. Three hospitals are crowded with patients, about the bed-sides of whom are witnessed a countless number of pathetic scenes. It is said 13 of the patients are dying.

Joseph McDonough, who is at St. Luke's hospital with a fractured skull, became delirious, and springing from his bed threw a glass at Dr. C. W. Thomas. The patient then kicked a screen out of a window and attempted to jump to the street, but was held back by attendants.

Frederick Baumann has never regained consciousness since he was hurt. Attended by the young woman to whom he is engaged, he lies at the point of death in the Samaritan hospital.

Another man, similarly attended, is James Douglas McCauley, who was the first patient received at St. Luke's after the accident. He has a fractured skull, and is in a very critical condition. He is engaged to be married.

Edward Hedley, a member of the Vesper crew that captured the world's championship at Paris, may never pull an oar again. One shoulder was dislocated and one wrist was fractured during the accident and he is now at St. Joseph's hospital. He also suffered severe bruises on his knees and head.

WORKMEN BURIED ALIVE

One Dead and Three Fatally Injured by Cave-in at York, Pa.

York, Pa., Aug. 11.—By the caving in of an embankment of clay at the York brick works, one man was killed and three perhaps fatally injured. The dead man is Michael Galagher, injured internally and right leg broken. Died a few minutes after being extricated.

The injured are: William Powell, ribs crushed in, dying; Curtis Row, left arm and leg broken, and Max Schierer, internal injuries and many cuts. The men were undermining the embankment, when it broke without the slightest warning. Tons of clay rolled down upon them in one obliterating sheet before they could even cry for help.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Gentleman Boar

There was once a wild boar who was dissatisfied with himself because the people so often mistook him for a pig. "I am not a pig, though I do look like one a little bit," he said to himself, "and I do not want people to think that I am a pig. But what am I to do? I can't run around all the time crying, 'I'm no pig; I'm a boar!'"

So away he went to a hat store and bought himself a black hat, and at the tobacco shop he bought a pipe and a bag of tobacco. He put on his hat, and he stuck the pipe in his mouth, and just as proud as a peacock, he sat down on a corner and waited for people to come along and admire him.

But they came along and admire him. "What on earth is that thing?" they asked as they passed. And, strange to say, nobody answered that that was a gentleman. Most of them said that he was a hog, and the others said he had no sense. So, after awhile, Mr. Wild Boar's grin turned to a pout, and finally he grew as mad as ever he could get.

But the worst came when the little animals gathered at a safe distance and laughed at him and threw stones over his way. The boar could endure it no longer. He slipped away into the woods, threw his tobacco in the creek and smashed his pipe into a thousand tiny pieces on a great big stone. Then he put a heavy stone in his hat and sank it to the bottom of the spring.

"I'll never try such a foolish trick as that again," he wisely said. Moral—Fine clothes and tobacco smoke don't make the gentleman.—Chicago Tribune.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Rooster's Golf Ball

Roosters are, as a rule, very sensible fellows, but they sometimes make mistakes just as we all do. Now, John Rooster was considered a real smart young man, and all the little chickens had him pointed out to them as an excellent model for them to mold their lives by. But John was not without error.

Among other things, he was very fond of golf, a game all of you young folks have heard of, but I doubt if many of you have played.

On one certain day not long ago he was unlucky enough to lose all his golf balls by driving them into a wide swamp, from which it was impossible for him to recover them without getting stuck in the mire himself.

So John started for his home feeling rather bad that his sport had been interrupted in this manner. On the way he came to a little clump of bushes, and, peering down behind it, he saw a nice white egg.

"Isn't that a pretty egg?" John asked himself. "Why should that not make a good golf ball?"

The idea seemed to him to be a good one, so he took the egg out of the bushes and put it on a little knoll and aimed his golf stick at it. Then he brought the stick down with a crash, and of course you know what happened. The eggshell was broken into a thousand pieces and the contents were spilled all over the ground.

While John was gazing sorrowfully at the result of his foolishness along came a half dozen motherly old hens.

"What have you done?" they cried in amazement. "Have you dared to break one of our beautiful eggs and waste it in this manner?"

And, without waiting for an answer, they pitched into him and pecked and pecked him until he had hardly a feather left.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

FROM NORTH DAKOTA.

EDITOR OF DEMOCRAT:—

Dear Sir: Some months ago I wrote to you and tried to describe the "Great Bobbels" country, and thought I would write again and tell you what we are doing at present. Well we haven't much to do but watch the crops grow. I think this has been a favored section compared with other parts of the north and west. We have not had any cyclones or heavy rains yet this year. It seems that we get just enough rain to keep everything on the move. Unless something happens this will be another "Banner" year for North Dakota. I never saw nicer wheat, oats and flax than is now maturing here. "Spuds," or potatoes are doing finely too. Everybody seems happy and contented and waiting for the threshing season. Everything demands good prices.

Two years ago when I came I thought I was one of the last to come here, but I find that people are coming into this state from all parts of U. S., and many foreigners are rushing in for land.

There's a piece written by a Penna. Dutchman, if you wish to publish it you are free to do so.

Hoping that you and all "good" readers of the Centre Democrat are progressing and that I may see a lot of them coming west, I remain,

P. E. MERSINGER, Bobbels, N. Dakota.

A NORTH DAKOTA CLAIM. The mosquitoes buzz most loudly through all the lonesome night, Song shadows by the by the crops. The weeds grow in abundance, And the bushes just the same; On the land where we are living— On a North Dakota claim.

But land is booming in value all the time; And crops grow in abundance In this "semifrigid" clime. Wheat, oats and barley are plentiful you see, And spuds will grow on the prairie, As sure as can be.

And flax, hay and millet, And other grains to name; If one will only plant them, On a North Dakota claim.

The stock is something awful, The lot one passes by, The quality will improve, As time goes teetering by, And herds as good as any, Will soon be known to fame, Bud on the farms and ranges Of a North Dakota claim.

Hip! Ho! for North Dakota! Its wheat and other grain, Its busy hustling farmers, No matter where they came, They're planning for improvement From early morn till night, And to make this state known everywhere

Will make a hard, hard fight, And then will this state have her due need of fame, And we all will be in it, On a North Dakota claim.—P. E. M.

If you would get up with the lark go to bed without one.

THE SEASON. This was not a great season for some "pleasers." As a trout season it was not a success anywhere. As a season for snake stories it was under the average. As a favorable season for peaches it is not. For bathing it has been too cool most of the time. For the Wall street stock gamblers it has been disastrous and knocked the tonyness of the "400" that revel in richness at Newport, into a complete cocked hat, and to skedaddling from that high-toned place, on fortunes pinched out of the people. For disasters, losses in life and property, it was simply appalling, and so on. But to view the bright side, blackberries and huckleberries are plenty, and chestnuts will be too.
