High Valley.

There is but one in our valley that can say, "I have sowed."

John Stover called to see the scribe on Thursday to look at his cattle; he is quite active as old a man as he is, it seems that Mr. Stover has a good many days ahead yet; he was pleased with his cattle and acknowledged that the scribe is a gentleman; on Friday he sent his son-in-law to fetch one but might get on him and was compelled to stay and talk to the gaswell till morning.

This I say on my own responsibility: I have been among all kinds of people, but Saturday, as I was at East end helping to thrash seed grain, there heard the most profane language by a son talk to his father, I ever heard in all the days of my life, calling him the biggest liar in the country; the old man took it all like a lamb, and same young gentleman must depend on the old man's table; I would advise such gentlemen not to fool around my shanty, for I think a man that is not able to do a day's work, should not disgrace himself by such transgressing style.

A rumor that a debate will be booked to take place in the near future at the office of C. A. Weaver, at Coburn; the question will be, is a man liable to pay another man's damage done by his cattle; as the man that is to have the debate can show that he has no cattle, as likely as not the case may go over the mountain for justice.

Here is an invitation to all poor men that have a cow, to come and pasture on my land, and as far as damage is concerned on my land is paid, as I have my fence in such a condition that I have no trouble.

We hear no more of the Blue Rock scribe; I will pass the place to-day, and stop off to see what is wrong.

The High valley scribe bought a horse which he will donate to the Georgetown scribe after seeing for a mate to his stepper.

By all appearance the High valley school will begin Monday with one scholar and the teacher.

Next the hunting or game season will be open; notice: as far as the scribe's land goes, all are welcome to hunt in week days, but on Sunday hunting is prohibited.

KELLER'S BUSINESS COLLEGE,
2 Lewisburg, Pa.

Selling Booze.

On Saturday Chas. Hickie, of Eggleville, was before Justice Keichline to answer the charge of selling booze in that community without license. A number of witnesses were summoned, and put up a pretty stiff case against him, and it was sufficient to warrant the Justice in holding the man over to have the matter disposed of in next session of Court. For some years there has been continual complaint of numerous parties in that section dealing in all kinds of liquors, and they were not very particular in keeping the matter quiet either. When we have license laws and dealers are expected to pay a good sum for the privilege, parties who undertake to sell without authority, do it deliberately, and deserve the full extent of the law. That kind of business should not go in Centre county and will not go, either, if it comes before our court in the proper channel; therefore there should be no compromise, or dickerling to hush the matter up.

Don't try to beat a bad egg.

Expensive Squirrels.

Last Saturday, Dell Confer, of Howard, was given a hearing before Justice Keichline on the charge of shooting squirrels out of season. He plead guilty to the charge and his costs and fine amounted to over $17, which he will pay in preference to going to the cooler. That makes game rather expensive and takes all fun out of the shooting, as well as the flavor in eating. Other parties in this county, who are in the habit of breaking the game laws, can take a nice pointer from this that the game warden will follow up all violators that come to his notice. Rightnow is simply doing his duty, and everybody gives him credit for his work in this direction.

Take VIN-TE-NA and the good effect will be immediate. You will get strong, you will feel bright, fresh and active, you will feel new, rich blood coursing through your veins. VIN-TE-NA will act like magic, will put new life in you. If not benefited money refunded. All druggists.
