Lawson Fighting Oil Trust.

Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston copper speculator, declares that he is in a fight to the finish with the Standard Oil company in behalf of the public. Speaking as one who has been on the Inside of the great trust and knows its strength as well as its weakness, big transactions between him and Mr. Rogers, in which millions were netted without a written contract, Mr. Lawson said it was a matter of mutual safety, as the transaction would not stand the light of day. He frankly admits that all such transactions are illegal. He says it is a process of taking money away from the people without their knowing it and that this, boiled down, means "modern finance."
